BOY-ED MANAGED SHIP PLOT DETAILS

Expenditures as Small as $1,000 to Aid German Navy Were Referred to His Office.

DUMMIES FOR ALL WORK

North German Lloyd Officials and Others Likely to be Included in Prosecution.

BUENZ GERMANY'S AGENT

Boy-Ed Can Be Reached Only If He Took Part in Procuring False Papers for Vessels.

Officials of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company, the Captain of at least one steamship accused of leaving an American port with false papers to supply German warships at sea, and other persons may be brought to trial with Dr. Karl Buenz and his associates, according to statements made by Assistant United States District Attorney Roger B. Wood yesterday at the trial of Dr. Buenz and others of the Hamburg-American Line in the United States District Court on charges of conspiring to defraud the United States.

The indictment against Dr. Buenz and the others now on trial also includes "other conspirators" unknown to the Grand Jury. The North German Lloyd, which was shown on Tuesday to have received large sums from Captain Boy-Ed, was connected yesterday with the details of preparing the supply ships.

Captain Boy-Ed, who is immune from prosecution because of his diplomatic office, was shown yesterday to have been in immediate touch with the practical details of the German enterprise. While Tuesday's testimony showed him chiefly as disburser of $750,000, which a German exporter of this city found to his astonishment had been placed to his account by the Deutsche Bank of Berlin, the evidence yesterday revealed the Captain of one of the supply ships asking that his expenditure of $1,000 in connection with a voyage in the interests of the German Navy be communicated to Room 801 at 11 Broadway, which is Captain Boy-Ed's New York office. Another document was a telegram addressed in care of Captain Boy-Ed's office to Captain Hans Suhren, who commanded the Marina Quesada, which is alleged to have left Newport News, Va., with false papers to supply German ships.

Dummies Extensively Used.

While the testimony so far has pointed to Room 801 at 11 Broadway as the true centre of the admitted operations of the German auxiliary naval service in the Western Hemisphere, evidence brought out yesterday in detail the extensive use of dummies in connection with the German naval operations here.

In the hiring of the Thor, Sommerstad, and Unita, it was shown that two subcharterers were interposed between the Hamburg-American Line and the owners of the vessels. Coal mining companies and other firms and individuals, according to witnesses for the Government, obliged the Hamburg-American Line by substituting themselves for the Hamburg-American Line as the shippers in the official papers. Supplies for the ships, which were organized into what was virtually a branch of the German navy, were sent through several hands, according to witnesses, before they reached the ships, so as to make it difficult to trace them back to the Hamburg-American Line.

All this elaborate machinery, however, gave little aid to the German cause, according to the defense, which stated in a concession that twelve ships were employed in the enterprise by the Hamburg-American Line, at a cost of $1,419,394.49, and only one—the Berwind—succeeded in reaching a German warship. It carried coal, provisions, and engine room supplies worth $20,290.89, so that it cost Germany $70 for every dollar's worth of good it succeeded in doing the Germany navy.

Buenz Germany's Representative.

Some interesting facts in the career of Dr. Buenz, the leading figure in the trial, were brought out on the witness stand by Vice Director William G. Sickels of the Hamburg-American Line. He said that Dr. Buenz had been in the shipping business for only three years.

Dr. Buenz is more than 70 years old, was formerly the German Consul-General in this city and has been most of his life in the German Government service. Three years ago he was made the titular head in this country of the Hamburg-American Line, which is closely connected with the German Government and has Kaiser Wilhelm among its large stockholders.

Dr. Buenz has had little to do with the practical work of the company before the outbreak of the war, but matters in connection with the handling of the German naval supply service were handled for the line by him, according to Vice Director Sickels. Mr. Sickels evaded questions which were intended to show that long before the war the Hamburg-American Line had perfected the details for aiding the German fleet in case of war.

One indication that the Hamburg-American Line was at work on plans to help the German Navy was the testimony of Frederick E. Hasler of the Inter-American Steamship Company that the Gans Steamship Line, which acted for the Hamburg-American, had begun negotiations with him for subchartering the Thor and other steamships in the latter part of July, 1914, after the Austro-Hungarian demands on Serbia, but before any nation had declared war.

FOUR POWERS POOL MUNITIONS INTERESTS

Russia, France, Italy, and Great Britain Form a Permanent Organization.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 25.—Albert Thomas, the French Munitions Minister, has been in London this week attending conferences at the British Ministry of Munitions, at which civil and military representatives of Russia, France, Italy, and Great Britain were present.

M. Thomas, in a statement given out for publication, lays great stress on the presence of the Russian and Italian representatives at the conference, and announces that it has been unanimously decided to set up a permanent organization for the conduct of the munitions business of the Allies. A permanent office has been established, and rules have been drawn up for the purpose of dealing with the orders given by one Entente State to another.

M. Thomas added that it was no longer a case of promises for the future, but that there would be actual achievement in the ceaseless production of munitions, and that this would result in victory.

SOUVENIRS EXPLODE IN DR. RYAN'S BAGGAGE

American Red Cross Chief from Serbia Loses Valuable Property in Budapest.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 25.—It is reported from Budapest that, on Nov. 13, an American Red Cross detachment from Serbia arrived at the eastern station on its way back to America. The detachment was headed by Dr. Ryan.

As the passengers were leaving the train a terrific explosion occurred in one of the carriages. Inquiry showed that the explosion was caused by Serbian ammunition which Dr. Ryan was taking with him to America as a souvenir. Dr. Ryan and his companions, two other medical men and two nurses, had eighteen pieces of luggage, which was all carefully searched. The police later stated that, as the explosion was accidental, no further proceedings would be taken against the doctor.

Dr. Ryan said the explosion caused the destruction of interesting battle photographs and medical instruments. The trunk in which the explosive material was carried also contained interesting letters, among them one from the King of Serbia, conferring upon Dr. Ryan the Order of St. Save in recognition of his services.

SHAW URGES A LEAGUE OF WHITE CIVILIZATION

Also Suggests Possibility of a German-American Combination Against England.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A league of Western civilization as a preventive against future war was the suggestion thrown out by George Bernard Shaw in an address delivered last night. He pictured a combination of white civilization from the Rockies to the Carpathians, organized on a democratic basis. In this league he wished to see America, France, England, and Germany, who would be joined for their own protection by Belgium and the Scandinavian states. England was showing Germany, he said, that she had better be England's friend than her enemy.

"I do not believe," he said, "that there can be any peace in the world until there is peace between England, France, and Germany."

If England defeated Germany decisively, he said, the latter might try to seek a combination with the United States. She might say to America: "We have been beaten by the British. This terrible naval power we have been unable to resist. You see how we are penned in; you are in the same position. Had you not better form a combination with us?" Great Britain, he said, might drive Germany and America into each other's arms by carrying her victory too far. War, he continued, was a fundamental fault of the Democrats and Socialists of this country, and the democracy must be far more active in the future.

FRANCE GIVES MEDAL TO MRS. H. P. WHITNEY

Ambassador Jusserand Will Present Gold Emblems to Three American Women.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—It was announced today that the Foreign Office gold medal had been bestowed upon Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, founder of the hospital for the wounded at Juilly, and that it had been dispatched to the United States and would be presented to her by Ambassador Jusserand.

The similar medal, which President Poincaré directed should be presented to Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt for her work in the American Ambulance, is now on the way to the United States for presentation by M. Jusserand.

A like medal for Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, wife of the Secretary of the American Embassy in Paris, for her organization for the care of orphans, also is on the way to America for presentation by the Ambassador.

GLADYS VANDERBILT MOTHERS 300 ORPHANS

Has Turned Szechenyi Palace in Budapest Into a Popular Asylum.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 25.—Countess Szechenyi, formerly Gladys Vanderbilt, according to advices from Budapest, turned her palace on Andrassy Street into an orphanage, and there are now harbored 300 children under 10 years old whose fathers have been killed in the war. The orphans over 6 years of age go to school daily under charge of a governess and those under 6 receive kindergarten instruction from a male teacher.

A visit to the Szechenyi palace has become one of the popular features at Budapest, and the street often is filled with people looking on at the orphans playing in the gardens. Whenever the Countess appears the children surround her, calling her "Mother Gladys," and the crowds outside cheer.

FORD HIRES LINER IN PEACE CRUSADE

His Party to Sail on the Oscar II. on Dec. 4 and "End War Before Christmas."

'CEASE FIRING,' HIS SLOGAN

Expects Socialists in Trenches to Aid Pilgrims, Whose Voyage Will Cost $32,000.

DETAILS STILL A BIT HAZY

Wanamaker, Announced as Going, Says He Never Heard of Plan—Edison to Stay Here.

Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, announced yesterday at the Biltmore that he had chartered the Scandinavian-American liner Oscar II., and was going to start in her for Europe on Dec. 4 with an expeditionary force of pacifists, with himself as Grand Marshal, to stop the war.

"The time has come to say, 'Cease firing,'" he said. "We are going to try to get the boys out of their trenches and back to their homes by Christmas Day. I want to do the greatest good to the greatest number, and certainly getting the men out of the trenches will be accomplishing that."

Mr. Ford did not tell how he was going to stop the war, except that the soldiers were getting tired, and that the Socialists and the Woman's Peace Party probably would co-operate with his forces. His work, he said, would begin with the spreading by wireless of peace messages while the Oscar II. was still on the ocean.

The officials of the Scandinavian-American Line at first, it seems, thought that they were being fooled when they heard that somebody wanted to buy up the entire passenger capacity of the Oscar II. for the regular trip out of New York on Dec. 4. But Mr. Ford explained that he wanted to make sure that there would not be any adverse influences or disturbing elements on his boat, and that consequently he would want the entire ship—125 first cabin, 125 second, and 450 third cabin accommodations. If the trip is made the second cabin will be turned into first-class accommodations.

Edison Says He Can't Go.

Among the pacifist leaders whom Mr. Ford said he had invited to go with him on his errand of mercy were Jane Addams, Ida M. Tarbell, and John Wanamaker. Thomas A. Edison, said Mr. Ford, had also been invited, and, indeed, the manufacturer was more anxious to have him go than to have almost anybody else. Mr. Ford was even going to Orange at the earliest possible moment, he said, to try to change Mr. Edison's view that it would be impossible for him to attend.

These announcements were made yesterday, and it was said that Miss Tarbell and Miss Addams would probably go, and that Mr. Wanamaker had accepted. But in Philadelphia last night Mr. Wanamaker, refusing to see reporters, sent word through a butler that he never had heard of the excursion. Mr. Edison also said that he had heard nothing from Mr. Ford, and persons in his confidence asserted that so much work had piled up during his long vacation at the San Francisco fair that he would hardly be able to sail in Mr. Ford's argosy.

There was another hitch, too, last night when officials of the Scandinavian-American Line announced that, while the New York office had agreed with Mr. Ford on the terms for the charter, the home office in Copenhagen, whose consent would be necessary for any such action, had not replied to the cabled request for the charter. So it is not yet certain that the new ark which is to help the warring nations to come in out of the rain will be available.

Mr. Ford said that he had got the idea of stopping the war and "calling the neutral conference that everybody has been calling for the last fourteen months" almost overnight. When it occurred to him he made a hasty trip to Washington and talked to President Wilson and to Mgr. Bonzano, the Apostolic Delegate. He refused to say whether the plan had the backing of the Administration or what was the substance of his conversation with the President and Mgr. Bonzano. But on Tuesday night he hurried from Washington to New York, held a conference at 11 P. M. at the Hotel McAlpin with officials of the Scandinavian-American Line and, after an hour or so of discussion, agreed to the estimate which they made for the cost of chartering the steamer.

$32,000 for the Liner.

It is understood that the figure mentioned was nearly $32,000, including the $5 a head war tax for the 200 or more passengers expected.

Tomorrow Mr. Ford is going to Baltimore to talk to Cardinal Gibbons about his plan. Meanwhile, to show that his absence from the country was not going to result in any weakening of his campaign against preparedness, he announced that he had "just this minute" given $20,000 to Oswald Garrison Villard to open a pacifism publicity bureau in Washington, "to attend to preparedness and to find out what Congressmen want it and why."

Mr. Ford wouldn't say where he was going to land, except that it would be somewhere in a disinterested neutral country. It was said that negotiations for a suitable meeting place of the get-together conference were on the way, and that it might take place at the headquarters in Amsterdam of the Woman's Peace Party.

The manufacturer explained his plans with the assistance of William P. Lochner of Chicago, Secretary of the Chicago Peace Society and the National Peace Federation, who went abroad with the American delegates to the Woman's Peace Convention; Oswald Garrison Villard, Miss Addams, and Miss Tarbell.

"I intend to try to crush militarism," he said. "I am eager to go, and I would go even if I knew that the vessel might be torpedoed outside the Hook. I do not consider danger. I don't think I have never been afraid. I am for this thing because it is right, and I am going to give my last cent to carry it through. The Oscar II. will be a 'construction ship' rather than a peace

Pope Cancels Invitations to Hartmann and Mercier to Confer with Him on Peace

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 24, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—The reason for the unexpected postponement of Cardinal Mercier's visit to Rome, where he has been summoned by the Pope, is withheld. Though the visit was semi-officially announced a week ago as imminent, it is doubted now whether it will take place at all. It has probably been countermanded by the Pope.

A member of the Papal entourage whom I asked for an explanation informed me that when the Pope summoned Cardinal Mercier to Rome, Cardinal Hartmann, Archbishop of Cologne, also notified the Pope of his intention of coming to Rome with the double object of meeting Cardinal Mercier and attending the forthcoming Consistory.

The Pope dissuaded the German Cardinal from making his proposed visit, which he considered inexpedient, since, although war had not yet been declared between Italy and Germany, a notification of a state of war between the two countries might occur at any moment. Cardinal Hartmann unwillingly agreed to abandon his visit.

Until that time the German authorities in Belgium had not opposed Cardinal Mercier's visit to Rome, but difficulties regarding his journey unexpectedly increased when Cardinal Hartmann's visit was abandoned. Thus the Pope was compelled to countermand Cardinal Mercier's visit.

ZURICH, Nov. 24, (via London.)—Reports of a movement for peace were revived today by a conference here of Prince von Bülow, former German Chancellor, with the Cardinal Archbishop of Cologne and Dr. von Muhlberg, Prussian Minister to the Vatican. Prince von Bülow, whose presence in Switzerland for several weeks has given rise to various peace rumors, arrived in Zurich from Lucerne this morning. The conference is regarded as of great importance, in view of the fact that the Cardinal is on his way to Rome to attend the forthcoming conclave of the College of Cardinals.

A Rome dispatch of Nov. 17 said Cardinal Hartmann was soon to arrive there, and that he was the bearer of important communications. It was believed that his visit might be an indication of a definite move toward peace.

BURR SAYS MITCHEL AIDED N. Y. CENTRAL

Tells Thompson Committee He Delayed Eleventh Avenue Track Removal.

MAYOR, EXCITED, REPLIES

Ill, in Hospital, He Says Burr Was Dismissed for Not Hastening Track Removal.

The Thompson Legislative Committee took a sudden swerve yesterday from its regular investigation of the affairs of the Public Service Commission, and its hearing witnessed an attempt to involve Mayor Mitchel in the failure to remove the tracks along Eleventh Avenue by the New York Central Railroad Company.

After ex-Corporation Counsel Polk had answered questions, evidently with great unwillingness, as to whether dissatisfaction with the work of Assistant Corporation Counsel William P. Burr had caused the latter's removal from office in July, 1914, and had mentioned the Eleventh Avenue tracks case in this connection, Mr. Burr, taking the stand, charged the Mayor with favoring the railroad company and with delaying proceedings for the removal of the tracks.

When the Mayor, who is recovering from an operation for appendicitis at Roosevelt Hospital, learned of Mr. Burr's testimony he became so excited that the nurses had difficulty in restraining him. He sent for the reporters and insisted upon dictating a statement giving his side of the affair. It was finally decided to have Mr. Polk, who is now counselor to the State Department at Washington make the explanation on behalf of the Mayor.

Both the Mayor and Mr. Polk denied the truth of Mr. Burr's assertion and said that just the opposite was true, that Mr. Burr was dismissed because he was not active enough in forcing the railroad company to get rid of its tracks.

Mayor's Name Brought In.

The Mayor's name was brought up when Mr. Polk was testifying before the committee at 165 Broadway regarding the order of the Public Service Commission in July, 1914, permitting the Edison Electric Illuminating Company to purchase the outstanding 122 shares of stock of the Amsterdam Electric Light, Heat, and Power Company. Ex-Commissioner Milo R. Maltbie had testified that he voted for the purchase of stock after Mr. Polk, then Corporation Counsel, had advised him that the sale of stock would not constitute a merger of the two companies and would not affect the city's action regarding the validity of the electric company's franchise, then pending before Referee De Lancey Nicoll. Mr. Burr had charge of this case up to the time of his dismissal.

Merton E. Lewis, counsel to the committee, wanted to know why Mr. Burr had been dismissed.

"You said Mr. Burr's resignation was necessary?" said Mr. Lewis.

"Well, I meant desirable," replied Mr. Polk. "But I think we are getting a little off the line of your investigation. Of course, I will answer any question you may ask me."

"Was it because of any failure on Mr. Burr's part to properly represent the city's interests that he was asked to resign?" persisted Mr. Lewis.

Mr. Polk was plainly unwilling to go into the causes that led up to the requested resignation. He was asked if it was because Mr. Burr had supported Judge McCall in the Mayoralty campaign, and he replied sharply in the negative. Asked if the Mayor was dissatisfied with Mr. Burr's line of work, Mr. Polk suddenly replied that it was the result of a policy determined upon by Mayor Mitchel in connection with the Franchise Bureau, of which Mr. Burr was in charge.

"It involved the New York Central Railroad," said Mr. Polk. "The Eleventh Avenue tracks were involved. That was the case in which Mayor Mitchel was interested."

"Did Mr. Burr represent the city in that case?" asked Mr. Lewis.

"Yes," replied the witness.

"Was the Mayor dissatisfied with Mr. Burr?"

"Yes."

"Did he give his reasons?"

Mr. Polk said as he recalled it, the dismissal was asked for on the ground that Mr. Burr was not active enough in getting the tracks removed to suit the Mayor.

Mr. Burr was sitting just across the table from Mr. Polk, and his eyes blazed with anger. A few minutes later he was allowed to take the stand.

Burr Accuses Mayor.

"Now I am glad to know why the Mayor removed me," he began. "This is one of the proudest moments of my life, because the work which did not please the Mayor was the best I ever did in all the years of my service to the city. I shall always point to it with pride. I always felt a belief that I would wear Mayor Mitchel's dismissal as a badge of honor and now I am certain of this, having heard Mr. Polk's reason for my dismissal."

Mr. Burr recited at length the long litigation to get the New York Central tracks off Eleventh Avenue through the courts and the Legislature, and he continued:

"The Legislature in 1911 passed an act authorizing an agreement between the city and the railroad company for the purpose of removing the tracks at the expense of the railroad. Mr. Mitchel then was President of the Board of

NEW-BORN CRIPPLE TO BE LEFT TO DIE

Dr. L. Emmett Holt Vetoes Operation, Doubting It Would Prolong Life.

INFANT'S FAMILY ASSENTS

J. E. Roberts Accepts Doctor's Verdict on His Child—Mother, Ill, Is Not Told.

The hopelessly deformed daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Roberts of 159 East Seventy-second Street, who was born on Tuesday night, will be permitted to die a natural death, even though an operation might prolong her life. That "nature should be allowed to take its course" was decided late yesterday afternoon by Dr. L. Emmett Holt of 14 West Fifty-fifth Street, specialist in obstetrics and diseases of children. His opinion agreed with that of the baby's father and of her grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Branley. The mother, whose condition is still critical, has been kept in ignorance of the fate of her child.

Dr. Holt, by his decision, seems to have agreed with the action of Dr. Harry J. Haiselden of Chicago, who recently refused to perform an operation in the desperate hope of saving the life of the deformed Bollinger baby. But Dr. Holt apparently has gone even further than Dr. Haiselden, for the Bollinger baby was mentally as well as physically incapacitated for life, while the surgeons who have examined the Roberts child believe she is mentally sound.

Dr. Holt's decision is not based entirely on unwillingness to prolong the existence of a terribly misshapen baby, for he does not believe that the operation would save the child's life.

Dr. Maurice Rosenberg of 1,887 Seventh Avenue, another obstetrical specialist in the case, disagreed with Dr. Holt, saying that, in his opinion, every possible means of prolonging the life of the baby should be used. He was in conference with Dr. Holt in the afternoon and urged an immediate operation, but he was overruled by Dr. Holt and the baby's father and grandmother, who for the second time refused to give their consent. Dr. Rosenberg left the conference dissatisfied.

Child Revived at Birth.

"I was called into the case on Tuesday night before the birth of the child," Dr. Rosenberg said last night, "by Dr. Julius Goldsmith, of 2 West 115th Street, the Roberts' family physician, who advised me that he anticipated an unusually difficult birth. The child was practically dead when born and doubtless would have expired within a few minutes had I not resolved to give it life, if possible. After working on it for an hour and a half, I succeeded in stirring the spark of life.

"I realized at once that the duration of the life was only a question of time, unless an operation was performed almost immediately. While the child's head and shoulders seemed normal, it was paralyzed in both legs and in the lower part of the body. This was due to the fact that the spinal cord protruded from the back, being protected from the air by only a thin, transparent membrane, which, of course, afforded no permanent protection at all. In most children suffering from more or less similar deformity, the spinal cord is covered by strong, healthy skin, so the children live and, if necessary, an operation can be performed later in life, but in the case of the Roberts baby an immediate operation is necessary if the child is to live more than a few days.

"I told the father and grandmother that the baby must be hurried to a hospital, and, although Dr. Goldsmith agreed with me about the necessity for an operation, Mr. Roberts and his mother-in-law at once objected. They had read in the papers of the Bollinger baby in Chicago and said that they agreed with Dr. Haiselden that science should not be employed to prolong the life of a monstrosity. Dr. Goldsmith and I succeeded, however, in obtaining permission to remove the child to the Babies' Hospital, at Lexington Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, where a more detailed examination could be made."

Dr. Rosenberg called Dr. Holt into conference, and the two examined the child at the hospital in the afternoon. Mr. Roberts consented to abide by the decision of the surgeons, saying that he no longer would oppose the operation if they deemed it advisable. The conference lasted more than an hour, and in it, both surgeons agreed that, whether the child lived or not, it would be helplessly deformed. Dr. Rosenberg admitted that an operation could do nothing more than prolong life. It could not correct the deformity, which, in addition to the hump on the back and paralysis of the lower part of the body, included malformation of the feet, legs and other members.

Only the Body Defective.

Dr. Goldsmith concurred in Dr. Rosenberg's opinion.

"I agree with Dr. Haiselden of Chicago," he said, "that, where a child is hopelessly affected in mind as well as in body, there is an open question of whether a surgeon should attempt to prolong life by an operation; but in the case of the Roberts baby, where the deformity is limited to the body, I do not think there is a question."

Dr. Goldsmith, who is attending the mother, said she was resting quietly and probably would recover, but that at

Rumania Impressed by Czar's Big Balkan Army; Relations Better Than Ever, Bratiano Says

GENEVA, Nov. 24, (via Paris.)—M. Bratiano, the Rumanian Premier, is quoted by the Bucharest correspondent of the Geneva Tribune as saying in a conversation regarding the relations between Rumania and Russia: "They are better than ever."

The same correspondent quotes Take Jonescu, former member of the Rumanian Cabinet and leader of the Liberal Party in Rumania, as expressing the belief that the Rumanian Government "is desirous of following the national policy, and soon will intervene in the war on the side of the Entente powers."

M. Jonescu, according to the dispatch, also said he had learned from Petrograd that a strong Russian force was ready near the Rumanian frontier to aid Rumania against Austria and Bulgaria.

BRITISH FALL BACK WHEN NEAR BAGDAD

LOSE 2,000 MEN IN FIGHT

But Capture 800 Turks and a Large Quantity of Arms and Equipment at Ctesiphon.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Following the capture of Ctesiphon, eighteen miles from Bagdad, and the repulse of a Turkish counterattack, British forces under General Townshend were compelled to retire three or four miles in order to obtain water, according to an official communication issued tonight.

The British losses in the fighting for Zeur, which also was taken, and Ctesiphon are calculated at 2,000 men killed or wounded.

The official bulletin says:

> After a night march from Zeur, which had been occupied on the 19th, General Townshend's division attacked the Turkish position at Ctesiphon, eighteen miles from Bagdad, on the 22d.
> After severe fighting all day the position was captured, together with about 800 prisoners and large quantities of arms and equipment, our own losses being calculated at 2,000 killed or wounded.
> General Townshend's force and the general headquarters bivouacked in the captured position that night. On the night of the 23d-24th heavy counterattacks by the Turks were successfully repulsed, but on the 24th want of water necessitated the retirement of our forces to the river three or four miles below the captured position.

In a speech on Nov. 4 Premier Asquith announced: "General Sir John Nixon's force is within measurable distance of Bagdad."

Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of State for India, sain in the House of Commons on Sept. 29 that General Nixon, with the main column, had just defeated the Turkish regulars and their Arab auxiliaries at Kut-el-Amasa, on the Tigris, ninety miles southeast of Bagdad, while General George Gorringe with another column was on the Euphrates, seventy-five miles southeast of Bagdad, where he had fought the battle of Nasiriyeh on July 1, and since then had been waiting for Nixon to advance.

CONSUL TAKEN TO MOUNTAINS.

Petrograd Gets News of Britons Captured by Persian Rebels.

PETROGRAD (via London,) Nov. 24.—A dispatch received from Teheran says:

"Communication with Kum was restored yesterday. Major Helstroem, instructor of the gendarmerie which was responsible for the bloodshed at Hamadan, has resigned. He explains that the conduct of the gendarmerie was due to false news received of anarchy at Teheran, which was reported to have been taken and burned by the Russians, and of fighting between Russians and the gendarmerie and Persian cossacks, and also to the failure of telegraphic communication with Teheran, declaring that they acted under orders from Teheran issued owing to a reported outbreak of war between Persia and Great Britain and Russia.

"Major W. T. T. O'Connor, the British Consul at Shiraz, and five other Englishmen and ten sepoys have been taken by the gendarmerie into the mountains.

"The Turks and Germans are continuing their intrigues, announcing the departure of the Shah with the diplomats of the central powers from Teheran."

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The Foreign Office, in a statement issued today on the subject of the arrest of the British Consul and others at Shiraz, Persia, by revolting gendermerie acting without the knowledge of the Persian Government, says the prisoners have now been removed to the neighborhood of Ahram, where "they are apparently in charge of Herr Wassmuss."

"The gendarmerie in Northern Persia are in open revolt under their Swedish officers," the statement adds. "They hold Kum in the interest of the Germans."

After saying that further outrages have been committed by these gendarmerie and giving instances, the statement concludes:

"These acts of rapine and outrage were done in defiance of the Persian Government, and are instances of the way in which German agents instigate violence or criminal action in neutral countries."

TEHERAN, Thursday, Nov. 25, (via London.)—The Persian Government in official notes has informed the British and Russian Ministers that the projected transfer of the capital has been abandoned owing to the restoration of friendly relations between Russia and Persia.

SERB ARMY GONE, BOYADJIEFF SAYS

Bulgar Chief Tells Correspondent Its Scattered Remnants Are Surrendering.

SURE FEW CAN GET AWAY

Teutons and Bulgars Next to Engage "the Kaffirs and Their Allies" in South.

By MARIO PASSARGE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The Vossiche Zeitung Dispatches.

NISH, Nov. 21, (via Berlin.)—I fought three days and nights on the railroad and through mud, cloudburst, and snowstorm to reach Nish. The railroad now runs from Sofia to Pirot. After that you have to trust yourself to horse or wagon.

In the house of the Serbian citizen, Popovitsch, in Nish, which after the wholesale evacuation of Belgrade became King Peter's private lodgings, General Boyadjieff, the Bulgarian Commander in Chief, received me. He is in the early fifties, with black, carefully combed hair, black mustache, and pointed beard. Like many Bulgar staff officers, the General attended the War Academy at Turin, and speaks fluent Italian. He said:

"There is not much left of the Serb Army, and what is left can hardly escape any more. Look here at the map. The Serbs today have only the road to Montenegro between Novi Bazar and Pristina open. They are almost entirely surrounded by the Germans, Austro-Hungarians, and us. Our operations are now progressing quite without hindrance."

"Does your Excellency believe the Serbs will succeed in slipping through this last open door?" I asked.

"One can say today," the General answered, "that the Serb Army has ceased to exist as such. We have already taken 150 cannon away from them, and many were buried in the course of the fighting. The Serb soldiers are throwing away their rifles, scattering among the hills, and returning to their villages, where we catch them."

"It is a general dissolution, then?"

"The same thing is happening to the Serb Army as to snow in a thaw. The melting process begins gradually, then increases rapidly. The whole of Old Serbia today is in our hands, and the Serb soldiers have fought as long as they could to defend their old soil; but for strange territory, as they call Macedonia, they will not sacrifice themselves.

"Daily now small and large bands of Serbians come to us out of the mountains, whither they had fled. According to last reports they are already surrendering in whole companies at a time. The one road to Montenegro is no street, according to your conception of the term. It is a mountain road which no wagon, let alone artillery, can pass. In a few days the rest of the Serbians will be crushed. Those who succeed in fleeing to Montenegro will be a strange, incongruous conglomeration, an army composed almost entirely of officers and Generals who have sworn not to surrender."

"And then?"

"When this fighting is once concluded, we will go to Macedonia with united forces and attend to the Kaffirs and their allies. It has been hard work, but it has paid. My troops have twice got into touch with our allies. That was funny; for instance, in Parachin, the Germans, Austrians, Hungarians, and Bulgarians were all mixed together. How they made themselves understood I don't know, but they managed somehow. Now we often march hand in hand, and that means a chain which will never be torn."

At our parting the General smiled confidently and said:

"We will see one another again in the south."

ARMY INTACT, SAYS MINISTER.

Serb War Chief Declares 200,000 Men Are Still in Arms.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Nov. 24 (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The Serbian Minister for War, who is now at Saloniki, has made the following statement to the Hestia, an Athenian afternoon newspaper:

"The military operations of the Serbian Army are anything but terminated. Our forces are still practically intact.

"We have lost thus far 85,000 killed and wounded, and 20,000 taken prisoners. The remainder number about 200,000. We are only deficient in heavy artillery. Our commissariat is working splendidly thanks to the French organizers, and the morale of our troops is unimpaired.

"Nevertheless, the situation is difficult, especially as regards munitions. From the strategic standpoint, also, the situation is serious, but not hopeless, and the Kachanik sector in particular is entirely satisfactory.

"When the Anglo-French forces are sufficiently large we shall resume the offensive. Meanwhile we remain on the defensive, holding the passes and wearing down the enemy, who has suffered heavily. Our forces if necessary will retire slowly toward Albania, contesting every inch of the ground in order to give the Allies time to concentrate their forces.

"I can assure you that France and England are preparing surprises in the Balkans. We ourselves are resolved to continue the struggle with the same self-sacrifice as from the beginning of the war."

GREEK CABINET PLACATED

Entente Promises Not to Keep Territory Used and to Pay for All Damage.

DETAINED SHIPPING FREED

Commercial Cable Service with Constantine's Kingdom Also Promptly Resumed.

GERMANS TAKE MITROVITZA

Pristina Also Falls, but Serbs for Third Time Hurl Bulgars Back at Katchanik Pass.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 25.—The Entente Ministers yesterday presented a collective note to Premier Skouloudis of Greece demanding freedom of movement for their forces in Macedonia without the interposition of obstacles of any kind.

It was couched in friendly terms, and was in effect a request that the Greek Government confirm formally in documentary form the assurances already given to Lord Kitchener and Denys Cochin relative to the position of the Allies' forces on Greek soil. It contained the declaration that no part of Greece's territory would be retained after the war.

Immediately upon receipt of the note a Cabinet council was called, and Reuter's correspondent wires that a reply has been handed to the Entente envoys. He adds:

"It is understood that the reply agrees not to disarm the Allies' forces, gives them liberty of action on Greek territory for their own security, and accords railway and telegraphic facilities. The Government only makes reserves regarding a further examination of certain details.

"The Allies' declaration that any part of the Greeks' territory occupied by the Allies will be restored in due course and any justifiable indemnities paid, has favorably impressed the Greek Government. The situation is developing so well that the Greek steamers held up at Malta have been released. Difficulties are no longer placed on the transmission of commercial cables."

After the Cabinet meeting some of the Ministers who attended it said the definite demands of the Allies were less exacting than had been expected.

Prior to its presentation the questions dealt with in the note were discussed at a luncheon given by King Constantine in honor of Denys Cochin, member of the French Cabinet. M. Cochin's views were favorably received by the King, the Athens correspondent of the Paris Havas News Agency reports.

Premier Skouloudis had already taken pains to make it appear that his objections to the demands of the Allies were purely theoretical. This he did in an interview granted to the Athens correspondent of the Petit Parisienne of Paris, who in a dispatch to that newspaper yesterday quoted him as saying:

"Greece is neutral and will remain neutral in spite of pressure, no matter from what quarter it is applied. Her neutrality, as it affects the Allies and France in particular, will be of such a benevolent character that Greece will never lift a finger against the allied troops. Our friendly attitude toward the Allies is shown by the fact that we have permitted them to pass freely through our territory, which in itself is an infringement on strict rules of neutrality.

"Today we are asked to give an engagement that we will permit the allied armies, operating in Serbia, to recross our frontier and use Greek territory as a base and a field of operations. This would constitute active cooperation in the war on our part.

"I was obliged to answer that such an event would raise the question of the application of the convention adopted at The Hague which permits neutrals to prevent, by disarming belligerent armies, the conversion of their territory into a battlefield. I added that I broached this point in only a theoretical manner and from a legal aspect, without in any way intending to commit myself as to the future, for circumstances often are more convincing than the most approved legal principles.

"This observation, which I was obliged to make, caused uneasiness to the Allies, who answered with a sort of blockade."

TEUTONS AND BULGARS ENTER KOSSOVO PLAINS

Three Columns Converge in Attempt to Envelop the Main Serbian Army.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 25.—Austro-German and Bulgarian troops, operating in three separate columns, have entered Kossovo Plain, where the Serbians were expected to make their last stand, and have occupied Mitrovitza, the latest Serbian capital, as well as Pristina, and at one point at least have driven the Serbians across the Sitnica River, which drains the valley.

Although the Serbians might make a stand between the valley and the Albanian and Montenegrin frontiers, they will be at a great disadvantage owing to their inability to get munitions and and supplies, while their opponents have virtually everything they require.

The Serbians on the Katchanik front, and also in the southwest corner of their country, continue to hold back the invaders, as do the Anglo-French forces in the southeast.

Berlin yesterday issued the following laconic official announcement of the latest successes of the invaders:

> Mitrovitza has been taken by Austro-Hungarian troops. Pristina has been taken by German troops. The Serbians have been driven over the Sitnica River, west of Pristina.

The Vienna War Office bulletin read as follows:

> On the upper Drina the day passed quietly. Near Priboj (Pripolie?) our troops forced a crossing to the southern bank of the Lim. South of Novi Bazar the Austro-Hungarian forces are advancing toward the Montenegrin frontier.
> Austro-Hungarian troops advancing in the Ibar Valley ejected the enemy, after severe fighting, from positions northeast of Mitrovitza and entered the town, capturing 700 men, among them four officers. Pristina also was captured from the Serbians. A German column penetrated the town from the north, and the Bulgarians followed from the east.

The Bulgarian official communication of Monday, as received in Amsterdam yesterday, reads:

> Fighting continues on the Kossovo Plain. We took six Howitzers, two field guns and a quantity of war material and captured a large number of prisoners. On the other front there is no change.
> Our troops Friday shot down one of three enemy seaplanes which flew over Federedchik (north of Dedeaghatch.)

Montenegrins Retiring Also.

That the Montenegrin forces as well as the Serbs are continuing to retreat before the Austrians is shown by the following official statement forwarded yesterday from Cettinje to Paris.

> Our Sanjak army continued yesterday to retire in good order upon defensive positions. The enemy is almost inactive.
> Artillery fighting is in progress on the other fronts.
> The Montenegrin Government has proofs that the Austrians are using explosive bullets against the Montenegrins.

Telegraphing from Saloniki under date of Tuesday, the correspondent at Saloniki of the Paris Havas News Agency says:

"Four more transports, heavily loaded with troops, arrived in port this morning.

"After the occupation of Pristina, the Bulgarians attempted a large turning movement to envelop the Serbians in the Katchanik defile. The troops in the defile had been reinforced by part of the Serbian troops in Albania.

"Another violent engagement took place yesterday on the northeastern front and resulted in the repulse of the Bulgarians for the third time. Hundreds of Bulgarians who had been taken prisoners by the French troops arrived here, (Saloniki,) yesterday evening."

The Serbian Legation in Paris yesterday gave out the following communication, reiterating the announcement of a Serbian victory west of Nish and dealing with the situation generally:

> The situation of the Serbian Army is improving slightly. Following the Bulgarian defeat on the northwestern part of the Kossovo Plain, near Lebans, the enemy, according to news from Pristend, has sustained another repulse west of Guilan, on Gegovatch Mountain, and at Velika Plana. The Serbians are reported to have captured five mountain cannon.
> The Serbian army, after having avoided several efforts to surround it in its retreat, today finds it pressed from the west and north by the Austro-German army and from the northeast and east by the Bulgarian army. A junction with General Sarrail's (French) army has not yet been effected. The Serbians, while not seeing complete salvation, find at least a great improvement in their strategic situation.
> For the moment the Serbians have only one way out; namely, retreat toward the Albanian and Montenegrin Mountains. The endeavor to pierce the Bulgarian front near Uskup appears to be succeeding, judging from the latest dispatches from Prisrend. If the Allied forces increased by the debarkation of British troops, can make their advance to the north coincident, a junction with the Serbian troops would be realized and would necessarily cause retreat of the Bulgarian troops which are pushing on toward Tetovo, Prilep, and Monastir.
> The western part of New Serbia would thus be freed of enemy forces and the Serbians, grouped with Allied contingents, would be able to stop the advance of their three enemies.

90,000 Serbs to Try and Break Ring.

The Saloniki correspondent of the Paris Temps, in a dispatch dated Monday, says:

"There appears to be confirmation of the report that the Serbian army of General Bokovitch is now opposing only a thin screen to the Austro-German advance. The main forces have been concentrated on the Kossovo plain. General Bokovitch will hurl 90,000 men against the 120,000 Bulgarians guarding the defiles of Katchanik and Kortchou.

"The Serbians may even attempt the supreme effort of dashing into Uskup and then on to Veles, there to join hands with the French. But in order that the battle shall end in anything but sublime suicide the operation must be carried out energetically, and success must be achieved promptly.

"There is good reason to believe the Bulgarians will not occupy Monastir until the arrival of the first detachments of Austro-German troops."

The Saloniki correspondent of the Petit Journal says he has learned from a member of the Serbian Government that Premier Asquith of Great Britain sent a telegram on Monday to the Serbian Government giving firm assurance that Great Britain and France would carry through the expedition.

ALLIES' AID TOO LATE, THE RUMANIANS FEAR

Fate of Belgium and Serbia Cited as Reason for Maintaining Neutrality.

ATHENS, Nov. 6, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—One of the last issues of the Balkan Courier, published by the Serbians at their former capital, Nish, contained a long explanation of Rumania's attitude, written by a prominent Rumanian statesman.

"When it comes to fighting Germany," writes the Rumanian, "we are bound to tell you frankly that we are too weak to defend you. I can well understand that you in Serbia are surprised at Rumania's inactivity in the face of Bulgaria's attack on you. But our attitude is dictated by the circumstances which we have to face. If it were a matter of a conflict between Bulgaria and Serbia, we should not hesitate to take up arms on your side, as, indeed, we did in 1913. Unhappily, this is not a war with Bulgaria only, but it is a question of participating in the terrific struggle between the Germanic powers and the Quadruple Entente. Serbia has not been attacked by Bulgaria, but by Germany, with Bulgaria as a subordinate ally.

"None but the great Powers of the Quadruple Entente can face Germany and her allies. But when can we count with centainty on the effective intervention * * * in the Balkan Peninsula of England and her allies? Nobody can answer this question. We all know what Germany wants, and what Germany will do. But does any one know what the Quadruple Entente will do? You know very well that the Quadruple Entente is not a harmonious whole. The agreement of Sept. 3, 1914, only binds its constituents not to conclude a separate peace; but no provision was made for a common and unified policy in conducting the war. In this respect each of the four powers, (England, France, Russia, and Italy,) has retained its own freedom of action. The result is that * * * in every new situation the Quadruple Entente is obliged to confer as to what policy shall be adopted, and such negotiations, even though they produce perfect accord, inevitably mean delay.

"You will surely understand that in these circumstances every neutral country, and particularly Rumania (with her dangerous geographical position,) must take care not to incur the hostility of Germany in return for the empty friendship of the Quadruple Entente.

"This is the secret of Rumania's attitude, and probably of that of Greece. You and others tell us that the final victory of the Quadruple Entente is certain. We do not doubt it, but it must be admitted that this victory is likely to be long delayed. The English, on their island, can afford to wait for victory; but Rumania cannot afford to incur the hostility of Germany and Austria while waiting for the end of the war, for in the intervening period she might easily suffer the fate of Belgium and share the destruction meted out to Serbia. You Serbians may say that this is a selfish policy. I assure you it is merely a policy of self-preservation. You cannot reasonably demand that we should expose our country to the terrible danger of making a merciless enemy without possessing a guarantee that his opponents will support us."

SERB GOVERNMENT RETIRES TO ALBANIA

To Make Scutari Its Headquarters—Berlin Hears Peter Is Going to Montenegro.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—The Serbian Legation announced today that the Serbian Government, which has been located at Prisrend, is departing today to Scutari, Albania.

BERLIN, Nov. 24, (Via London.)—A dispatch to the Berliner Zeitung from Sofia carries the report that King Peter of Serbia has accepted an invitation from King Nicholis of Montenegro to come to Cettinje and rule his country from the Montenegrin capital. The report adds that the Serbian Ministers will accompany King Peter from Saloniki.

The withdrawal of the Serbian Government to Scutari is probably more of a political than a military move, but, in the former case, more comprehensive in motive than the withdrawal of the Belgian Government from Brussels and Antwerp to Havre, a little over a year ago.

For Serbia, denied a coast line on the Adriatic by the Congress of London, in the Spring of 1913, when the independent State of Albania was created by the powers, finally obtained the promise of her "little window on the sea" from the Entente powers last March, which promise was adhered to by Italy on April 14, with the stipulation that the "little window" should not open through Dalmatia. This left Albania as the only available littoral, and, much to the disgust of the Montenegrins, who had captured Scutari after a siege of seven months, the Congress of London gave the city to the newly created Albania.

About a month before the present invasion of Serbia, Serbian troops occupied Scutari. This act called forth all sorts of comments from Berlin, where, of course, they were in ignorance of the concession the Allies had made to Serbia.

With its seat at Scutari the Serbian Government will be in easy communication with the allied Governments, for the city, at the southern end of Lake Scutari, is only twenty miles from either Antivari or Dulcigno, the sole ports of Montenegro on the Adriatic.

Moreover, Scutari is comparatively immune from attack via either the Serb-Montenegrin or the Serb-Albanian frontier, its only approach from the east being a rough, narrow highway from Prisrend, sixty miles away as the crow flies, but nearly 100 by road.

WITH THE FRENCH IN SERBIA.

British Observer Describes Strong Positions Held in Macedonia.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
(Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)

FRENCH HEADQUARTERS, NEAR STRUMITZA STATION, Nov. 20.—With permission of General Sarrail, in command of the French troops in the Balkans, I have spent an interesting day at the French front on the Belastchitza Mountains, in the north part of the so-called Doiran enclave, Southeast Serbia.

It is a picturesque corner. This is Serbia's Macedonian Ultima Thule. The higher mountains to the north are Bulgaria. The first radiance of the white dawn illuminates the Kruscha Mountains to the east, and the Payik Plateau in the south, and these are Greece.

At breakfast time General Bailloud received me, and placed an officer and a motor car at the disposal of our small party, so that we might visit the French position to the right of the line in this part of the country. We sped along past camp after camp. Here were the French, there the British. The batteries were hidden in corners, and activity was everywhere.

The first place to be visited was Hill 160, which the French took a few days ago after a severe fight. The towerlike eminence was pockmarked with shell holes, and shrapnel bullets could be picked up by handfuls. From there we crossed the Bulgarian artillery fire zone to reach Hill 516, which dominates the surrounding region. "In single file!" the officer cried out to the little party, and just at that moment the enemy's shrapnel began to scream overhead and burst on the brow of the hill to the south. The aim was wide or the range too long, for the shells found a harmless billet on the vacant, bare hillside. Hill 516 was much as it was when the French, a few days ago, put the Bulgarians out of their position there. The hill having been thoroughly searched with heavy shell fire, the French took it with a splendid rush, and their losses were well under 150. The Bulgarians lost at the lowest estimate 500. One trench half a dozen yards long had fifty of the enemy's dead in it, and many dead were found on the top. Rifles were abandoned by the hundred, cartridges by the thousand. The Bulgars have several times attempted to retake the hill, but have been easily repulsed.

A striking feature of this new campaign is its complete dissimilarity to that of France and Flanders. There are no lines of elaborate trenches. The latter consist of shallow dugouts at the brows of the hills and at any convenient spot. They are only a few yards long. They are broken and shrub-covered, the ground providing excellent cover. Little concealment is required, as the enemy is not provided with aeroplanes.

The French positions struck me as being very strong, though it should not be forgotten that the fighting in this campaign is as yet in the nature of manoeuvring for position until the definite advance begins.

I also visited the extreme right of the position here at Gradeets. That village was carried a few days ago by a brilliant French dash, and strong positions beyond the village were taken and consolidated immediately after. During the last day or two the fighting on the Cerna front has been more severe than elsewhere. A fierce combat in the gorge of the River Rajec, a tributary of the Cerna, marked the furthest point of the French advance from the direction of Drenobo, on the right bank of the Cerna. The French, however, hold a strong position in the gorge and at an important bridge head at Toysarts. This is the controlling point of communication between the strong French position on the heights or Archangel, facing Gradsko on the Saloniki-Nish Railway, and dominating the route toward Veles. Today light infantry is in possession of the gorge, which makes a strong position, though open to fire from the heights in possession of the enemy.

TO CONTROL SECURITIES.

McKenna Admits Intent to Mobilize Holdings of Our Stocks

LONDON, Nov. 24. — Reginald McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, gave in the House of Commons today the first official confirmation of reports that the Government had begun negotiations with large holders of American securities for the purpose of obtaining control of these holdings.

The negotiations, Mr. McKenna said, were confidential for the present, but he promised to make a full statement on the project before the general public was invoted to join the movement.

PUT CURB ON PEERS, CRIES LORD DERBY

Head of British Recruiting Denounces St. Davids and Ribblesdale for Recent Speeches.

FORMER RECANTS IN PART

Says His Remarks About Woman Visitors at British Camp Referred to Only One Incident.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—In severe denunciation of freedom of speech, such as in the recent instance of the speech delivered by Lord St. Davids in the House of Lords, where he attacked the British Headquarters Staff, the Earl of Derby, who is in charge of British recruiting, told the Stock Exchange today that the House of Lords needed a censorship.

"The man who gives information to the enemy," said Lord Derby, "goes by an ugly name, and it should be given just as much to a speech delivered in the House of Lords as to a man who risks his life getting information for the enemy."

After stating that "no gentleman" would have made and no gentleman would believe Lord St. David's accusations, and subjecting Lord Ribblesdale's recent utterances to a like denunciation, Lord Derby spoke of recruiting. He said he had not come to enlist recruits from the Stock Exchange, but to ask the loyal co-operation of its members in the scheme he had undertaken.

"At the present moment no man has a right to say he is indispensable in his present employment," he continued. "Apart from the numbers we will get is the moral effect upon our allies and our enemies in showing them that the voluntary spirit in England is as strong as at the beginning of the war. Every man should go before a local tribunal, which will determine whether he is indispensable."

Lord Derby asked for patience, saying that those working under his scheme were endeavoring to do in six weeks under the voluntary system what Germany had accomplished under conscription in forty years. Men were enlisting in large numbers, but they must come in very much larger numbers during the next three weeks if the position of the voluntary system was to be made absolutely unassailable.

"We are going to win this war, whatever the cost," he added, "but it is no use making that assertion, unless every one does his duty at this crisis."

Regarding Lord Ribblesdale's allegation in his recent speech that it was common knowledge that Lieut. Gen. Sir Charles Monro, commander of the British expedition at the Dardanelles, had reported in favor of the abandonment of the Dardanelles campaign, Lord Derby said:

"I am in the War Office and knew nothing about it. There must have been a second traitor to give him information, and we ought to know who he is."

Stung by the vitriolic criticism of his recent attack in the House of Lords on the British Headquarters Staff at the front, Lord St. Davids told the Peers today that a wrong construction had been placed upon his words. When he spoke of the visits of women at headquarters he only had in mind a single visit at the beginning of the war, he said. He thought it not appropriate that this great tragedy of war should be used as a peep show.

The Marquis of Crewe said Lord St. Davids had only himself to blame for the harsh remarks made about his "indiscriminate and damaging criticism" of the Headquarters Staff.

APPEALS FOR RED CROSS.

President Lauds Splendid Work and Asks for Funds.

The American Red Cross Society made public yesterday the text of an appeal issued by President Wilson to the American people to continue their contributions to the European war fund, subscriptions to be made through the New York Chapter at 130 East Twenty-second Street. The President's appeal is as follows:

> The White House,
> Washington, Nov. 24, 1915.
> The day is at hand on which we bend our thoughts toward a consideration of the blessings of peace and security. Inevitably the contemplation of our own good fortune must bring sharply to mind the anguish and the loss which lie, an intolerable and crushing burden, upon the bodies and souls of our neighbors across the seas. Our country has poured out generously of its sympathy and its means in behalf of those who suffer because of the war. But the harvest of death and desolation is not ended, and our sympathy must not yet withdraw its hand.
> The American Red Cross, through whose instrumentality hundreds of thousands of our people have been enabled to give substantial expression to their pity for those who have fallen under the stroke of war, is nearing the exhaustion of its resources. Into its war relief fund it has received, in round sum, $1,600,000. In the sending and maintaining of nearly 400 surgeons, nurses, and sanitarians, who have carried American skill into all the zones of war; in financial aid for the hospitals and other Red Cross institutions, and in the purchase and transportation of nearly 4,000,000 pounds of hospital and medical supplies and equipment, this sum has been reduced to less than $50,000 now available to meet the great demands of the approaching Winter.
> That the splendid work of this organization, which, more than any other, represents the sympathy of us all, should be permitted to cease, is unthinkable. I therefore earnestly call upon the people of the United States once again, by their generosity, to assure the Red Cross against the curtailment or discontinuance of the large activities in which it is engaged. That this assurance is urgent is shown by the comparatively small sum remaining in its treasury, a sum which, however closely it may be husbanded, will suffice for but a few weeks.

> WOODROW WILSON.

CAMPAIGN TO HELP SERBIA.

Meeting Will Lay Plans to Awaken Public Interest.

Under the auspices of the International Society, Friends of Serbia, a meeting will be held Monday evening at the Holland House to start a campaign to arouse public interest in the cause of Serbia. The founder, Miss Caroline Dawes Appleton, has arranged a program consisting of addresses by men identified with war relief work and a recital of Serbian folk songs.

In a letter made public last night by Miss Appleton a Serbian officer says:

"We are passing now through the sublime moment in Serbian history. Encircled by her enemies and traitors, Serbia is cheerfully fighting. Not one of us is tired, nobody fearful, nobody pessimistic. * * * Serbia can not be lost. Tell that to the whole civilized world where you are living."

Among those interested in the society are James Whitcomb Riley, Theodore Marburg, Bishop Francis McConnell, Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, and Lady Irma Brukevitch.

Miss Appleton is sending Serbian and Belgian refugees to the farm of John McCrea, near Wilmington, Del. Mr. McCrea, who has placed ninety-five acres at the disposal of the society, furnishes the people with a house and the tools for tilling the soil. He also pays them a living wage for their services.

HUERTA NOW CALLED A MERE GERMAN AGENT

New Story of a $30,000,000 Teuton Fund to Stir Up Mexico for Our Embarrassment.

From a foreign official source, in no way connected with European affairs, there came out last night the story that a fund of approximately $30,000,000 was made available about six months ago by Germany to start a new revolution in Mexico, with Victoriano Huerta and other Mexicans opposed to Carranza as its leaders, the purpose being to embroil the United States with its Southern neighbor and in that way stop the export of arms and munitions of war to the Allies.

Within the last few weeks Carranza agents, it was said, have found $600,000 in Havana and $95,000 in Mexico City, both of these deposits being parts of this "war fund."

And there was every reason to believe the disbursement of $30,000,000 was under the control of the German who was known in his country as Franz von Rintelen, and also as F. Hansen. Ten millions is the amount understood to have been available for starting the revolution, which was about to get under way when the United States Government nipped it in the bud and arrested General Huerta on his arrival at the border on June 27 last.

The new revolution, it was said, was planned in Spain, a fact that accounts for the unexpected departure of Huerta from Barcelona for New York last Winter. Moreover, the reason von Rintelen so hurriedly left this country under a false passport early in last August was that he was told the United States Government had the details of the plot, and if he prolonged his stay in this country he might find himself a Federal prisoner.

Almost immediately following his arrival in this country Huerta, it was said, established communication with representatives of the German Government. A man who holds a high position in the German diplomatic service, according to the story told, conferred with Huerta at the Hotel McAlpin and went over the details of the conspiracy. This man was not von Rintelen, who merely paid out the $30,000,000 war fund.

Villa, according to the story, was to have been one of the first victims of the conspiracy, but Felix Diaz was considered by the Germans as available for service, and at one time it was intended that he should start a revolution in one of the Mexican coast States, probably Yucatan. That Diaz did intend to start such a revolution was printed in the newspapers last Summer, and he did leave New York as scheduled. But the revoution never was launched, for the reason that the Carranzistas found out all about it in time and were ready to welcome Diaz with an army, a fact that Diaz found out in time.

As for Huerta, on June 25 Señor Arredondo, the Carranza representative in Washington, informed the State Department of the plot to start a new revolution. The following day at Newman, N. M., agents of the Government arrested Huerta and Pascual Orozco, the old Madero lieutenant who had agreed to join Huerta.

It was asserted last night that documentary evidence of all these things had been gathered by Carranza agents and turned over to the United States Government.

Recently Rafael Nieto, Under Secretary of Finance in the Carranza Cabinet, found the two funds, one of $95,000 and another of $600,000, both of which were to have been used by Huerta. The $95,000 fund, which was confiscated, was in a German bank in Mexico City, and the $600,000 was in a German bank in Havana, Cuba.

CONFER OVER VON NUBER.

Austrian Charge Sees Lansing About Recent Official Statement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24. — Baron Erich Zweidinek, Counselor and Chargé d'Affaires of the Austro-Hungarian Embassy, was in conference today again with Secretary Lansing concerning the former's complaint against the recent action of the Department of Justice in issuing a statement construed as a confirmation of the charges recently made by Dr. Josef Goricar, ex-Consul for Austria-Hungary at San Francisco, about an Austrian spy system in the United States. Neither Secretary Lansing nor the Austrian Counselor would make any statement for publication.

It is understood that the Embassy is dissatisfied because no disclaimer has been published by the Department of Justice. One report tonight was that the Austrian Counselor today complained against newspaper attacks upon Alexander von Nuber, Austrian Consul General at New York, but no confirmation of this could be obtained.

GUARDS REDOUBLE WATCH.

All Visitors to Government Buildings in Washington Closely Scrutinized.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The watchfulness of the guards about all the principal Government buildings in the capital has been redoubled on special orders. Today guards stationed at strategic positions commanding all the entrances in the building which houses the State, War, and Navy Departments were under orders to question and if necessary search any persons of whom they had doubts. Any one carrying a package of any sort was subject to questioning. Hundreds of tourists pass through the buildings daily.

Since a bomb explosion wrecked a room in the Capitol last Summer and bomb plots generally have kept the Government detectives busy, there has been more than usual activity among the guards here, but now the watch is even more strictly kept. Guards employed by railroad companies are constantly on duty in the railroad tunnel leading to the bridge over the Patomac River, which is the principal gateway to the South.

"NO BEER, NO WORK."

London Trade Unionists Protest Against Shorter Liquor Hours.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—"No beer before dinner, no work before dinner," is the cry of the London trade unionists, who are organizing to resist the new regulations shortening the hours during which saloons may be kept open.

Meetings were held in different parts of the city this evening to protest against the new regulations, and delegates were appointed to attend a conference on Saturday to decide what action the unions will take to defeat the regulations, which will go into effect next Monday.

As many trades unions are starting a new movement to obtain further increases in wages, the trades union executives have been called into a conference to hear Premier Asquith, Reginald McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, discuss national finances and consider the financial position of the nation in relation to organized labor. The conference is set for Dec. 1.

THREATEN THE PRESIDENT.

Cleveland Police Hold Man Whose Letters Speak of "Murder."

CLEVELAND, Nov. 24.—A man who said he was William Meyer of Bay City, Mich., was held by the police tonight pending an investigation of letters in his possession threatening the life of President Wilson.

The letters are incoherent and warn Mr. Wilson that the writer is "being forced to murder him."

NO UNITED COMMAND YET.

Asquith Says It Is Not Advisable on the Western Front.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Premier Asquith told the House of Commons today it had not been considered advisable to place all the land forces on the western front under one commander. The Premier's statement was in reply to a question by Sir George Scott Robertson.

'RAISING THE DEAD' ON THE BATTLE LINE

Device Used to Promote Artificial Respiration Is an American Invention.

SENT BY ROCKEFELLER FUND

Dr. S. J. Meltzer Made Apparatus, Now Improved—His Tetanus Treatment Also Adopted.

German military surgeons are now restoring to consciousness soldiers overcome by gas or buried in bombarded trenches by using a device for artificial respiration invented by Dr. Samuel J. Meltzer of the Rockefeller Institute in this city.

A consignment of the mechanisms was sent over last month, and they are coming into use. They are an improvement upon the apparatus which was invented in 1913 by Dr. Meltzer as a result of his investigations for the United States Bureau of Mines. Two dozen of the contrivances were sent several months ago to the Allies, and they have been used on the French side on the western battle front. Germany, however, has received a supply only recently through the Rockefeller Foundation.

The new type is much simpler than any of its predecessors, for it has no delicate valves to get out of order and no glass. The entire apparatus, including the case to carry it in, which is eighteen inches long and twelve high, does not weigh more than fifteen pounds. It can thus readily be used upon the field, and it has advantages over the more elaborate and heavier appliances. The last number of the North German Gazette received in this city has an article describing the demonstration of the device before the Berlin Medical Society, and the Germans are greatly impressed by its practical utility.

Dr. Meltzer is the head of the department of physiology and pharmacology at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. He invented, although he did not patent, several pieces of apparatus for producing artificial respiration and proved their efficacy by experiments on animals and also in the treatment of human beings. His work was popularly spoken of as "raising the dead to life," for he used the apparatus to bring back the breathing function to both men and animals in whom life was practically extinct. The device the Germans are using, which he calls an apparatus restoring respiration through pharyngeal insufflation, consists primarily of a six-foot rubber tube provided with certain contrivances for controling the flow of air pumped through it into the lungs from a foot bellows. The tube has a nickeled mouthpiece which is inserted deep into the throat.

Each machine is provided with a pair of forceps by which the tongue can be drawn far enough out of the mouth to prevent it interfering with the procedure. The member is tied to the mouthpiece of the machine. A current of air is then forced into the lungs and the functions of taking in breath and exhaling it are imitated by alternately opening and shutting an orifice in the tube by sliding a piece of curved metal back and forth over it. This metal covering is attached to a ring through which the operator can slip a finger and thus easily control the air current.

The abdomen of the unconscious patient is kept flat and rigid by strapping a board upon it, so that all the air goes into the lungs. The pressure of air is also regulated by another tube connected at right angles to the main one the size of the opening of which is varied.

The announcement was made several months ago that a method of treating tetanus with Epson salts injections perfected by Dr. Meltzer had also been employed. Sometimes in this treatment the patient lost consciousness and his breathing was restored by the artificial respiration device. The Germans, according to these last advices, are adopting the method on an extensive scale.

MOVIES WILL BOOST LATEST FRENCH LOAN

Details of War Bonds to Be Shown on Every Screen in the Republic Today.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—The screens in every moving picture theatre in France tomorrow will present a series of official films concerning the great war loan to which subscriptions open on that day. M. Ribot, Minister of Finance, is thus applying, for the first time, to national ends what is defined at the Ministry of Finance as one of the quickest practical means for the diffusion of ideas.

It will take ten pictures, prepared by notable artists, to announce each important fact concerning the loan, which pays 5 per cent. and will be issued at 88. The final design will show a German soldier crushed under the weight of a French gold piece, while a rooster (the real Gallic cock,) reaches out his beak from the bas relief of the coin and seems to exult over the exhausted fighter, saying: "'Twas scarcely worth while to commit so many crimes to come to this."

WE NEED 2,000 AEROPLANES.

View of J. H. Hammond, Jr., Home After Eight Weeks Abroad.

John Hays Hammond, Jr., returned yesterday on the French liner Touraine after an eight weeks' trip to France and England.

Mr. Hammond ridiculed the peace scheme proposed by Henry Ford. He said he supposed Mr. Bryan would sail on the "ship of peace." Regarding American preparedness he said:

"America needs a large naval and military force to hold its own against any first-class power that might wish to attack it. We need 2,000 aeroplanes, with 2,000 pilots and 2,000 observers, for the land forces alone, and a large aerial force for the use of the navy.

"The naval side of this war offers a great field for invention. English and French experts were much interested in my invention for controlling torpedoes by wireless. I am reserving the use of my own system and technical secrets for my own country.

"I discovered while I was over there," Mr. Hammond continued, "that the German submarine blockade of British ports, as I predicted a year ago, had proved a failure. With nets, submarine microphone ears, and high-speed patrol boats the British Admiralty has wiped the submarines off the map."

ASKS REPORT ON ANCONA.

Ambassador Page Requests Information from Italy.

ROME, Nov. 24.—Thomas Nelson Page, the American Ambassador, has requested the Italian Government to inform him as to the result of the investigation made by the Italian authorities into the circumstances attending the sinking of the Italian Line steamer Ancona, which was torpedoed on Nov. 9 in the Mediterranean by a submarine.

At the same time the Naval Attaché of the embassy, Lieutenant Commander Train, is getting sworn statements by the survivors of the Ancona with a view to establishing the nationality of the submarine and the facts connected with the loss of the steamer.

Dr. Cecile L. Greil of New York, the only American-born passenger on the Ancona, interrogated by the American Consul at Naples, Jay White, and Lieutenant Commander Jackson, repeated under oath the story previously told by her of the shelling of the steamer and the panic among the passengers.

FRENCH CLAIM SUCCESS IN WESTERN GUN DUELS

Cannonading Is General, but Most Vigorous in the Artois District.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Vigorous artillery actions, in which the French claim the advantage, were general along the western front this afternoon, the firing being most intense in the neighborhood of Arras, Loos, and Souchez.

Tonight's French official communication reads:

> The morning was calm on the whole front save in the Woevre, at the Bois Brulé, where the enemy employed asphyxiating shells without attaining results.
> The afternoon was marked by artillery activity, quite violent in Artois, where the Arras railway station was hit by about fifty shells, and in the region of Loos and Souchez; to a lesser degree on the side toward Soissons and in Champagne, and rather spirited in the sectors of Flirey and Reillon and in the Vosges at La Tête de Veau and Hartmannsweilerkopf.
> Everywhere our batteries replied successfully and kept the advantage.

The French War Office made the following announcement this afternoon:

> Nothing of importance ocurred last night outside of the usual cannonading, except in the Argonne, where fighting with mines resulted to our advantage.
> In the sector of Bolanti our aviators blew up a small German position.
> In the Vosges an effort to capture one of our positions on the plain to the northeast of Celles was repulsed completely.

The Belgian communication says:

> The night was calm. During the day there was great artillery activity on both sides. Our batteries dispersed pioneers and bombarded the trenches and observation posts of the enemy. There was energetic action against the enemy batteries, which bombarded particularly the sector between Dixmude and Nieuport, as well as the sector between Noordschoote and Steenstraete.

The text of the statement given out by the German Army Headquarters Staff today follows:

> There were no events of importance in the western theatre.
> The English Commander in Chief attempted to threw doubt upon the official German statement that German troops which took part in the fighting around Loos on Oct. 8 did not lose 763 men, but, as the English put it, between 7,000 and 8,000 men. We have nothing to say in answer to such a piece of audacity.

FRANCE TO SUMMON 1917 CLASS TO COLORS

Deputies' Committee Decides to Anticipate the Calling Out of Recruits.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—After hearing General Gallieni, Minister of War, today, the Army Committee of the Chamber of Deputies decided upon a call to the colors on Dec. 15 of the young conscripts of the Class of 1917.

They will be sent to garrisons, then trained and incorporated in various regiments and services.

The Class of 1917 comprises a contingent of 400,000 young men who in peace times would begin military service in 1917. The members of this contingent are 18 and 19 years of age. The calling of this contingent was forecast in a memorandum by M. Millerand, then Minister of War, in September, noting that the 1916 contingent had completed its training and that it appeared to be necessary to anticipate the time of calling the 1917 contingent so that its services might be available, if the need arose, in the Spring of 1916, the minimum time of training being five months.

WOUNDS KILL EARL'S SON.

The Hon. Sir Schomberg McDonnell Was Salisbury's Secretary.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 25. — The Hon. Sir Schomberg McDonnell died last night from wounds received while fighting in the trenches on Sunday.

The Hon. Sir Schomberg Kerr McDonnell was the fifth son of the late (tenth) Earl of Antrim, and was born in 1861. In 1913 he married Miss Ethel Davis, daughter of Major Alexander Davis, an Englishman living at Naples. After an education at Eton and Oxford, Sir Schomberg became principal private secretary to the late Marquis of Salisbury when the latter was Prime Minister. In 1899 and 1900 he served in the South African War. From 1902 till 1912 he was Secretary to the Office of Works.

EXPECT TWO YEARS OF WAR.

French Are Confident, Says Professor Basch, Trusting in the Army.

Professor Victor Basch, who holds the Chair of Aesthetics at the Sorbonne, Paris, arrived yesterday from Bordeaux on the French liner Touraine, to attend the closing ceremonies of the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, and to deliver a series of lectures on French literature, poetry and art at the principal American universities.

"We have made mistakes," he said, speaking of France's part in the war, "and so has England; but today France is on a war footing, with men, arms, and ammunition. Her soldiers fight well because they are fed well, and they know that their women and children at home are fed, which gives them stout hearts to do their duty in the trenches before the enemy. Every woman gets 25 cents a day and 10 cents for each child, so that, with the money she earns herself, the family is better off than before the war.

"I am the Vice President of the Ligue de Droit de l'Homme, which was organized during the Dreyfus crisis in France, and our duty now is to seek out the families of the soldiers who have been killed and break the news to them as gently as possible. It is a very sad office to have to carry out, but I have been surprised at the fortitude displayed by the French women in their time of anguish. They all realize the men are dying that the young children at home may live and grow up in a free land.

"In France we expect the war to last another two years. Next Spring our army will be superior to that of Germany because it will be kept up to its full strength during the Winter months with well-fed and well-clothed soldiers."

CHINA SHIES AT ALLIANCE.

Newspapers Fear the Loss of All German and Austrian Trade.

PEKING, Nov. 24.—The Chinese newspapers commenting on the suggestion of the Entente powers that China join them and thus solidify the Far East urge President Yuan Shih-kai to proceed slowly, asserting that China's fate hangs in the balance.

The newspapers say that China probably could not assist the Entente powers in a military way, and that her obligations under an alliance with the sea powers would forever end German and Austrian commerce in the Far East.

FORD HIRES LINER FOR PEACE CRUSADE

ship. I like that name, for our purpose is constructive, not destructive.

"The world is with a movement to establish a lasting peace. Why, the biggest cowards on the face of the earth are the people who want war. Ninety-nine per cent. don't want war, and the 1 per cent. who do want it are the men who make money out of it.

"This movement will be a direct appeal to the men in the trenches. They know what is being done to bring peace, and they discuss it and long for the time when they shall lay down their arms and brother meet brother in friendship again.

"In place of organizing boards and commissions like the Naval Advisory Board, how much better if the Government appointed boards that would look with as great care after the manufacture of articles that are made for the benefit of humanity."

As Noah, looking out of his ark after the rain was over, sent forth a speculatory dove which eventually came back with an olive leaf in its mouth, so Mr. Ford is going to send out dove-like wireless messages to soothe the passions of the warring powers.

Wireless as the Weapon.

"We are taking out of this port," he said, "a ship armed with the greatest weapon of modern times—the wireless. We are going to use that weapon from the very time we clear this port until we land in Europe. We are going to send out broadcast the message of peace, and by the time we cross the Atlantic all will know and talk about the work we plan. Get people talking about peace and you have taken a step forward."

Somebody asked Mr. Ford how he was going to get the belligerents to agree on matters such as indemnity and territorial distribution.

"That is a question that can best be answered when the powers are brought together," he said. "The first step is to bring them into a position where these matters can be discussed."

"Do you expect a good reception on the other side?"

"Certainly. The men who are doing the fighting want us to come. There are men making munitions right here in this country who do not want peace, and I know them all, but it cannot be denied that there is a growing peace sentiment, and we want to crystallize that sentiment and give a visible expression to something through which it can work."

Mr. Lochner interrupted to say that the Socialists on both sides were already communicating with each other from opposite trenches, and were actively discussing peace.

"I know this positively," he said. "Socialists are meeting secretly in Germany to discuss peace terms, and there is perhaps an indication of the trend of the times in the fact that the German Government knows that these meetings are being held, but has taken no steps to prevent it."

Mr. Ford was asked if any neutral Government had indorsed his plan, or if he had reason to believe that any belligerent would look on it favorably.

"That qusetion is not up for present consideration," he said. "We are going to get behind the work done by The Hague peace conference of women and carry that work forward. It is my earnest hope to create a machinery where those who so desire can turn to inquire what can be done to establish peace and begin relations with those who also desire peace. Even recent dispatches from Germany say that now is the time to establish such a clearing house. It is an experiment in the right direction."

Turning back to the question of preparedness, Mr. Ford denied indignantly that he had subscribed a million dollars to a Canadian war loan.

"I wouldn't give 50 cents to help carry on war," he declared. "Every mother in the world should bring pressure to stop the war. It must be stopped in this country, for preparedness is war. No boy ever killed a bird without a sling-shot or a club."

Mr. Villard explained that Mr. Ford had intrusted $20,000 to him as the head of a committee working against preparedness and militarism, which was formed about a week ago as an offshoot of an organization known as the Henry Street Group. Among its members are Immigration Commissioner Frederic C. Howe, Lillian D. Wald, Jane Addams, Paul H. Kellogg, editor of The Survey; L. H. Wood of the League to Limit Armaments, and Mrs. Crystal Eastman Benedict.

"The Washington office," said Mr. Villard, "will be a publicity office for the circulating of speeches made in Congress against preparedness. It will be conducted entirely aboveboard, but we want to be on the ground to make a fight."

Must Have Passports.

The party on the Oscar II. will have to be provided with passports, and, to avoid trouble with the British Navy, only American citizens will be taken. If the peace party goes, the persons already booked to sail on her will be transferred to the Frederik VIII., which leaves New York for Copenhagen on Dec. 8 with the Christmas mails.

The first foreign comment on the scheme was made last night by Professor Victor Basch, who holds the Chair of Aesthetics in the Sorbonne. Professor Basch, arriving on the Touraine, read about the Ford party.

"It is a great folly," he said. "None of the Allies will listen to them. They do not want peace with Germany till she is conquered. In France, Socialists, anarchists, every one wants war until the foe is thoroughly beaten."

GIBBONS WILLING TO SEE FORD

Cardinal Says Auto Man Telephoned for Appointment.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 24.—Cardinal Gibbons was asked today if he was going to see Henry Ford. He replied:

"I have no engagement to see Mr. Ford, but I would be very glad to see him. Yesterday he telephoned here for an opportunity to see me, but it was impossible for me to break my engagement at the seminary. I also had two other engagements which had been made, and therefore could not see him yesterday, but if he will make an appointment I will see him."

Cardinal Gibbons, who is looking the picture of health, left this evening for Washington, where he will spend his Thanksgiving. For years it has been the custom of the Cardinal to spend Thanksgiving as the guest of Mgr. William Trussell, of St. Patrick's Church, who years ago was Secretary to the prelate.

Asked for a Thanksgiving greeting, Cardinal Gibbons said:

"Thank God we are at peace with the world."

WANT PEACE TERMS DEFINED.

Many Germans Hope for a Statement from the Chancellor.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 24, (via London.)—A Berlin telegram to the Kölnische Zeitung says that the Imperial Chancellor has summoned the party leaders to a conference before the meeting of the Reichstag on Nov. 30, in order to discuss proposals for increased taxation made necessary by the war. Apart from the new 50 per cent. tax on war profits, the taxes proposed will probably include an increase in the income tax.

"It is hoped by the conference," the dispatch adds, "to avoid public discussion in the Reichstag of the proposed scheme of taxation, to which the strenuous opposition of some members is anticipated.

"There is a strong current of public opinion in favor of the Chancellor outlining Germany's peace terms in his speech opening the new session, when he will review the military, financial, and diplomatic situations."

PLEAS FLOOD WHITE HOUSE.

Telegraph Campaign of Peace Party to Influence President.

WASHINGTON Nov. 24.—Telegrams began pouring into the White House today from all parts of the country, urging President Wilson to assist the movement for a conference of neutrals to attempt to end the war. Mrs. Henry Ford recently gave $10,000 to the Woman's Peace Party toward the telegraph campaign.

The messages, which were suggested by Miss Jane Addams and other leading women peace advocates, were identical. The telegraph companies notified the White House they had thousands of the messages, and asked that special arrangements be made at the White House for receiving them.

The campaign will reach a climax on Friday, when a delegation of women peace advocates will call on President Wilson and ask him again to interest himself in having the proposed conference of neutrals called.

MRS. WHITLOCK SENDS PLEA.

Her Message Added to Peace Party Telegrams to President.

The last telegram, sent at midnight last night from the headquarters of the New York branch of the Peace Party, 553 Fifth Avenue, with the $10,000 presented by Mrs. Henry Ford, bore the name of Mrs. Brand Whitlock. The wife of the United States Minister to Belgium had been asked to add her entreaties to those of the members of the Peace Party in urging the President to call the neutral nations for a peace conference. This telegram was number 8,942.

Miss Helen Keller, in response to the request of Miss Addams, sent the following telegram to the President:

> I beseech you to help stop this war. We know that you believe in justice, mercy, and the brotherhood of man. We are convinced that it is in your power, as the head of the nation, to take the first step toward peace negotiations. We urge a conference of neutral nations dedicated to finding a just settlement of the war. All right-thinking Americans will back you in any effort you make to bring this horrible fighting to an end.

A telegram was received by the Peace Party at noon stating that already nearly a thousand telegrams had been received at the White House in response to Jane Addams's plea. Miss Addams, at the Hotel McAlpin, received many wires from women thanking her for her night letter and saying that their messages to the President were on the way.

Miss Addams left New York for the West at midnight last night and will stop at Detroit, where she will take her Thanksgiving dinner today with Mrs. Henry Ford and attend a peace meeting that has been arranged by Mrs. Ford.

REDMOND AS PRISONER SAW BELGIAN KING

Held Up by a Sentry, He Went to His Audience Under Arrest.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 25.—It develops from special dispatches from the British Headquarters in France that John Redmond, Nationalist Member of Parliament, was taken as a prisoner to visit King Albert.

The last day of his trip was allotted to an inspection of the Belgian lines. When Mr. Redmond's automobile, containing himself and his son, arrived at the Belgian lines a sentry refused to allow it to pass on the ground that Mr. Redmond's papers were not in order.

Finally the difficulty was solved by Mr. Redmond suggesting that he be put under arrest and escorted by an armed soldier, sitting behind the driver, to headquarters. Once at heaquarters, Mr. Redmond's difficulties were at an end. He had a long conversation with King Albert and assured him that the Irish people would never entertain a thought of peace until Belgium was liberated.

LAUDS FRENCH SELF-DENIAL

Ambassador Sharp Makes It the Text of His Thanksgiving Speech.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—The Thanks giving Eve dinner of the American Club tonight was marked by expressions on the part of the French speakers of gratitude for the aid and sympathy rendered France by the people of the United States.

Alexandre Ribot, Minister of Finance, had been invited to attend the dinner as a guest of honor, but was unable to be present owing to fatigue incident to his work on the French loan. In a letter M. Ribot sent his regrets and expressed his thanks to the peole of the United States for their help in "this terrible contest in behalf of civilization." At the same time he expressed wishes for the prosperity of the United States. He said that France had chosen Thanksgiving as the day for her "loan victory."

The Prince of Monaco was selected to take M. Ribot's place as guest of ohnor. Speaking first in perfect English and then in French, the Prince paid a graceful compliment to the United States for its love of labor and worship of peace and a tribute to its grandeur and progress. It could set France an example, he said, by its courage and energy.

William Graves Sharp, the American Ambassador, spoke of the lesson contained in the thrift of the French people that had stood the country in good stead in its hour of need. He said M. Ribot's call for gold and the response it received had made a lasting impression on his mind.

"Before it is too late," said Mr. Sharp, "let us learn from France a lesson of self-denial. France commands the admiration of the world; and while we are offering up thanks let us not forget that we ought to remember our sorrowing brothers and give them our love, our sympathy and our aid."

GERMAN FINANCE 'RECKLESS'

Lord Inchcape Says Disaster Will Follow the Course of Berlin.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Lord Inchcape, (Sir James Mackay), in his inaugural address as President of the Institute of Bankers today, said the financial policy of Germany bore the marks of recklessness and improvidence. None of the money required for the war had been raised by increased taxation, and each successive loan meant a fresh inflation of the currency, which showed itself in a steady rise in prices.

The more this procedure was persisted in, said Lord Inchcape, the more would prices rise, and all official attempts to fix maximum prices, though they might be successful for a time in regard to individual commodities, would be powerless to meet the situation. The task of redeeming the securities and retiring the notes would be left for an exhausted and defeated nation to face after the conclusion of peace.

The Government of this country, said Lord Inchcape, had resisted all temptations to unsound methods. "As certain as the sun will rise tomorrow," he concluded, "Germany and her militarism will be crushed, and the peace of the world, so far as anything she can do to prevent it, will be secured for another hundred years."

ITALIANS TIGHTEN GRIP ON GORIZIA

Capture Calvario Height and Hold It Despite Austrians' Artillery Fire.

ADVANCE IN THE TRENTINO

Reports from Vienna Strengthen the Reports That Rovereto Has Been Evacuated.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Important engagements are taking place on the Austro-Italian front, and, while Gorizia has not yet fallen, it has been rendered untenable, a fate which, likewise, appears to be awaiting Riva, in the Trentino. The station at Riva has come withing range of the Italian guns. This latter information, contained in the Vienna official communication, gives some confirmation to the rumors that Rovereto has been evacuated by the Austrians.

ROME, Nov. 23 (via Paris, Nov. 24.)—Further advances for the Italian forces in their attack on Gorizia are announced by the War Office in tonight's statement. The crest of the Calvario Height, west of Gorizia, was reached and maintained, it is declared, and the positions recently won northwest of Oslavia were strengthened.

The text of the statement follows:

Later news of the fighting of Nov. 20 and 23 for the conquest of the heights northwest of Oslavia brings out the importance and exceptional violence thereof. A brigade of grenadiers vied with troops of the Fourth Division in the dash and bravery of their attacks and stubborn resistance in alternate success and failure against the violent and incessant resumption of the offensive by the enemy.

On that part of the front yesterday we had no fresh counter attacks of any importance by the enemy. The day passed in relative calm, and the troops were able to strengthen the positions they had conquered.

On the Calvario Height, west of Gorizia, our attack continued. The crest was reached, and we maintained ourselves on it under the furious and concentrated fire of the enemy's artillery.

On the Carso front, after having repulsed feeble attacks by the enemy during the night, we resumed action with vigor in the morning. We took by assault a strong entrenchment near the Church of San Martino del Carso. We took ninety-three prisoners, seven of whom were officers, during yesterday's operations.

VIENNA, Nov. 24, (via London.)—Today's official report on the Italian situation said:

Yesterday the bridgehead of Gorizia again was kept under a heavy fire by artillery and mines, but no Italian infantry attacks took place. There was very severe fighting on both sides of Monte San Michele. North of the mountain, strong enemy forces penetrated our positions, but during the afternoon our forces counterattacked and completely repulsed the enemy.

After fluctuating and severe hand-to-hand fighting, several attacks against Monte San Michele itself were repulsed with the heaviest of Italian losses. Attempted attacks against our positions on Monte Dei Sei Busi were suppressed by our fire. Near Zagora the enemy threw heavy bombs, which developed asphyxiating gases.

On the southern front of the Tyrol the station and part of the town of Riva were again bombarded. One of our airmen dropped bombs on the barracks and stores of Ala.

GERMANS ACCUSE ITALY.

Say Salandra's Speech Proves War Was Planned Last November.

BERLIN, Nov. 24, (By Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung publishes an article concerning a speech made recently at Palermo by Premier Salandra of Italy. Quoting from this article, the Overseas News Agency says:

"Premier Salandra declared: 'I am proud that I won Signor Orlando (Italian Minister of Justice) as a collaborator. He was unwilling to become a member of the Cabinet, but when I informed him that I was about to create a Ministry to prepare for war he did not hesitate.'

"The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung states that this presents proof that Premier Salandra was preparing for war when he formed the Cabinet in November of 1914, whereas it has been represented that the dicision for war was not reached until last Spring, when the attitude of Austria forced Italy to make the decision."

POPE'S GUARD PROTEST.

Italians Do No Wish to Hand Red Caps to Teutonic Cardinals.

Vatican circles have been stirred by a protest on the part of members of the Pope's Noble Guard at the proposal that guards of Italian birth hand the red caps to the two Teutonic Cardinals who will be elevated at the consistory next month, says a Rome dispatch printed in Il Giornale Italiano yesterday.

The noble guards demand that the red caps be handled by non-Italians, and their protest is regarded as highly patriotic by the Italian people.

The prelates who are the cause of the trouble are Mgr. A. Fruehwirth, Papal Nuncio at Munich, and Count Scapinelli, Papal Nuncio at Vienna.

GERMAN PLOT AGAINST INDIA

Proclamations Found That Call for a Holy War Against Britain.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEKING, Friday, Nov. 19, (Dispatch to The London Times.)—The sinister character of the efforts of Germans in China to cause a rebellion in India is further attested by the discovery, reported from Shanghai, of proclamations calling upon all Moslems to embark upon a Holy war against Great Britain and her allies.

The proclamations are written in Arabic and signed by the Sultan of Turkey, the Sheikh-ul-Islam, the heir to the throne, and Enver Pasha. They were found in trunks with false bottoms.

PRISONERS BETTER TREATED

House of Commons Gets a Good Report About the Captives in Germany

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Replying to a question on the reported sufferings of British prisoners in Germany, Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under Secretary for War, said in the House of Commons today that conditions in the majority of the war camps in Germany and the treatment of those in them had materially improved of late, owing to the unremitting exertions of the United States Embassy in Berlin.

Mr. Tennant said he had no knowledge of reciprocal measures by the French, which, his questioner stated, had had excellent results in obtaining proper treatment of French prisoners in Germany.

BELGIAN ENVOYS SAIL.

Mme. Carton de Wiart, Recently in Prison, Coming Here with Husband.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The representatives of the Belgian Government designated to go to the United States sailed for New York today on the liner Adriatic. They are E. Van de Vyvere, the Minister of Finance, and Chevalier E. Carton de Wiart, the Minister of Justice. Mme. de Wiart, who was imprisoned for several months in Germany, sailed with her husband.

The commission will investigate the purchase of supplies for Belgium in the United States, and, it has been said, will possibly arrange a Belgian loan. The Belgian Legation, however, gave out the following today:

"According to a statement in the Belgische Tagblad, published at The Hague, the Belgian Ministers of Finance and Justice are leaving for America with the object of contracting a loan in the United States. This statement is incorrect. The Belgian Minister of Finance is going over with the object, not of arranging a loan, but merely of inspecting the carrying out of contracts connected with supplies for the Belgian Army."

WANTS A FOOD DICTATOR.

German Paper Says the Government Is Not Solving the Problem.

COLOGNE, (via London,) Nov. 24.—The Volks Zeitung in a sharp article urges the Reichstag, which meets next week, to call the Government to account for its failure to deal adequately with the problem of supplying foodstuffs.

"To supply the German nation with provisions is at present the most important military question and one which must be carried through before Winter," the Volks Zeitung says. "This doubtless will be recognized by the supreme army command, whose orders will find no opposition. We recommend the appointment of an economic dictator in military clothing."

The article closes with an attack on Herr von Stein, recently appointed Under Secretary of the Interior, on the ground that he has not dealt energetically enough with the food problem.

RUSSIAN GENERALS AT ODDS?

Budapest Told of Dissension Between Ruszky and His Subordinates.

Serious divergence of opinion exists between General Ruszky, commander in chief of the Russian forces, and General Ivanoff, one of his principal subordinates, according to a Budapest dispatch to German newspapers.

Ruszky, the dispatch asserts, desires to remain on the defensive and reorganize his forces, whereas Ivanoff is in favor of a stronger offensive and has several times acted against the wishes of Ruszky.

One of those who supports Ivanoff, the dispatch continues, is General Kuropatkin, who was commander in chief of the Russian forces in Manchuria in the Russo-Japanese war.

BRITAIN WATCHES SAILORS.

Aliens Require Passports to Land, Home Office Rules.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The United States Embassy was notified today by the Home Office that alien sailors on ships that touch at British ports must have passports if they attempt to land. The notification followed the recent arrest of a number of Americans, members of the crew of the American Line steamship New York, who came ashore without passports.

If sailors were unable to produce passports, the Home Office notification said, they must remain on board ship while their vessels were in port.

GIVES GERMAN SHIP LOSSES.

One-seventh of Merchant Tonnage Sunk, Captured, or Interned.

LONDON, Nov. 13, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Of the 5,459,296 tons of which the German merchant marine consisted at the beginning of the war, 230,000 tons have been captured by the British Navy and 38,000 tons by other Allies, while 117,000 tons have been sunk and 397,000 tons interned in ports of the British Empire. The remainder, except the few ships at large in the Baltic, are in German and neutral harbors.

These figures were given out by Sir Owen Philipps, while presiding at a meeting of a British shipping company.

Spy Suspect Held for U. S. Detectives

NEWTON, N. J., Nov. 24.—On receipt of orders from the United States Secret Service offices in New York today, Under Sheriff Albert T. Lyons announced that he would hold Otto Letzin, a German spy suspect in jail here, until Federal detectives can question him regarding his antecedents and activities. Letzin was arrested Nov. 2, while, it is alleged, he was attempting to break into the store of Alfred Robbins & Son of Middle Village. He said he was a civil engineer, and had been in the German army.

RUIN OF POLAND LAID TO GERMANS

London Times Paints Picture of Spoliation and Argues Against Aid from America.

TELLS OF SEIZURES OF FOOD

Taken for the Army While Poles Starved—Factories and Raw Material Confiscated.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A dark picture of conditions in Russian Poland, incidentally affording an argument against the necessity of providing food by charity, is painted in an article which will be published in The Times tomorrow. "A leading member of the so-called Polish Independence Party," which remains in close touch with the Supreme Polish National Committee of Austrian Poland, is responsible for the statements.

The Times explains that the latter committee created and is responsible for the Polish legions fighting with the Austro-Hungarian Army against Russia, and says that the author of the memorandum, therefore, cannot be supposed to entertain hostile bias, at least against Germany's Austrian ally.

"One of the main features of the German administration in Poland," says the memorandum, "is the attempt to exploit the occupied territory economically to the utmost. Every new regulation aims at getting as much as possible out of the country, although the German authorities try to disguise this tendency in different ways.

"It is explained by reasons of strategy, of order, of policy, and even of humanity. The German authorities are especially anxious to give an appearance of humanitarianism to their policy in Russian Poland."

The memorandum says that Berlin's relief activity was short-lived. In March, 1915, Field Marshal von Hindenburg, it says, proclaimed his famous order of reprisal for the destruction of Memel (East Prussia) by the Russians, under which the Polish districts were to answer by contributions and other burdens. The German press raised its voice against contributions for Russian Poland.

Polish Food Supplies Seized.

By an order of April 27, the memorandum continues, all grain and potatoes, after one and one-half poods (about fifty-five pounds) had been left as a supply for each inhabitant until harvest, were to be delivered to a Posen company mentioned in the order. The order explained that the purpose was to provide flour for districts where there was a shortage. The peasants in the District of Kujavy, who had plenty of grain, which they were keeping for an hour of need, were exhorted to give up grain for famine sufferers in Dombrova. That district received an absolutely insufficient supply, but on July 1 an order appropriating the rest of the grain for the German Army was enforced.

"This order," the memorandum says, "extended confiscation to the coming harvest, without any pretense of philanthropy or humanitarianism."

Asserting that from the first the Germans "condemned the industries of Russian Poland to perdition," the memorandum gives long details of alleged destruction or confiscation of property. It says that virtually all the coal-mining machinery in the district of Dombrova was destroyed in the Autumn of 1914 "for strategical reasons," and that the population, dependent on the mines, were made desperate thereby.

Other incidents cited are the withdrawal of the State Bank, the absorption of the country's fuel supply, the requisitioning of many commodities and of quantities of factory machinery necessary for the country's industries, which were taken to Germany, and the seizure of factories and raw material to the value of $25,000,000.

40,000 Workmen Deported.

Payment for requisitioned property, the memorandum asserts, was made a matter of grace on a very inadequate basis, and to be settled after the war. The worst blow is described as having been the inducing of skilled labor to go to Germany under pressure, 40,000 persons having done so.

As a result of the foregoing measures, the memorandum says, hundreds of thousands of working class families are faced with starvation; manufacturers are keeping many persons virtually on charity; and 250,000 persons in Lodz are living on $30,000 to $45,000 per week.

The article says the Germans have established a monopoly in coal, for which they charge exorbitant prices; have inflated the currency; have compelled local authorities to pay for repairs to roads and railways which are used only for military purposes; have confiscated Government estates; denuded forests; placed incredibly high customs tariffs on the necessaries of life; compelled all persons to carry expensive passports, from which alone the Kaiser's Government has realized $5,000,000, and levied high fines on towns and persons for violations of laws.

"The population," the memorandum concludes, "tired out by the war and ruined by so many disasters, accepts them in an apathetic mood. There is the reflection, however, that one does not ruin economically a country in which one expects to stay."

Many districts, the memorandum says, were threatened with famine as early as the Autumn of 1914. The industrial regions and coal districts of Dombrova and Czestochowa were completely cut off from external food supplies, but local organizations were doing wonders in their attempts to save the population from starving.

Says Berlin Asked for Our Charity.

"The news of their distress," the statement adds, "spread throughout Europe and America, giving rise to the formation of relief committees. A committee was formed by Henryk Sienkiewicz, the author, in Switzerland, and the Rockefeller Institute (Foundation) discussed philanthropic action. Even official circles in Berlin announced their adhesion to this philanthropic work, undertaken with American money, and in the newspapers humanitarian proclamations appeared, signed by German officials, asking for contributions for Russian Poland, threatened by famine.

"The Polish population of the occupied districts accepted these measures with skepticism, clearly understanding that this was not a case for philanthropy; that there was no need to have recourse to outside help to ward off famine; that Russian Poland by itself produces enough grain and other foodstuffs to feed its population abundantly."

Throughout the Autumn of 1914, says the writer, thousands of German wagons carried off grain, potatoes, and other foodstuffs which were taken into Germany. The Germans brought threshing machines and even machines for digging potatoes in order to provide themselves systematically with food. On their return in the Winter, although there was plenty of food in the country, they forbade it being transported from one district to another on the pretext of preventing speculation.

Thousands of bushels of potatoes were rotting in some districts, says the statement, while across the borders the populations were dying from epidemics due to starvation. The German agents of the company from Posen to which the German military authorities had given the sole right to trade in foods and other produce made requisitions on villages and manors until the country was bare of food, while the Berlin Relief Committee appealed to the German public, fed on Polish grain, for contributions and alms for the hungry Poles.

FOOD RIOTS IN POLAND.

Situation Aggravated by German Domination of Relief Work.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A dispatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Company says:

"Food riots are frequent in Poland. The shortage of supplies is so great in the towns around Warsaw that even the wealthy are unable to obtain sufficient food. As a consequence outbreaks are of almost daily occurrence, and involve fighting between citizens and the German troops.

"The situation has been made worse by the refusal of General von Besseler, Governor General of Poland, to allow the Polish Relief Committee to work except under German control, to which the committee declines to assent. The mortality among children has trebled since the cold weather began."

HINDENBURG'S LINES ARE DENTED AGAIN

Russians Force the Germans to Retire at Several Points on His Front.

BERLIN ADMITS SOME LOSS

But Asserts That Borsemuende and Janopol Farms Have Been Recaptured.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 24. (via London, Thursday, Nov. 25.)—The following communication from General Headquarters was issued today:

On the Riga front, in the region west of Lake Kanger, the Germans were again obliged to retire at some points. Before the southern extremity of Dalen Island the Germans attacked yesterday morning and occupied Borsemuende Farm. Reserves, which were hurried up, enabled us to counter-attack and reoccupy the farm.

The same day one of our newly formed Lithuanian regiments, by an impetuous attack on the enemy, again displayed the greatest courage.

On the left bank of the Dvina, north of Illuxt, we occupied, after an engagement, the Janopol farm.

Below Dvinsk there was an artillery duel. We repulsed by our fire a German counter-attack on the trenches north of Lake Sventen which we had previously taken.

The other sectors of the front from the Gulf of Riga to the Pripet River are quiet.

On the left bank of the Styr, in the region of the Village of Novo Podcherevitchi, there have been fierce skirmishes; an engagement near the Village of Kizlinitchi continues.

The remainder of the front running southward, including Galicia and the Caucasus, is unchanged.

BERLIN, Nov. 24, (via London.)—The following report of the operations in the Russian front was issued today by the War Office:

Army Group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg: Southeast of Riga an attack upon the Borsemuende Farm was made by Russians from Demorte. Six officers and 700 men fell into our hands, and two machine guns were captured. An advance post in Janopol, north of Illuxt, was obliged to withdraw before a Russian attack. By means of a counter-attack the village was recaptured.

Army Group of Prince Leopold of Bavaria: There was no change in the situation.

Army Group of General von Linsingen: Attacks made by Russian divisions northeast of Czartorysk and near Subiszcze, north of the Kovel-Rovno Railway line, were repulsed. Fifty prisoners were taken, and three machine guns were captured.

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 25.—The Germans are still making desperate efforts to advance in the direction of the Dvina, says a Petrograd dispatch to The Times. They have built a new road for the transport of ammunition and heavy guns, and huge quantities of ammunition have been forwarded to the region of Ikskul, Friedrichstadt, and Jacobstadt.

The position of the Russian armies has been enormously strengthened, however, by an abundance of ammunition, the correspondent says. Gunners now show to infantrymen inscriptions, written by workmen on ammunition boxes, which read in substance: "Don't spare shells. Plenty more are coming, comrades. We are working hard to keep you supplied. Cheer up."

RAW LEVIES FOR HINDENBURG?

Russians Say He Reported He Couldn't Take the Offensive.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 24, (via London.)—The military authorities have published an account of an address delivered by Field Marshal von Hindenburg to troops which arrived at Libau from Germany a month ago. The Field Marshal is thus quoted:

"I know none among you adopted a military career. I know each of you left a family. Therefore, I shall not demand reckless attacks from you, but I hope you will beat off the attacks the Russians make."

According to this information, the Field Marshal reported to the German General Headquarters that with such troops it would be hardly possible to think of active operations.

Letters given out here, said to have been taken from Germans, contain complaints of hunger. A passage from one of these letters says: "We are ready to fight for our country, but are not willing to starve, and the scarcity of food is becoming more and more painful."

Lettish volunteers are distinguishing themselves in the number of prisoners they are taking. They are availing themselves of their knowledge of local conditions to make daring excursions.

JAPAN COULD SEND AN ARMY

Statement Credited to Foreign Minister by Correspondent.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Japan is willing to send a strong army to Europe if the need arises, the Petit Parisien says. A statement to this effect is credited to Baron Ishii, Japanese Foreign Minister, by G. Lechartier, Tokio correspondent of that newspaper. He quotes Baron Ishii as follows:

"Thus far we have not considered the eventuality of sending an army to Europe, but if there is occasion therefor, Japan will immediately send in one expedition a very strong army. Japan does not intend to risk a check."

In regard to the supplying of arms for Russia by Japan, the Foreign Minister is said to have remarked:

"Russia does not need men, as only one-third of the men mobilized have been armed. By the end of the month Japan will have done much toward arming completely the other two-thirds."

New Russian Loan Progressing.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 24, (via London.)—The State Bank reports satisfactory subscriptions to the new Russian loan of 1,000,000,000 rubles ($500,000,000.)

MIKADO REVERES ANCESTOR.

Goes to Mount Unebi to Pay Homage at Jimmu's Mausoleum.

NARA, Japan, Nov. 24.—Emperor Yoshihito arrived here today to pay homage before the mausoleum of Emperor Jimmu, first Emperor and founder of the Japanese Empire, which is built on Mount Unebi, in Yamato Province.

Emperor Jimmu, says Japanese history, was a son of Ugalafukiayezu-no-mikoto, a grandson after five generations of the great sun goddess Amaterasu Omikami.

The whole Court followed the Emperor from Kyoto to Nara, and after resting at the imperial lodge proceeded to the mausoleum. Great crowds assembled in the streets and on the hillsides to view the cortège and pay respect to the Emperor.

Following a Shinto prayer read by the chief ritualist at the altar, Emperor Yoshihito, escorted by his retinue, moved before the altar, and, offering worship, informed the spirit of Emperor Jimmu of his felicitous coronation. He was followed by the Crown Prince, the Princes and Princesses of the blood, and other members of the imperial family.

The imperial train returned to Nara accompanied by the whole retinue, and thence departed for Kyoto.

WHITLOCK TO STAY IN BELGIAN POST

Minister, Thin and Careworn, So Announces; Sea Trip a Welcome Rest.

SILENT ON ALL WAR TOPICS

Will Have Thanksgiving Dinner in New York, Then Go to Washington to Report to Department.

Brand Whitlock, the United States Minister to Belgium, returned yesterday on the Holland-America liner Ryndam for a rest, accompanied by his wife. He looked careworn and thinner than when he left New York to take his post before the war, but said he had been benefited much by the sea trip home.

Any report that Mr. Whitlock was not on good terms with the German officials in Brussels was dispelled yesterday morning at Quarantine, when he told the reporters that he intended to return to his post on the Rotterdam on Dec. 28. Mr. Whitlock said it was impossible for him, because of his position, to discuss affairs in Belgium or make any statement whatever regarding the war in Europe.

"I intend to eat my Thanksgiving dinner in New York at the Ritz-Carlton," he continued, "and shall remain there until the end of the week. Next week I shall go to Washington to report to the State Department and make the customary statement of a returning Minister. After I have finished my business in Washington I shall go to my home in Toledo and stop over in Cleveland to see my mother on the way."

Glad to Be Here for Dinner.

Mr. Whitlock said he was glad to get here before Thanksgiving, because he had long looked forward to it, and with the weather the Ryndam encountered it looked for a time as if he would eat turkey at sea. He said the sea voyage had benefited him much in spite of the rough water, and that his health had improved since he had a nervous attack in October which kept him to his room for three weeks.

Although Mr. Whitlock declined to be interviewed on Belgium or Miss Cavell, he did not mind being photographed, and posed on the deck of the Ryndam with his wife as the liner steamed up from Quarantine to her pier in Hoboken. The moving picture men were there and followed him up to the moment when he entered an automobile to go to the hotel. Mrs. Whitlock, who wore a blue tailored costume, a purple turban and red fox furs, carried her pet Pekingese Mieka in her arm. Mrs. Whitlock was met at the pier by her mother, Mrs. G. R. Brainard, who has been waiting at the Ritz-Carlton since Monday for the Ryndam to arrive.

Mr. Whitlock was met at Quarantine by a delegation from Toledo, consisting of Marshal Sheppy, Charles M. Milroy, Mayor-elect of Toledo, and Mr. Whitlock's former law partner, N. C. Wright. When they came alongside the Ryndam on the revenue cutter Calumet, the Minister called out to Mr. Milroy:

"Congratulations and my heartiest sympathy. I know what you have got to go through."

Declines Neutrality Ride.

Collector Dudley Field Malone whizzed down to Quarantine on the new power launch Neutrality, which is said by harbor officials to "run rings" round any torpedo boat destroyers on guard duty in New York. The Collector hailed Mr. Whitlock through a megaphone and asked if he would like to go up to New York on the Neutrality, but the Minister, after seeing her performance, declined with thanks.

When reporters called in the afternoon at the hotel to see if Mr. Whitlock had changed his mind and decided to give an interview, a clerk gave out the following:

"Mr. and Mrs. Brand Whitlock ordered a dozen oysters each for luncheon this afternoon. In giving his order to the head waiter, Mr. Whitlock explained that he had not been able to get an American oyster for two years."

The Ryndam was two days late on account of northwesterly gales and the seas, which smashed the keels of two lifeboats and tore away half of her name in electric lights riveted to the side. After leaving Falmouth, on Nov. 12, the Ryndam ran into a gale which lasted two days, and on the 17th there was a worse storm, which reduced the Ryndam's speed to five knots.

Among the passengers were Henry J. Duveen, the Fifth Avenue art dealer, and his nephew, Joseph J. Duveen, who have been to England and France to purchase works of art.

Miss Camilla McCollum returned on the Ryndam after spending three years abroad studying music. She won the International Gold Medal in Brussels at the Conservatorie of Music in 1913, and after the war began she joined the Red Cross in France and received a silver medal from President Poincaré.

WILL GO BACK TO BRUSSELS.

Whitlock to Resume Post at Old Belgian Capital.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Brand Whitlock is not expected to come to Washington until Friday.

At the State Department the statement was made today that Mr. Whitlock would continue in his post as Minister to Belgium and that he would return to Brussels, the former capital of Belgium, which is now in possession of the German authorities during the military occupancy of most of Belgium by the German armies.

R. BELMONT LOSES FINGER.

Financier's Son Thrown at Races—Horse Steps on His Hand.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—It was learned today that Raymond Belmont, son of August Belmont of New York, lost a finger at the races at Warrenton, Va., last week. He was thrown from his horse, which trampled on his hand. The iron shoe cut through the finger bone. Mr. Belmont came to the Emergency Hospital here, where the finger was amputated.

At the hospital tonight it was denied that Mr. Belmont's shoulder blade also had been injured. The patient left the hospital several days ago. It was said that he was still in Washington, but his address was not known.

MAYOR BLUM OFFICIATES.

Marries His Daughter, Bertha, to Abram S. Ginsburg in Nutley.

NUTLEY, N. J., Nov. 24.—Mayor Abram Blum of Nutley today performed the ceremony that made his daughter, Miss Bertha Blum, the wife of Abram Stephen Ginsburg of Passaic. The ceremony took place in the commission chambers of the Town Hall, Mayor Blum standing in his accustomed place at the Mayor's desk. Mrs. William Longfeller, a sister of the bride, and Town Clerk Oscar S. Kirkely were the only witnesses.

Mrs. Ginsburg is a graduate of the Nutley High School in the class of 1901, and of the Trenton Normal School two years later. Up to a year ago she was a teacher in the Nutley schools. The bridegroom, who was born in Egypt, came to this country several years ago from Riga, Russia. He is a graduate of New York University, where he received degrees of civil engineer and architect.

HAD CLEVER MACHINE TO FALSIFY WEIGHING

Butcher Ermann's Scales Registered Seven Ounces That Turkeys Did Not Possess.

With choice turkeys selling as high as thirty-five cents a pound, Commissioner Joseph Hartigan's men from the Mayor's Bureau of Weights and Measures yesterday arrested 125 butchers, accusing them of selling short weight. Most of them were locked up for arraignment today, but one, Frederick Ermann, of 2,216 Eighth Avenue, the Commissioner himself brought to Night Court, saying that Ermann had one of the most ingenious swindling schemes he had ever seen.

The Commissioner said his inspectors had suspected Ermann for some time of selling short weight, but had never been able to catch him. Yesterday a woman inspector visited his butcher shop, which is between 119th and 120th Streets, and bought a four-pound turkey, paying 28 cents a pound.

She carried it around the corner to the Commissioner's automobile where the official scales showed it to be just seven ounces short of full weight. So they waited for an hour or so and then Inspector Albert Lutz went in and bought a five-pound bird. He weighed his outside also and it, too, was just seven ounces below weight. So then he entered the shop and arrested Ermann.

The Commissioner said they found Ermann had been using a computing scale which rested on the counter and beneath it he had fashioned an arrangement which he operated with a pedal beneath the counter and which automatically increased by exactly seven ounces the recorded weight of anything placed on the scales.

Mr. Hartigan said that Ermann had sold more than 200 turkeys yesterday, and so had profited, at 28 cents a pound, on between ninety and 100 pounds falsely recorded by the pressure of his foot, a gain of more than $25.

Ermann pleaded guilty when he was arraigned before Magistrate Koenig. He was held for trial in Special Sessions.

NEW-BORN CRIPPLE TO BE LEFT TO DIE

present he and Dr. Rosenberg deemed it advisable not to tell her anything about the real condition of her child. She has been told, merely, that the baby is "not quite well" and must spend at least several weeks in the hospital.

Dr. Holt, who is a visiting physician at the Babies' Hospital, is now in charge of the case. When sought by a TIMES reporter he sent word that he had "nothing to say." This typewritten statement was handed out at the hospital to all inquirers:

> The case in question is not an uncommon form of deformity, some of which are favorable for operation; in these cases it is performed. Others are unfavorable, where the risks of operation are great and the hope of any improvement or the saving of life negligible. The child will be kept under observation.

STATE OPENS INQUIRY.

Illinois Official Takes Up Bollinger Baby's Case.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Coroner Hoffman today received a request from Dr. C. St. Clair Drake, Secretary of the State Board of Health, at Springfield, for a transcript of the testimony at the inquest in the case of the Bollinger baby, which was allowed to die because of supposed irremediable deformities. Dr. Drake said that he would make a careful study of the facts and of the action of Dr. J. H. Haiselden, who attended the child.

"I am not in a position to say what action will be taken," said Dr. Drake, "but I can at least promise that the case will receive my careful consideration. I have received a large number of demands from physicians and from the laity demanding that the circumstances surrounding the baby's death be investigated."

"HURRAH FOR DR. HOLT!"

Dr. Haiselden Indorses Action of New York Specialist.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 24.—"Hurrah for Dr. Holt!" said Dr. Haiselden tonight, when he had been told of the Roberts baby case in New York.

"I'm glad he did just what he did. Even if the baby had the highest mental faculties, I would still be inclined to let it go. The greater its mentality the greater would be its own humiliation over its deformity as it grew up. Dr. Holt, the most eminent authority on babies, has done exactly as he should have done."

CARNEGIE AT 80 HOPES TO REACH 100

Gives Thanks for Health, Sees World Growing Better, and Prays for Peace.

HAS GIVEN $400,000,000

Head of Foundation Estimates Great Public Benefit of Ironmaster's Efforts.

Andrew Carnegie, 80 years old this day and feeling so well and so satisfied with this world that he would like to pass the remainder of his century here, gives thanks for excellent health.

One regret only he has in looking back over the four-score birthdays and that is that he never became a newspaper man. Something always prevented his achieving the ambition of his life. With this thought in mind, he called his secretary yesterday afternoon and dictated an interview.

Mr. Carnegie was born in the little town of Dunfermline, Scotland, and was the son of a master weaver. At the age of ten he was brought to the United States by his parents, and after becoming a bobbin boy, a telegraph operator, a bridge builder, and finally a millionaire, he came to live at No. 2 West Ninety-first Street.

He was playing clock golf in the great yard at the back of the house shortly before the interview. Mr. Carnegie did not give a very long talk and edited his few words with a vigorous hand. He summed it all up as follows:

"Say to the reporters who usually call on my birthday that all goes well with me. Dr. Garmany marvels at the splendid return to health which a Summer on the Maine coast has wrought.

"The world grows better and we are soon to see blessed peace restored and a world court established, when, in the words of Burns:

"Man to man the world o'er Shall brothers be for a'that."

Mr. Carnegie, it will be remembered, had a severe attack of grippe last Spring and to recuperate went to Bar Harbor, where he spent the Summer out of doors. It was announced on his return in the Autumn that he was much improved in health, and ever since he has been taking life easy. He walks in his garden, often with his collie Laddie by his side, and sometimes he tries the gentle pastime of clock golf.

Two or three times a week he handles the clubs in a more vigorous way on the links at St. Andrew's. He follows the course of the news of the world day by day and also reads books in his library. Mr. Carnegie is taking a sunny view of life and is thinking much of the days of his early struggles before he won wealth and fame. That was why, perhaps, when his secretary was asked if there might not be a longer interview, word was sent that there might be reprinted a story of the many apprenticeships which brought the lad of Dunfermline to the Highlands of Fifth Avenue.

Mr. Carnegie always passes his birthdays quietly. A few friends will drop in to see him this afternoon, comrades of the early years mostly, and tonight there will be the family dinner, at which will be several of the men who were closely associated with him in those stirring days in Pittsburgh through which he rose to affluence.

HIS GIFTS TOTAL $400,000,000.

Bulk of His Accumulations Turned Back to Public, Says Eulogist.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 24.—Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, head of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Education, of New York, was the speaker at the closing exercises of the Carnegie birthday celebration today and announced at the beginning of his address on the retired iron master that he had given away $400,000,000 and wasn't through yet. Dr. Pritchett said in part:

"The most noteworthy thing about Mr. Carnegie's preaching of the doctrine of the consecration of wealth is the fact that his practice has squared with his preaching. The great bulk of his accumulations, nearly $400,000,000, has been turned back by him to the public to be used in the cause of human betterment. He is today a man of moderate fortune. This fact is the first astounding accomplishment to which the historian of the future will point when he comes to estimate Mr. Carnegie's service.

"The influences which he sought to stimulate were the promotion of good reading through public libraries, the cause of scientific research through a research institution, education through the Carnegie Foundation, human idealism through the Hero Fund, international peace through the Peace Endowment, intelligent philanthropy through the Carnegie Corporation."

Aldermen and had charge of the matter. A tentative agreement had been made and printed. A question was raised by some tax-paying association whether the city owned four and one-half miles of land lying under water from Seventy-second Street to Spuyten Duyvil. The agreement contemplated that the railroad had an absolute right to the land by reason of its long occupation. I had claimed in the case that the railroad had gone into the land under license and had never acquired title. I held that the land belonged to the city, and so stated at a public hearing on May 27, 1913."

Mr. Burr added that he had gone thoroughly into the question of the legality of removing the tracks and had reached the conclusion that the Board of Estimate had the power to order their removal. In the meantime, however, he said Martin Saxe was instrumental in having legislation passed empowering the city to remove the tracks. In 1911, he said, the Legislature passed a bill allowing the city to come to an agreement with the New York Central regarding their removal.

"And in my opinion," he said, "it was Mayor Mitchel who held up the enforcement of this law."

Mitchel Excited in Hospital.

As soon as he left the stand Mr. Polk called upon the Mayor at Roosevelt Hospital. The Mayor was greatly excited and asked that reporters be sent to him so that he could make a statement. The hospital nurse in attendance said that any excitement might give him a relapse and it was agreed that Mr. Polk should make a statement in the Mayor's behalf. This is what Mr. Polk said:

"The true story of Mr. Burr's dismissal was absolutely the reverse of his testimony. Mr. Burr was let go because he was not active enough in getting those tracks off Eleventh Avenue. The first thing Mayor Mitchel said to me when I took office was that we must have those tracks removed and I told Mr. Burr of the Mayor's orders. The Mayor was not satisfied with what he had accomplished and it was decided to let him go.

"I tried to spare Mr. Burr's feelings before the Thompson Committee today, but I must say now that in our office Mr. Burr was considered ineffective. Mayor Mitchel insisted on a new man and his resignation was asked for. As to his coming to see me when I was sick, that is absolutely false. I have no recollection of it. His statement that his resignation was asked for five days later is also false. He was notified a month in advance that his resignation was desirable."

Mr. Polk came over from Washington at his own request to be allowed to testify, and while he was on the stand he had many heated arguments with Chairman Thompson. The latter referred Mr. Polk to the letter written by William F. Sheehan, counsel to the electric light company, to Commissioner Maltbie, in which Mr. Sheehan threatened to "air the matter in court" if the Public Service Commission did not grant the order for the purchase of Amsterdam Company stock by the Edison Company.

"That letter," said Senator Thompson, "was written some time before the Gubernatorial election of 1914. It is strange that after its receipt the commission made the order allowing the purchase of stock."

Committee Called Disgraceful.

"I think a reflection like this is absolutely disgraceful," said Mr. Polk, trying hard to control his anger. "I think that when a man like Mr. Maltbie gives his best efforts to the service of the people he should not be the victim of insinuations of that kind. Your actions are absolutely disgraceful in all these things. You simply draw conclusions, as you did in my case. You have been giving inspired statements to the newspapers all the time, attacking men in office whose work is really deserving of praise."

"I know that there is no lawyer in Niagara County who could send a letter like that and get such quick action," replied Thompson.

"I have no interest in the matter at all," returned Mr. Polk. "I saw Mr. Maltbie yesterday and told him what I was going to testify to. At first I had no recollection at all as to dates, but I did recollect that I had not withdrawn any objections of the city, and I did not advise Mr. Maltbie as to the course the Public Service Commission should pursue."

"Well," said Senator Thompson, "between all the shifting of responsibilities we may yet be able to rescue the Amsterdam Company franchise."

"And in the meantime, Senator, do not sacrifice too many reputations," said Mr. Polk.

"I do not care whose reputations get in the way," retorted Senator Thompson. "This committee will go on with its investigation."

Mr. Polk then related how early in 1914 Mr. Maltbie had told him of the Edison Company's application for the purchase of the 122 shares of Amsterdam stock. He said he understood from Mr. Maltbie that the other members of the commission favored granting the request. Later, he said, Mr. Maltbie told him that the attorneys for the Edison Company, Hatch & Sheehan, were making matters very disagreeable for him.

"On July 10," he went on, "I wrote the Public Service Commission that the city would not withdraw its objections to the purchase, and some time between July 10 and July 24 Mr. Maltbie came to see me again. He told me that if the purchase of stock did not constitute a merger the commission would not oppose it and the city's interests would be protected. I told Mr. Maltbie again that I would not withdraw the objections of the city."

Senator Thompson remarked that there was a very marked difference between what the witness and Mr. Maltbie remembered in connection with the Amsterdam case.

When Mr. Burr took the stand he said:

"I am certain that when Commissioner Maltbie agreed to the Edison purchase of the Amsterdam stock he was laboring under some misapprehension, because he fully knew the attitude of the city in its opposition to the purchase. No one asked my advice when the order for the purchase was signed as to whether it would hurt the city's case. It would have been well for the Public Service Commission to have held out and given the benefit of the doubt to the city."

Commissioner George V. S. Williams was again on the stand in the afternoon and answered more questions about his decision to allow the Kings County Lighting Company to charge 95 cents for gas. The committee adjourned until tomorrow morning.

MAY TAX GASOLINE ONE CENT A GALLON

Favored by Administration as One Way to Get Revenue for National Defense.

ADDED INCOME TAX ALSO

Would Fall on Large Fortunes—President May Confine Message to Topic of Defense.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The means to be employed to obtain the additional revenue needed for national defense continues to be an absohbing topic. There were further indications today that the Administration was inclined to look with favor on the suggestion of increasing taxes on large incomes. It is apparent, however, to officials of the Administration that such increases may not be sufficient, and, from what was said today in quarters close to the Administration, there is a strong inclination toward advocating the imposition of a tax of 1 cent per gallon on gasoline, although inquiry made by Government officials had produced the impression that the tax would be unpopular among farmers who use gasoline engines, and that oil weel owners would make strenuous protests against the proposal. The impression was gathered, however, that these objections had not made any great impression on the Administration. Another suggestion that has come before the President and his Cabinet is that a tax be imposed on bank checks, but nothing has developed to show that this would be recommended by the President.

At the outset of the consideration given to the character of revenue-raising measures the President and his advisers were of the opinion that the determination of these should be left to the House, without suggestion from the Executive, but this idea met with such criticism from the Congressional leaders that the Administration, it is understood, is now inclined to meet Congress half way in devising a scheme with that end in view.

In a letter to Representative James A. Hamill of Jersey City, President Wilson indicates that he will confine his annual address to Congress to the subject of national preparedness. In confining the address to a single topic he will follow a precedent established by Grover Cleveland, who devoted a long annual message to advocacy of tariff reform, ignoring all other matters.

Representative Hamill had written urging the President to include in his address some reference to the necessity of adhering to the principle of civil service reform. In his response the President said he believed it to be better to confine his recommendations to one general subject.

The President was locked in his study in the White House all day to put the finishing touches on his address—literally locked in, White House officials found who tried to get a paper from the study. It was the President's desire, it was said, to finish the address before he went to bed so that he would be free to enjoy the Thanksgiving holiday.

The Public Printer was at the White House today making inquiry about the address, and it was arranged that a final copy of it should be delivered to him as soon as it was completed so that it could be set up in type at the Government Printing Office and printed copies delivered at the White House for ultimate delivery to the Senate and the House coincident with the reading of the address by the President on Tuesday, Dec. 7. The President is drafting the address on his own typewriter, and the impression was given today that he was not having clerical assistance.

SECURITY LEAGUE MEETING.

Many Men of Note to Attend Convention in Chicago.

The program of the first convention of the National Security League, which meets in Chicago on Saturday, was given out here yesterday. Among the New York delegates who will leave on the Twentieth Century Limited tomorrow afternoon, are S. Stanwood Menken, F. V. S. Crosby, Treasurer of the Union Pacific System; H. J. Davenport, President of the University Club of Brooklyn; E. T. Carter, Dr. William M. Polk, and Henry A. Wise Wood, of the Naval Advisory Board. The Massachusetts delegation will be headed by Governor Walsh of that State, among the members of the delegation being Adjt. Gen. W. M. Cole, President T. M. Hollis of Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Judge E. L. Logan, and Dr. H. A. Beal.

The Michigan delegation will include many of the professors of the University of Michigan, while ex-United States Senator Lafayette Young will head the delegates from Iowa. Ex-Secretary of War Luke E. Wright is among the Tennessee delegates, while ex-Secretary of War Jacob M. Dickinson and President Harry Pratt Judson of the University of Chicago, are members of the Illinois delegation.

SOUTH FOR PREPAREDNESS.

Senator Robinson Says That Wilson's Plan Has Its Approval.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The sentiment in favor of national preparedness which returning Congressmen have reported in the East, Middle West, and Far West, seems to be strong also in the South. Senator Robinson of Arkansas today declared his approval of the President's plan for moderate increases. In his own State, where Mr. Robinson has been making speeches on the subject, he said that while differences of opinion did exist, his declarations for increases in the navy and such increases in the army as the protection of oversea possessions required, were always enthusiastically received.

"My own idea," said Mr. Robinson, "is that we need a materially larger navy and an increase of our army reserves, whether that be in the form of enlarged and improved militia, or the establishment of the proposed continental army. But by putting our navy on the proper footing we will do away with the necessity for ever having a large standing army and become militaristic in the European sense. With a strong navy no power can attack us. With a large army, at least within the limits proposed by any one, we would still not be able to attack a foreign country. So the thing for us to do is to increase the navy."

The suggestion that the cotton-growing States would insist through their Representatives in Congress on drastic action to lift the British blockade, does not seem to be supported as to Arkansas. Mr. Robinson said he had seen nothing to indicate a widespread demand at home for strong measures against Great Britain.

"For myself, however," added the Senator, "I am free to say that I regard the British course as outside the right and all international law. Her treatment of American commerce has been outrageous. I think the State Department should continue its strong representations on the subject, and, if necessary, increase their vigor."

AMERICAN SHOOTS WIFE.

Jealousy Said to Have Prompted Conway's Act at Havana.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 24.—Augustin Conway, a Spanish war veteran, who served in the navy, and who now is Port Captain of the Southern Pacific Steamship Line, dangerously shot his wife, also an American, today. The motive is said to have been jealousy.

Conway formerly resided at Elizabeth, N. J.

NO MERGER, SAYS SCHWAB.

Bethlehem Steel Company Too Busy—Our Prosperity to Last.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 24.—"As far as I am concerned, no merger is contemplated with any other concern, and none is even in prospect," said Charles M. Schwab, President of the Bethlehem Steel Company, today in an interview here.

"There have been all sorts of rumors to the contrary, but there is no truth in them," Mr. Schwab continued. "There is no truth, either, in the story of a consolidation of Cambria Steel with Bethlehem Steel. In fact, we are too busy filling orders to take up the matter of consolidation with anybody."

"How long is our present prosperity going to last?" he was asked.

"My opinion is that we are in for a long reign of it. You know that in 1900 I predicted that by 1920 our annual steel production would increase from 10,000,000 tons, the figure at which it stood at that time, to 40,000,000 tons, and it is now about 37,000,000, so I do not believe that I was wrong in my forecast. Steel is the barometer of all business, and with it at record-breaking heights, and the copper and oil business in splendid condition, I feel very optimistic as to the future. But war orders and tonnage going into these contracts are not cutting as large a figure as the world attributes to them."

"Do you think that the United States will become the dominant power as a manufacturing and financial nation?"

"We are already dominant in that respect. Our exports are unusually large, and splendid opportunity awaits us to increase this business."

"What do you think of the formation of the American International Corporation, with C. A. Stone as President?"

"Most excellent. There has been great need of such an organization as was formed yesterday, in order to build up our foreign trade where splendid opportunity awaits us. The greatest thing we need in this country today is the placing of our manufacturing concerns and the distribution process on an economical basis."

"Is it true that the Bethlehem Steel Company has charged off $1,500,000 as a result of the fire the other day?"

"That is absolutely correct. Our business is splendid and the outlook excellent for a long time to come."

GUNS AT GALLIPOLI ACTIVE.

Constantinople Reports a Violent Engagement at Sedd-el-Bahr.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 24, (via London.)—Violent fighting near Sedd-el-Bahr is reported in an official communication from the War Office. It follows:

On Sunday we captured a British aeroplane, which we shot down. The pilot, who has the rank of Major, was wounded slightly and was made a prisoner.

On Monday, at Sedd-el-Bahr, there was violent artillery fighting on our right wing and severe engagements with bombs in the centre.

$60,000,000 SOUGHT HERE FOR RUSSIANS

Foreign Banks Negotiating for a Credit to Pay for War Munitions in America.

INQUIRY FOR A BIGGER LOAN

Opposition from Financiers Who Want a New Commercial Treaty with the Czar's Government.

Representatives of a group of Russian banks are now negotiating with bankers here for a new credit to the amount of $60,000,000, to be used to pay for Russian purchases in the United States. When the Russian Government earlier this year borrowed $25,000,000 here on acceptances opposition to the granting of credit to Russia was encountered, and opposition is again making itself felt in connection with the proposals now being made.

The application of the representatives of the Russian banks has not been made to the bankers who handled the earlier credit for the Russian Government, but to another banking quarter. Still other negotiations for credits for Russian banks or for the Russian Government are under way, and one of the bankers concerned said yesterday that in all probability a large credit would be established for the benefit of Russia, although the present proposal might have to be modified.

The obstacles which have been encountered have become a topic of discussion in the financial community, which is interested not only in the direct financial aspects of the matter, which are closely related to the great depreciation in Russian exchange, but also in the reasons for the opposition which this financing has encountered. The Russian ruble is now quoted at 33 cents, compared with a normal rate of more than 50 cents.

New Treaty Is Urged.

This opposition is not confined to those quarters of the banking community where the granting of any aid to Russia is distasteful because of the treatment which the Russian Government has accorded to its Jewish subjects. Some of it comes from those who believe that before we enter into further important financial transactions with Russia our relations with that country should be more clearly defined than they are now in the absence of any commercial treaty between the two countries. Still another ground for opposition is the form in which it has been proposed to grant this credit.

The proposal, or one of them, for there have been several proposals, is that a credit of $60,000,000 be extended for three months, with the privilege of five renewals, to a group of Russian banks, the credit to be secured by the pledge of Russian Government bonds and by the guarantee of the Russian Government. The credit, it is understood, is to be linked with the placing of orders here, but this has been proposed in a way which has led to opposition from certain bankers who have already participated in other Russian financing, and who are still keenly interested in the development of our financial relations with Russia.

Surprise in Opposition.

From the inception of these negotiations it has been recognized in Wall Street that no support for the proposal could be expected from those bankers of the Jewish faith who are on record against the granting of any assistance to the Russian Government, directly or indirectly. In this connection was recalled the stand taken at the time of the Anglo-French loan negotiatoins by Kuhn, Loeb & Co., who stood ready to join in that loan if definite assurance could have been given that the Russian Government would derive no benefit from it. Opposition in those quarters, which is regarded as perfectly natural and the reasons for which are clearly understood, was expected. Not all of the other opposition which has been encountered was expected, and some of it has caused surprise to the bankers who have undertaken these Russian credit negotiations.

The great resources of the Russian Empire, most of them very little developed, are appreciated here, and the advantage of the American business world being in a position to establish closer financial and commercial relations with Russia to share in the development of those resources is recognized.

Russian Credit Hampered.

It is felt by some of those who are offering opposition to the present credit proposal that a commercial treaty between Russia and the United States is a prerequisite to the advantageous development of the commercial relations of the two countries, and these would let the granting of large credits wait on the signing of a treaty which would clearly define the rights of American business undertakings in Russia and at the same time define satisfactorily the privileges of American citizens visiting Russia.

The difficulties which Russian financing is encountering in the United States are not of very recent development. They first showed themselves soon after the European belligerents began to place orders for war munitions in the United States. Russia did not in all cases find it convenient to pay cash, and in many cases these orders were offered to our manufacturers on condition that Russian Government notes or bonds be accepted in full or in part payment. In may cases manufacturers refused these orders, after having sounded the market which they might expect for the notes that they would have to take in payment.

Later the Russian Government obtained a $25,000,000 credit here from a group of banks on drafts running three months and renewable for another three months. These were paid off at maturity, the funds for the purpose, it was understood at the time, being provided by Great Britain as part of the financial aid extended to her Russian ally.

MORE DROP FORD'S ADS.

Fifteen English Journals Follow Example of Daily Mail.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The Daily Mail prints a list of fifteen English journals which have refused to accept the Ford Motor Company's advertisements, on the same grounds as The Daily Mail. The Drapers Record wrote to the Ford Company:

"With reference to the advertisement business which you have been good enough to place with us we feel it necessary to ask you to explain the position of your company in relation to a speech recently reported to have been made by Mr. Ford. This gentleman, if the report is accurate, is evidently an enemy and therefore we find it necessary to ask for an explanation.

"Perhaps you will kindly inform us what position, if any, Mr. Henry Ford holds in your company. We shall feel obliged if you will inform us whether he has personally sufficient holding in capital of your company to be able to control its policy, even though he may not be an official."

In a reply dated Nov. 22 the Ford Company's Publicity Manager says:

"We shall be happy to supply the information you desire on the understanding that you will give us a list of your principal proprietors and shareholders, their nationality and a brief outline of their private occupations, political views and religious beliefs."

GETS $12,500,000 WAR ORDER

Baltimore Firm Obtains a Contract for Shells and Guns.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 24.—The Poole Engineering and Machine Company has just closed the largest contract for war material brought to Baltimore, it was reported tonight. The value is $12,500,000, and the order is for shells and one-pounder machine guns. It is estimated the concern will turn out for the Allies in the next fourteen months war material valued at $17,785,000.

Twenty thousand shells, ranging in size from 3 inches to 12 inches, have been manufactured already, and some of them are now on their way to the battlefront. Negotiations are in progress for additional contracts from Russia and its allies.

SLOAN SAILS FOR AMERICA.

Calls His Deportation a Shame—May Return to Racing Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 24.—Tod Sloan, the former jockey, who was arrested yesterday on a deportation order from the Home Secretary under the Defense of the Realm act, sailed for New York on the White Star liner Adriatic today. He said:

"When you hear the facts you will find I have been very unjustly persecuted. It is a shame that I should leave in this way. I may return to racing in America."

Reports of Reserve Board Agents Show Better Conditions All Over the Country

WASHINGTON, Nov 1—Business conditions throughout most of the country improved considerably during September, according to reports from Federal Reserve agents made public tonight by the Federal Reserve Board.

As a whole, the picture of conditions is regarded by officials as the most favorable received by the board in many months.

IT'S HERE!

The country is alive with business—the North, the South, the East and the West have their coats off, are doing a bigger business than has ever been known.

Cotton is booming.
Crops are tremendous.
Exports are increasing.
Deposits are multiplying.
Banks are bulging with money.
Loans are enormous in volume.
Railways are pressed beyond capacity.
Packing houses work three shifts a day.
Copper is a million tons behind orders.
Woolen mills are unequal to the demand.
Steel works are running twenty-four hours.
New England Factories are working overtime.

THE REGAL SHOE COMPANY counts the pulse beats of prosperity by the daily records of sales in its stores located in every section of the country—from the mills of the East to the mines of the West; from the fields of the North to the plantations of the South.

In October the REGAL SHOE STORES did the largest volume of business in a QUARTER OF A CENTURY.

When hostilities cease on the other side a world-wide revolution in trade is predicted, and we should be prepared to meet the attack of any commercial invasion.

It is just as necessary to prepare for prosperity as it is to prepare for war. Captains of American Industry must plan NOW to win the industrial battles for the trade of the world, and make that prosperity permanent.

We do not advocate taking advantage of the misfortune of Europe. BUT how are we helping the desolation abroad by disregarding the prosperity at home?

We anticipated a business boom this summer. We were ready to take advantage of it this fall. This is not war prosperity with us—the sales that swelled our October volume were all made in our American stores to the American public. AND WE ARE PREPARED TO SERVE YOU NOW.

GIMBELS

Store Closed All Day Today

The Wisdom of Early Christmas Shopping Is Very Obvious

MAY we suggest with emphasis that early Christmas shopping is a subject that should be given immediate attention, notwithstanding the fact that this is Thanksgiving Day?

The Real Christmas Buying Season Sets In Tomorrow.

Those who come will find GIMBELS transformed into a vast and beautiful store, or "Holiday Palace," as one of our enthusiastic friends has remarked.

Many changes have taken place. A magician has waved his wand, and the spirit of Christmas in all its glories has appeared.

GIMBELS is now in the full flower of its preparedness. Stocks of gift and utility merchandise are at their best.

Every part of the GIMBEL store reveals treasures of the hour.

THE GIMBEL FOREIGN ORGANIZATION HAS EXCELLED ITSELF, despite the embarrassments caused by the mighty European conflict.

Buyers who were specially sent abroad to purchase for the Holidays were particularly successful.

Six Million Dollars Worth of New Goods Now on Sale in the "Store of a Million Christmas Gifts."

Endless attractions. Gifts for everyone, and all at prices that are conspicuously moderate.

Salesforces have been increased, and will be made still larger later.

The store's service is being keyed up to concert pitch. Every one in our own fine and loyal organization is eager to be a vital factor in creating what we believe will be the largest Christmas business in the history of GIMBELS.

A Transfer greatly facilitates shopping.

WARSHIP TO MEXICO TO SAVE AMERICANS

Admiral Winslow Ordered to the West Coast, Following Indian Outrages.

WILL TAKE 275 MARINES

Cruiser San Diego is to Hurry from San Francisco to Topolobampo.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Following a conference between Representative James R. Mann, leader of the Republican minority in the House, and Secretary Lansing, orders were sent today by Secretary Daniels to Admiral Cameron McR. Winslow to proceed at once to Topolobampo, Mexico, on the Gulf of California, with his flagship, the armored cruiser San Diego to protect American and foreign interests.

Admiral Winslow is Commander in Chief of the United States Pacific Fleet. Upon his arrival at Topolobampo, five days hence, he will be directed to protect American and foreign interests, and if absolutely necessary, to land marines for that purpose. It is hoped in official circles here that no crisis will be developed, and that it will not be necessary to make a landing.

The San Diego will take to Topolobampo a detachment of 275 marines. Americans and other foreigners have been threatened at Topolobampo and Los Mochis.

In his conferences with Secretary Lansing regarding the situation in this isolated section of Mexico, Representative Mann complained that Mexicans at the two points named had been looting American property and mistreating Americans and other foreigners. As nearly as can be ascertained, the outrages have been committed by Mayo Indians and by scattered adherents of the Villista cause.

There are four other warships on the west coast for use in co-operation with Admiral Winslow's flagship. They are the cruisers Raleigh and New Orleans, which are at Guaymas, the gunboat Annapolis at Topolobampo and the Cleveland at Corinto, Nicaragua.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 24.—The cruiser San Diego began coaling today and will probably leave tomorrow noon for Topolobampo to protect Americans endangered by the second sacking of Los Mochis, Sinaloa, within a week by Villa troops.

The San Diego will take on board a battalion of the Fourth Regiment of Marines, quartered at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. An artillery company may also be taken, officers said.

Orders were received at the Mare Island Navy Yard today to commission the naval transport Buffalo, which was undergoing repairs, to carry marines to the west coast of Mexico.

LAUDS ARMY BORDER WORK.

Secretary Garrison Congratulates Major Gen. Funston and His Men.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Major Gen. Frederick Funston and the American troops on the Mexican border were today publicly commended by Secretary of War Garrison for the able manner in which they handled the serious situation along the Arizona frontier during the recent battle of Agua Prieta without involving the United States. Secretary Garrison sent to General Funston the following dispatch:

"My Dear General: I desire to express to you and, through you, to the officers and men of your command my high appreciation of the able manner in which you and they have performed duties of the most difficult and trying kind. The situations dealt with called for such a high degree of sound judgment, wise discretion, and absolute self-control that it is very remarkable that these qualities were brought to bear in such a way as to prevent the happening of any untoward incident. You have reflected credit not only upon yourself, but upon the Army of the United States and the nation which it served. I thank you on behalf of the department and, to the extent that I have the right to speak for the nation, on behalf of the nation.

"I wish it were better understood by the people how finely they have been served. I feel sure that all those who have knowledge do appreciate, and my only regret is that such knowledge is not more widespread. Sincerely yours,

"LINDLEY M. GARRISON,
"Secretary of War."

CLOSE BORDER AT NOGALES.

Our Troops Out to Prevent Drunken Villistas from Crossing Line.

NOGALES, Ariz., Nov. 24.—United States troops, with an ambulance in attendance, were rushed early tonight into position along the international boundary between this place and Nogales, Sonora, where the Villa Governor, Carlos Randall, informed an Associated Press representative that a number of Villa officers were intoxicated and beyond his control.

Other detachments of United States troopers cleared the streets on the Arizona side and barred the progress of all persons across the line in either direction. All saloons were hurriedly closed on the Sonora side and the Americans who were in them were ordered out at the point of guns.

Mounted Villa soldiers are reported to have hurled insults across the line at the American soldiers, daring them to fight. The demonstration of the Villa cavalrymen was said to have been the outgrowth of a report that United States customs officials were withholding foodstuffs from entry into Mexico.

Another report was that the forces of General Alvaro Obregon were being allowed to advance upon Nogales, Sonora, along the American side.

MEXICO HOLDS CUBAN BOATS

Havana Will Back Up Its Representations with a Warship.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Nov. 24.—The Cuban Government has determined to proceed energetically toward Mexico, because the latter several days ago seized thirty-six Cuban fishing boats driven by rough weather to take refuge at Islas Mujeres, off the northwest coast of Yucatan. The Cuban cruiser Cuba is expected to sail tomorrow for Mexico.

The Mexican authorities at first declared the boats were engaged in contraband trade, but later alleged they were fishing within the territorial waters of Mexico.

The Government's advices say the Carranzistas seized all the provisions aboard the vessels, and the Cuban sailors are now forced to subsist on biscuits.

BOY-ED MANAGED SHIP PLOT DETAILS

York in care of Room 801 at 11 Broadway. This was as follows:

> Newport News, Nov. 24, 1914.
> H. Suhren, care Nordamm, 11 Broadway, Room 801:
> Telegram received. Hope see you Wednesday. All cargo on board. Working on stores. Have letter for you.
> PHILIP VOLZ.

Philip Volz is a Baltimore agent of the North German Lloyd. The telegram, according to Government witnesses, referred to the Maria Quesada, formerly the Gladstone, which later left Newport News under Captain Suhren with papers alleged to be false, which were thrown overboard near Rio Janeiro and are said to have been recovered later from the belly of a shark.

Evidence in great detail was brought out concerning the Maria Quesada because it is one ship with which the indicted Hamburg-American Line officials deny that they were connected. Another document was a letter by Captain Suhren to Purchasing Agent Hachmeister, one of the indicted officials of the Hamburg-American Line. It was sent to arrange for the payment for supplies for the Maria Quesada by the Hamburg-American Line to J. Reyner, a ship chandler of Newport News. The letter read:

> Newport News, W. Va., Dec. 16.
> To Mr. Hachmeister,
> Hamburg-American Line, New York City.
> Dear Sir: I today wired you asking that you wire Reyner that you will honor draft amounting to $1,000, (one thousand dollars,) payable to him, (Reyner,) and trust that you have wired him to that effect. I am compelled to call at Port Limon, Costa Rica, and will need cash. I am forced to issue draft on you for this amount. Please communicate with 11 Broadway, Room 801, as stated in my wire relating to draft. The freight bill and demurrage, as per Reyner's bill to you, dated Dec. 10, amounting to $241.75, have been handed to me along with delivery receipts, and as per your advice, you are to pay Reyner this amount. Am sailing this afternoon. My next address will be Port Limon, Costa Rica, "Vapor Maria Quesada." With kind regards, I am yours very truly.

There is no signature, but the initials H. S. are in the lower left-hand corner.

Fight to Keep Out Evidence.

Testimony regarding the Hamburg-American Line and Captain Boy-Ed did not get into the record without strenuous objections by William Rand, Jr., leading counsel for the defense. Mr. Rand first said that testimony regarding Captain Hans Suhren was irrelevant, because he was in no way connected with the case of the defendants.

"I regard Captain Suhren as just as much of a conspirator as the other defendants in this case," said Mr. Wood.

Later during the argument as to the admissibility of testimony implicating the North German Lloyd, Mr. Wood said:

"You know that this indictment reads, and other conspirators to this Grand Jury unknown.'"

"Will we have more evidence against the North German Lloyd?" asked Judge Howe.

"There may be," replied Mr. Wood.

Judge Howe then admitted the testimony as to the activities of Philip Voltz of the North German Lloyd. That steamship company was mentioned on the preceding day as the recipient of large sums which Captain Boy-Ed ordered transferred to it.

An interesting fact was that the Hamburg-American Line had succeeded in using British subjects to help with the plans to use the Thor, Sommerstad, and Unita for the German navy. Frederick E. Hasler, head of the Inter-American Steamship Company, a British subject who has so far taken out only his first naturalization papers in this country, admitted on the stand that he had subchartered the three ships to the Gans Steamship Company, which acted for the Hamburg-American Line.

He identified a letter which went through his hands advising the Captain of one of the ships to take his instructions as to navigation from the supercargo, and promising liberal gratuities for obeying the supercargo.

Mr. Hasler also advised Bruce McIntyre, a coal agent of this city, that the Thor carried nothing but coal, and Mr. McIntyre made oath to a manifest to that effect, upon Mr. Hasler's word. On the witness stand, however, the Englishman denied that he had known that there was anything but coal on the ship, which is admitted to have carried various other supplies, and asserted that he had no knowledge that Fray Bentos, Uruguay, was not its real destination.

Cost of German Operation.

The concession made by the defense regarding the character of the cargo of the Thor and other ships was admitted by Judge Howe, when it was pressed by counsel for the defense, although Mr. Wood was reluctant to accept it. The table in this concession which shows how expensive was the attempt to run supplies through the lines of British cruisers was as follows:

Steamers.	Total Payment.
Thor	$113,879.72
Berwind	78,221. 5
Lorenzo	430,182.59
Heina	288,142.06
Nepos	119,037.60
Mowinckel	113,867.18
Unita	67,766.44
Sommerstad	45,826.75
Fram	55,053.23
Graecia	29,143.50
Macedonia	89,139.99
Navarra	44,183.50
Total	$1,419,394.49

The various items making up the total of $1,419,394.49 were: Chartering, $1,118,579.7[illegible]; provisions, $102,149.32; coal, $185,473.50; supplies, $34,242.17.

The cargo of the Berwind—the only ship to accomplish its mission—was made up as follows: Coal $12,104.10; provisions, $6,377.45; supplies, $1,809 34; total, $20,290.89.

Some of these ships were captured by the British; others returned to port to escape capture or because the warships they were to serve had been sunk by the British and still others were detained in American ports because their mission was suspected by American officials.

The Voyage of the Berwind.

The voyage of the Berwind was described by Captain Fritz E. Falkenberg of the Gans Steamship Company, who admitted that he had taken out the ship, although its manifest made it appear that it carried only coal, whereas it did carry naval stores of various kinds, and that he had taken the ship to Trinidad to replenish the supplies of German warships, although the destination given in the manifest was Buenos Aires. For obeying the orders of the German naval officer, who was placed on the Berwind as supercargo, Captain Falkenberg said that he received from the Hamburg-American Line $500, which is the exact sum that he was fined by the Collector of this port for that offense. But the fine was shown to have been paid by the Hamburg-American Line.

As soon as he was out of this port, Captain Falkenberg said that Supercargo Poppinghaus—one of the defendants in this trial—had advised him to stay within the three-mile limit. Poppinghaus gave the reason that he had read in New York papers rumors that British cruisers were hovering outside.

Captain Falkenberg traced on a map how he had stuck to the coast for a while, then taken the route to Porto Rico, and then started across to Trinidad. Reaching that island, he cruised back and forth for thirty-six hours, when, on Friday, Aug. 28, he met the Santa Lucia, the Pontes, the gunboat Ebers, and the Cap Trafalgar.

Guns Transferred at Sea.

Captain Falkenberg described how at sea the small gunboat Ebers had been relieved of her four-inch guns, which were mounted on the Cap Trafalgar. While Captain Falkenberg's ship was supplying others of the fleet of commerce raiders he told how the British converted cruiser Carmania had overtaken the Cap Trafalgar and sent it to the bottom after a sea fight of two hours, so that small service was rendered by the Berwind, though she was the only ship of the twelve that made delivery.

Captain Falkenberg said that during the fight his ship fled after the Pontes and later took off Supercargo Poppinghaus, who had gone on board the Pontes and made for Rio Janeiro. He was asked what he had done upon his arrival at Rio Janeiro.

"I went to see the American Consul."

"Oh, the Berwind was an American ship, was it?" asked Mr. Woods.

"Yes," replied Captain Falkenberg.

"It flew the American flag and was under the protection of American laws?"

Mr. Rand objected.

Captain Falkenberg was then asked how long he had been a ship Captain.

"Seventeen years," was the reply.

"Ever have a supercargo direct your course of navigation before?"

"No."

"That was your first experience of the kind?"

"Yes."

Took Special Oath to Get Ship Out.

Norton R. Hamilton, Collector of the Ports of Newport News and Norfolk, Va., told how the Marina Quesada had cleared the Port of Newport News through the sworn statements of a man named Brown-Willis, that he was the owner and shipper of the cargo and stores, and of George W. Atkinson, that he was a shipper of coal.

"I took precautions to make sure that the ship was all right," he said, "because of the unusual circumstances at that time."

Mr. Rand objected to this statement. Mr. Hamilton went on to testify that he had prepared a special oath to assure himself that no violation of neutrality was intended in the sailing of the vessel and that Brown-Willis had taken the oath.

Mr. Rand asked Mr. Hamilton whether or not he would have cleared the ship had he known she carried cargo other than the coal declared, and the witness, misunderstanding, declared that he should.

Mr. Wood tried to straighten the matter out in the face of Mr. Rand's objections, and the court asked:

"Would you have cleared the ship if you had known that its manifest did not correctly state its cargo?"

"I certainly would not. I was greatly disturbed and excited when I found out—"

Mr. Rand objected and took an exception to the question by the Judge.

"I am surprised," said Judge Howe, "that counsel should stand by and wait for the witness to answer the question and then make an objection to the question. The time to have objected was before the witness answered. Objection overruled."

"Wait now until Mr. Rand has objected before you answer this question," said Mr. Wood. "What would you have done if you had known that the manifest was false, that the destination was false, and that the ship was to carry its cargo in midocean to supply German warships?"

Allows Questions to Stand.

Mr. Rand objected, but Judge Howe said he would let the question stand, inasmuch as the foundation had been laid for it by the defense in cross-examination.

"I would have detained the ship and instituted proceedings against all concerned in the deception."

The latter part of the answer was stricken out on Mr. Rand's objection. During the re-examination, Mr. Wood asked more about the special oaths prepared by Mr. Hamilton.

"Although such a fuss is being made about oaths, he had no authority at all for administering this one."

"Perhaps he had more respect for an oath than some of the defendants in this case," said Mr. Wood.

Mr. Rand objected very much to this as an unwarranted insult to the defendants, and Judge Howe replied that both sides had made improper comments and that both ought to withdraw them. This was done.

THE CASE OF BOY-ED.

No Action Contemplated Unless He Took Part in False Registrations.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—While the State Department has knowledge of the evidence in possession of the Department of Justice on which the cases of Karl Buenz and others in New York are being prosecuted, it was made plain by Secretary Lansing today that there is no foundation for the declaration that the State Department had approved or disapproved the statements made by Assistant District Attorney Wood with reference to Captain Boy-Ed in his opening statement to the jury.

Mr. Wood was credited with having said that certain of his references to Captain Boy-Ed had been made with the approval of the State Department. Secretary Lansing said today that it would be incorrect to say that the State Department had approved or disapproved these assertions.

Secretary Lansing, in response to questions, made it plain that so far as he had been able to determine, Captain Boy-Ed had not been guilty of any violation of any international law if he supplied funds for sending Hamburg-American vessels from American ports to sea to provision German warships during the earlier stages of the war.

Secretary Lansing pointed out that the State Department could not take cognizance of the activities of Captain Boy-Ed unless it were demonstrated that he had violated international law or engaged in acts that might be regarded as a diplomatic impropriety.

If it were proved in the trial that Captain Boy-Ed had knowledge of the alleged false registrations charged against the Hamburg-American Line agents, the State Department would undoubtedly take notice of the matter. It is not the understanding of State Department officials that Captain Boy-Ed is on trial or that he is alleged to have had knowledge of, or to have participated in, the false registering of ships. It was also pointed out that the trial at New York was based on alleged violation of the law of the United States, and that it was not understood that violation of international law was alleged against Captain Boy-Ed.

No foreign diplomatic officer is amenable to our laws, even those for murder. Captain Boy-Ed could not be tried in an American court without the consent of his Government. The only thing this Government could do if it were proved that Boy-Ed violated our laws would be to hand him his passport or to request his Government to recall him.

The view of the State Department is understood to be that furnishing funds for sending out vessels from neutral ports to provision warships does not per se involve violation of law. In this connection it was asserted by State Department officials today that such expenditure of money was not necessarily a violation of international law, and could not be so considered unless it were proved that the same supplying vessel had repeatedly used an American port as a base for taking supplies.

As long ago as Sept. 19, 1914, it was explained, the State Department issued a statement of its position regarding merchant vessels suspected of carrying supplies to belligerent vessels. In this statement the department officially said:

> A base of operations for belligerent warships is presumed when fuel or other supplies are furnished at an American port to such warships more than once within three months since the war began, or during the period of the war, either directly or by means of naval tenders of the belligerent or by means of merchant vessels of belligerent or neutral nationality acting as tenders.

In the same official statement of the position of the Government the State Department said:

> The fact that a merchant vessel which is laden with fuel or other naval supplies seeks clearance under strong suspicion that it is the invention to furnish such fuel or supplies to a belligerent warship, is not sufficient ground to warrant its detention if the case is isolated and neither the vessel nor the warship for which the supplies are presumably intended has previously taken on board similar supplies since the war began or within three months during the period of the war.

The State Department's position has been that to constitute a violation of American neutrality or to contravene international law it must be shown that neutral territory has been used as a "base," and the essential idea of neutral territory becoming the base for naval operations by a belligerent is declared to be "repeated departure from such territory by a naval tender of the belligerent or by a merchant vessel in belligerent service which is laden with fuel or other supplies."

It was stated by Secretary Lansing today that no proof is in the possession of the State Department to show that any merchant vessel, involved in the New York cases, had been repeatedly supplying supplies from American ports "more than once within three months." But it was also admitted in State Department circles that if the trial in New York should develop information warranting a reopening of the subject, so far as the State Department was concerned, such evidence would receive careful consideration.

Wife Sues Dr. E. E. Myers Now.

Dr. Edward E. Myers of the Faculty of Columbia University, who sued his mother-in-law, Mrs. Sally Kahn, last week for $100,000 for the alleged alienation of his wife's affections, was himself sued in the Supreme Court yesterday by his wife for a separation. Mrs. Myers accused her husband of cruel and inhuman treatment. The doctor was served with the summons at his home, 823 West End Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Myers have not lived together since Nov. 10.

Not all good cars are as yet covered with Pantasote tops—but you can always take

A Genuine
Pantasote
as the sure sign of a good car

It shows that the maker of the car is giving full value. It shows that the present price cutting competition in the automobile industry has not turned that maker toward a less expensive and less durable top material.

Genuine Pantasote is the top material that is recognized as without a peer—for perfect shelter, perfect appearance, longest wear and ability to withstand all weather conditions, folding and misuse.

In buying a big thing like a car, the top material may be considered an unimportant little detail, but just think about this for a minute. Consider that the top is chiefly responsible for the trim, new and stay-new appearance of your car and your personal comfort in bad weather.

Solitaire Diamond Engagement Rings

Low Lambert prices are made possible by direct importation of Diamonds in as large quantities as the state of the market allows. Their unusual beauty is displayed by the pure color and excellent cutting. We pay spot cash, which secures for us the lowest prices for Diamonds abroad. This is one source of saving for our customers. Another source is the economical management of our store. Our rent is low compared with that of a store that "puts on style"—and makes the customers pay for it.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL IS SEEKING $800,000

Southern Mountain University Ready for Campaign to Raise Endowment Fund.

PRESIDENT IS IN NEW YORK

Tells of Work Among Blue Ridge Boys and Girls, and of the Serious Need of Money.

The Lincoln Memorial University, in Cumberland Gap, Tenn., is beginning a campaign for the raising of $500,000 additional endowment, and about $300,000 for more equipment to aid the university in its work for the mountaineers of Kentucky, Virginia, and Tennessee, near the junction of which States the institution is situated. A meeting of the Trustees of the university was held in New York last Thursday to consider the methods by which the money should be raised, and an announcement is expected shortly of the means which are to be used in the campaign.

The need of the additional funds was explained yesterday to a TIMES reporter at the Prince George Hotel by Dr. George A. Hubbell, who has been President of the university since 1910. The university was compelled last year to turn away a considerable number of students, a thing which the authorities are determined shall not occur again.

"The mountaineers do not come to us," said Dr. Hubbell, "unless they want to learn. Their spirit is the best possible, but too many of them have not the training which enables them to do things that the world wants.

"We are working to supply this need—to give these people something that they can use in getting started in life, something that will enable them to make practical use of their excellent potentialities.

New Buildings Are Much Needed.

"We need three new dormitories—two for men and one for women. It is our aim to provide accommodations for an attendance of 1,000 students. The maximum attendance at any one time last year was 450, and the total enrollment for the year was 700. Avery Hall, the present men's dormitory, and Norton Hall, used as a dormitory for women, are insufficient for the number of applicants.

"We need a new science hall, our present building being quite inadequate. We need a main college building, with an auditorium and recitation rooms. The recitations at present are held in any rooms which may be available in the other buildings. We need a laundry building, an agricultural hall to use for small fairs, the showing of stock, and similar purposes, which are of the highest value in the agricultural education of the entire community. We need, too, though this may seem strange, a building for our museum, which contains a good many articles representing phases of civilization to which most of our students are unused, as well as many things which are of value in connection with the history of the region round about the university.

"In this historical department of the museum we have, for instance, many relics of Sir Edward Pakenham's army, which was defeated before New Orleans by Kentucky and Tennessee mountaineers. We have, too, many relics of the civil war, in which the ancestors of our students took part. We even have a 'still'—a 'fotched-in still,' as the vernacular of the region has it—that is, one which was cut to pieces by revenue inspectors so that it could no longer be used.

Students Work as Builders.

"Grant-Lee Hall, a men's dormitory, which was burned down in 1909, has been largely rebuilt, with student labor doing all the work except that of the foremen and overseers; but, though the building is already under roof, a considerable sum is needed to complete it. Similarly the present industrial building, housing the commercial departments and workshops, is under cover, but is not yet finished, and requires additional funds.

"These buildings have both been erected chiefly by student labor, as have been all works about the college grounds. It is our principle to uphold the ideal of 'work and study,' and most of our students earn a considerable part of their expenses by their own labor. We pay from 7½ to 15 cents an hour for all labor, and to students who are qualified for exceptional work, like that of foreman, we pay 20 cents. A student's expenses are approximately $1.50 a month for room, including light, heat, and heavy furniture; $2 a week for board, and $5 to $7 a term for tuition and incidentals. The men do the outdoor work and the girls take care of the buildings, bake the bread, and mend the clothes. We hope to get a laundry building so that they can do the laundry, too.

"In this way we are able to give the students a college year of nine months for about $120. We have reduced expenses until we can give a meal of good food, well cooked, for about 9½ cents, and while the students are working their way through college they are getting practical equipment for their life, as the men students learn agriculture or a trade, and the girls domestic science.

Andrew Carnegie Gave a Library.

"But even with this, the income from our fees and endowment falls short of the running expenses by about $15,000 a year. This shortage at present has to be met by contributions. One of the new things we want to add to the present plant is a forest rangers' school—not so much with the idea of training men for the Federal or State Forestry Service as to educate the mountaineers in the building of roads and of fire walls, the judging of timber, and so on."

The university started from a small local school in Cumberland Gap, a town of 300 people, from which the present site of the university is distant one and one-half miles. In the early '90s this school was removed to the sanitarium, which was the last remnant of the Four Seasone Hotel. In 1897 a visit was paid to the Gap by General O. O. Howard. He saw the possibilities of the Four Seasons Hotel. In 1897 a visit was paid panions, D. R. James of Brooklyn and the Rev. Fred B. Avery of Cleveland, with the idea of founding a university for the mountaineers, which should be a memorial to President Lincoln. A Board of Directors was soon afterward organized, the Four Seasons property purchased, and after a three years' campaign the last mortgage was cleared by a gift from Andrew Carnegie, who has since given a library to the university.

MORE WAGES FOR WORKERS.

United States Cartridge Co. Adopts Recommendation of Conciliation Board.

LOWELL, Mass., Nov. 24.—An increase in wages amounting to $300,000 yearly has been granted by the United States Cartridge Company to its 5,000 employes here, according to an announcement by the company today.

The increase was recommended by the the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, which investigated labor troubles at the local plant. The company announced that it would abide by the board's recommendations and that the new scale of wages would date from Sept. 28 last.

SCHWAB PLEADS FOR SHIPS.

Says Our Commerce Is Suffering Because We Have No Merchant Marine

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 24.—Predicting that the United States was to be the industrial and financial leader of the world, Charles M. Schwab, head of the Bethlehem Steel Company, before an audience of 1,000 business men here today pleaded for the construction of American ships to carry American commerce.

"I learn today that every sidetrack along the Pennsylvania Railroad between here and New York is crowded with loaded freight cars, awaiting transportation facilities across the water to foreign markets," said Mr. Schwab, who was the guest of the Chamber of Commerce. "This mighty tonnage is being held up to the detriment of the country because there are no ships to carry it. American exporters generally are unhappy over their inability to find the vessels that will place their goods where they can be used. I am ashamed to say that I have been compelled to go to foreign countries to get ships to bring iron ore to our furnaces."

Mr. Schwab also argued at length for the free transportation of American commerce through the Panama Canal.

Schmidt to Die Jan. 10.

ALBANY, Nov. 24.—The Court of Appeals today fixed the week beginning Jan. 10 as the time for the execution of Hans Schmidt, whose conviction for the murder of Anna Aumuller in New York in 1913 was upheld in a decision handed down yesterday.

"Without such a road we cannot protect California and our Pacific possessions against invasion."—Pres. Buchanan, 1857.

IF we should have a war the Union Pacific Railroad—next to the Navy and the Panama Canal—will be the greatest single material factor in a successful defense of our Western Coast.

Double track, perfect roadbed, low grades, slight curves, automatic block signal system and the finest physical equipment on the western roads will prove invaluable for the expeditious passage of troops and munitions.

This road—built for a military purpose—fortunately never has had a military test, but it is ready for such a test.

All of the factors which will make the Union Pacific efficient in war are just as useful in times of peace. Travelers and shippers are acquainted with the facts which make this "The Standard Road of the West."

REAL THANKSGIVING IN THIS CITY TODAY

Charity Organizations Say Distress Among Poor Is Less Than for Years Past.

NO SALVATION ARMY DINNER

Other Charitable Bodies Also Find No Need for Any Wholesale Feeding of Homeless.

Today will be a real Thanksgiving Day in New York. The spirit of the day pervades all classes of the people. Among the rich and the comfortably well-off the Thanksgiving spirit is general. And among the poor, all the charitable organizations agree, there is less distress than for several years.

One cause for general rejoicing is the cheapness of the Thanksgiving dinner menu. Two hundred thousand turkeys came in from Texas yesterday morning, and the price of 31 cents a pound, which was threatened on Monday, did not materialize. Instead the price of the noble bird dropped to 24 cents, with a prospect of going still lower.

Thanksgiving dinner baskets will be distributed by the Charity Organization Society, the expense being shared by churches, schools, and individuals. The Wadleigh High School girls contributed 100 baskets.

At the Children's Court Building, Third Avenue and Eleventh Street, the Greater New York Philanthropic Society will distribute bags and baskets of food and will serve a hot poultry dinner at the One Cent Coffee Stand, outside the Tombs.

The boys of the Brace Memorial Newsboys' Home will have their annual Thanksgiving dinner as guests of William Waldrof Astor. The celebration will last three days, ending Sunday, with an address by Senator Loring M. Black, Jr. The girls of the Elizabeth Home will dine as guests of Mrs. William Bayard Cutting. Mrs. Cleveland H. Dodge gives the boys of the Forty-fourth Street Lodging House their dinner, and W. Emlen Roosevelt supplies turkey for the West Side Home, 225 West Thirty-fifth Street.

As there is less real want in the city, the Salvation Army and other big organizations are not giving their usual dinners. They are, however, helping needy families. "The United Army of Boozers," 500 strong, will be sobered by rides in the Fifth Avenue buses and then will be fed at Salvation Army Headquarters.

The Volunteers of America will give dinners only in Brooklyn. For the first time in forty-four years the Bowery Branch of the Y. M. C. A. will give no Thanksgiving dinners, as its new building is unfinished, and the need of relief is not acute.

At the Chinese Theatre, 5 and 7 Doyers Street, the Rescue Society will feed 400 and hold religious services in the theatre auditorium.

Six hundred turkey dinners will be sent to poor homes by the Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, 30 Bleecker Street. The St. Andrew's one-cent coffee stand at 31 West Eighth Street will serve turkey.

Commissioner of Correction Katharine B. Davis will dine, by invitation, with the women in the Workhouse. The Golden Rule League of Blackwell's Island will give an entertainment. Immigrants at Ellis Island will have a special turkey dinner.

A bronze tablet is to be unveiled today by the Washington Heights Chapter, D. A. R., at the Parish House of the Chapel of the Intercession of Trinity Church, Broadway and 155th Street.

Cadets of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum will celebrate Thanksgiving with an exhibition drill in the stadium of the College of the City of New York. Major General John F. O'Ryan will be the reviewing officer. City officials and many prominent men will be present. The annual Thanksgiving review of the Boy Scouts of America will also take place in the Stadium.

A Thanksgiving festival with a program in the interest of "Peace and the New Patriotism" will be given at the Meeting House of the Society for Ethical Culture this morning at 10:45. There will be patriotic exercises in Seward Park at 3 P. M., under the auspices of the Loyal American Legion.

In Episcopal churches offerings will be taken for widows and orphans of the clergy. In Harlem Episcopal and Reformed churches will take collections for the Harlem Day Nursery. Some New York churches will devote their offerings to war relief. A large mass-meeting will be held tonight at the McKinley Casino, 169th Street and McKinley Square, the Bronx, in the interest of Jewish war sufferers.

PUMPKIN PIE FOR PAGE.

Ambassador's Wife to See Thanksgiving Pastry Has American Flavor.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Golden brown pumpkin pies will grace the table of Ambassador Page tomorrow at his Thanksgiving Day dinner at his home. There will be turkey, too, but the stress must be put on the pie. The fact is that Ambassador Page has yearned for some time for the old-fashioned pumpkin pie he used to know in America. He confessed today that somehow he hadn't found English pumpkin pies with exactly the same flavor.

But there will be seductive pumpkin pie just as it is made at home tomorrow for the Ambassador and attachés of the Embassy, who with their wives, will go to the Page residence for their Thanksgiving feast. The Ambassador's wife is looking after the baking of those pies herself.

COMPILING SMITH ASSETS.

Schedule of ex-Senator's Property May Be Filed Saturday.

Friends of ex-Senator James Smith, Jr., of Newark said yesterday that he would welcome an investigation and verification of all indorsements of his commercial paper. Mr. Smith held a power of attorney from Gottfried Krueger, a Newark brewer, whose daughter married Mr. Smith's son. Mr. Krueger has been in Germany since the beginning of the war. Another indorser of Smith paper is said to be Peter Hauck, Sr., also a Newark brewer, whose son married a daughter of Mr. Smith.

A receiver will be asked for soon for the Newark Daily Advertiser Publishing Company, which publishes the Newark Evening Star and the Newark Eagle, the two newspapers of the former Senator.

At the offices of the Fidelity Trust Company it was said yesterday that work on the schedule of the assets of the former Senator was well under way and that President McCarter expects to file the initial schedule with Surrogate Fred G. Stickel, Jr., on Saturday morning. It is said by those in a position to know that the creditors will get about 40 cents on the dollar. The liabilities are placed at from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000.

There was a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors of the Federal Trust Company yesterday, after which one of the Directors said that the difficulties of the former President were a closed incident, so far as the trust company was concerned.

Directors of the Federal were noncommital about the $200,000 to $400,000 in Smith paper held by the bank. One of the Directors said that "the friends of Mr. Smith came to the rescue."

SAFETY RULES FOR PUPILS.

Bernheimer Wants Them Painted on Sidewalks Before School Buildings.

A new safety campaign for school children was started yesterday in Borough President Marks's office when Charles L. Bernheimer, President of the Safety First Society, made the suggestion that the following inscription be painted in red on the sidewalks in front of public school buildings in Manhattan:

> Stop. Look, Listen!
> Don't cross in the middle of the block.
> Don't hitch on cars or wagons.
> Don't roller skate on the roadway.

President Thomas W. Churchill of the Board of Education gave his consent to the plan and it will be carried out immediately.

BATTLE TO WATCH SING SING INQUIRY

It Is Thought New York Lawyer Goes to Guard the Interests of Warden Osborne.

KAPLAN IS SENT TO CLINTON

Habeas Corpus Proceeding Begun to Return Convict to be Accessible to His Attorney.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 24.—George Gordon Battle of O'Gorman, Battle & Vandiver, 37 Wall Street, has been retained by the National Committee on Prisons to appear in the investigation of Sing Sing Prison, now being conducted by the Westchester County Grand Jury. This means, in the opinion of many here, that friends of Warden Thomas Mott Osborne have united in an effort to make sure that Mr. Osborne's version of conditions at Sing Sing is placed before the Grand Jury.

The Committee on Prisons has indorsed Mr. Osborne's administration of affairs at Sing Sing, and Mr. Battle, in a speech at Cooper Union in New York last night, and on other occasions, has stated his approval of the Warden's work.

Mr. Battle sent this telegram today to Supreme Court Justice Morschauser, who was sitting here:

> I have just been retained by the National Committee on Prisons to appear, with the permission of the court, in the investigation of Sing Sing Prison, which is now pending. I have certain important considerations which I wish to present to the District Attorney and to the court. I am actually engaged in the trial of a case in the Supreme Court before Mr. Justice Goff, which I expect to finish today. I hope to call at White Plains in order to confer with the District Attorney and the court on Friday, and in the meantime I am telegraphing the District Attorney and the court to respectfully request that the invesigation be not concluded until I shall have had an opportunity to confer with the District Attorney and the court.

Justice Morschauser replied, advising Mr. Battle to come to White Plains on Monday, and it is thought that the proposed conference will be held on that day. District Attorney Weeks would not comment on Mr. Battle's telegram, except to say that he would, of course, see the lawyer if he came to White Plains.

Nathan Kaplan, the Sing Sing prisoner who was indicted by the Grand Jury recently for an assault committed in the prison, and who is the only one of the twenty-three indicted men whose trial has been fixed on the court calendar, was removed from the White Plains jail today and sent to Clinton Prison at Dannemora, N. Y. This act stirred those favoring Warden Osborne and the defense of Kaplan to indignation, and it resulted at once in an effort to have the prisoner removed from Clinton to some place where he would be more accessible to his counsel. The effort took the form of an application for a writ of habeas corpus made to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich in New York City by Alexander Karlin of 320 Broadway, who alleged that Karlin's constitutional rights had been interfered with.

District Attorney Weeks or some other authority of Westchester County will have to show cause before Justice Giegerich on next Saturday why Kaplan should not be produced.

State Superintendent of Prisons Riley and a number of others testified before the Grand Jury today. The jury adjourned this afternoon until Monday morning. According to a report that cannot be verified, the jurymen are contemplating the indictment of Warden Osborne for a misdemeanor.

SUFFRAGISTS SPENT $87,131

And Received $89,303 to Make Campaign for Votes in This State.

ALBANY, Nov. 24.—The unsuccessful effort at the recent election to obtain votes for women cost the Empire State Suffrage Campaign Committee $87,131, according to the expense statement filed today with the Secretary of State. Receipts totaled $89,303. The State Association Opposed to Suffrage received contributions amounting to $32,540 and spent $31,159.

The statement of the committee for the adoption of the Constitution showed receipts of $41,600. Its expenses, including estimated liabilities, during the unsuccessful campaign, were $40,456. Contributions were received from 202 citizens, the largest, $5,000 each, being credited to Clarence H. Mackay and Robert Bacon. Other contributors included Colonel O. H. Payne, $3,000; M. Hartley Dodge, M. Guggenheimer's Son, E. C. Converse, John D. Rockefeller, H. P. Whitney, and Thomas F. Ryan, $1,000.

The Republican State Committee received $56,750, of which $7,010 remains. The largest contribuors were Andrew Carnegie and former Senator Chauncey M. Depew, $2,500; John D. Rockefeller, James B. Ford, M. W. Blackmar, $1,000; John D. Rockefeller, Jr., J. P. Morgan, $500.

The Democratic State Committee received $7,235 and expended $7,3[illegible]8, with Cleveland H. Dodge, who gave $1,800, the largest contributor. The Progressive State Committee received $25,500 and spent $25,403. This statement adds, however, that unpaid bills leave a deficit of $1,343.

PLAN BIG WELCOME TO SUFFRAGE ENVOYS

Wives of City Officials to Meet Bearers of 500,000 Signature Petition.

Wives of city officials, including Mrs. Robert Adamson, Mrs. Henry Bruere, Mrs. George McAneny, Mrs. Marcus M. Marks, and Mrs. William Prendergast will lead the escort of honor which will receive the Western envoys of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage, who will reach New York tomorrow afternoon, bringing a great petition to be presented to Congress next month.

These leaders will receive Mrs. Sara Bard Field and Miss Frances Jolliffe, the envoys, with the signatures of 500,000 women voters which they bring, on the outskirts of the city and will escort them to the other women of the Reception Committee waiting in decorated automobiles, and the party will form in line at Eighty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, and drive down the avenue to Sherry's at Forty-fourth Street. The purple, gold and white colors of the Congressional Union will be used in the form of white and gold chrysanthemums tied with purple ribbons, in the decorations. Many prominent women of the city will be in the automobile procession, among them the following:

Mesdames O. H. P. Belmont, Emanuel Einstein, Lewis Delafield, Walston Hill Brown, Claude Kress, John W. Alexander, R. C. Talbot-Perkins, W. P. Bush, Lydig Hoyt, Ralph Shainwald, Thomas Manson, William L. Colt, A. F. Lauterbach, Jewett Minturn, Harry Oelrich, John Winters Brennan, J. J. Mason, Charles Scarborough, James Erskin Neal, William B. Bolton, James B. Dixon, Herbert Carpenter, A. C. Bartlett, Tiffany Dyer, M. S. Seymour, Dryden Brewer, John Rogers, Jr., Leonard Thomas, Eldon Bisbee, Gilson Hutchins, George E. Brewer, Charles Beard.

Acting Mayor George McAneny will make the address of welcome upon the arrival of the envoys at Sherry's. Among the younger women who will act as ushers, sell copies of The Suffragist, and take memberships will be: Mrs. Robert Miles, Chairman; Mrs. Bauer, Miss Edna Chambers, Miss Charlotte Frank, Mrs. Lyle Evans Mahan, Miss Charlotte Delafield, Mrs. Malcolm Duncan, Mrs. Arkley King, Mrs. H. P. Pennington, Miss Lois Hall, Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, Miss Ellan Mason, Miss Anne Ryce.

The Congressional Union will formally organize its New York branch on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Julian W. Robbins, 83 East Seventy-fourth Street. A constitution will be adopted and officers elected. Mrs. Amos Pinchot and Mrs. Henry Bruere are among the delegates from New York who will attend the Congressional Union Convention in Washington on Dec. 6. The Princess David Kawanankoa of Washington and Honolulu will assist Miss Margaret Wilson in receiving at the reception for the union to be given by Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont in Washington on Dec. 7.

Prison for False Registration.

On a plea of guilty to the crime of false registration, Harry McCormick, alias Arthur Gordon of 332 East Twenty-third Street, was sentenced by Judge Wadhams in General Sessions yesterday to three years and six months in Sing Sing. McCormick came up for sentence with a long criminal record, and Judge Wadhams denounced his most recent offense as one which "strikes at the very foundation of American institutions."

MAYOR TO GO HOME TODAY.

Is Anxious to Spend Thanksgiving in His Own House.

Dr. Charles H. Peck, who performed the operation, said last night that the condition of Mayor Mitchel was so improved that probably he would be moved from the Roosevelt Hospital this morning. Dr. Peck said the Mayor was anxious to spend Thanksgiving in his own home.

Among those who visited the Mayor yesterday were Acting Mayor McAneny, Theodore Rousseau, the Mayor's secretary, and Frank L. Polk, Counselor to the State Department.

HERRMAN IS SORRY HE MARRIED 'PONY'

Bride, Testifying in Annulment Suit, Uses Theatrical Term to Describe Herself.

YOUTH WED AT SEVENTEEN

Young Mrs. Herrman, ex-Actress, Friend of Mrs. Raymond Belmont—Decision Reserved.

The suit brought by James S. Herrman, head of the building concern of Philip Herrman's Son, for the annulment of the marriage of his son, Philip, to Dorothy Gates, a chorus girl, came to trial yesterday before Justice Gavegan of the Supreme Court. Young Herrman and Miss Gates were married by an Alderman on Dec. 23 last, when Philip was only 17 years old. During the honeymoon Philip spent his days at the residence of the bride, 245 West Fifty-fifth Street, where she lived with Mrs. Raymond Belmont. But his nights were spent in the home of his parents, 238 West Seventy-first Street.

When his mother and father learned that he had a wife there was a big row and proceedings were at once instituted to annul the marriage, young Mr. Herrman joining his parents in the suit. It was said that the bride at first was willing to lose her boy husband, but later changed her mind. An attempt was made in court yesterday to show that this change was due to a hope on her part that she might be able to effect a settlement with her father-in-law that would be largely to her financial advantage.

She came to the witness chair yesterday, a-flutter with feathers and ribbons, and perfectly composed. She was sure her father-in-law approved of the marriage because, when he called on her, she said, he kissed her on the cheek. Asked if she was ever a chorus girl, Mrs. Herrman replied that she had been a "pony."

"I am five feet six inches tall," she explained, "and so I am a pony. Ponies are very hard to get."

She only saw her husband four times after their marriage, but she didn't seem to mind. Questioned as to her stage names, she replied that she had been known as Phillips, Stanley, and Gates, but she had always been true to the given name of Dorothy. Then Mrs. Herrman told of her husband's love for her, how he wanted her to go to Bermuda on a honeymoon trip, how he had addressed her in a letter as "Dearest darling," and how, when they went driving, the horse could shy as much as it pleased because Philip was so engrossed in her that he never noticed.

She said her home was in Charleston, S. C., and frankly admitted that she sometimes smoked cigarettes, and drank—sometimes—as many as three highballs at one sitting. She never drank more, because she knew when she had "enough." Asked how she made the acquaintance of Mrs. Belmont, she replied that they first met in a Turkish bath, the place, by the way, where, she said, she first learned to drink highballs.

"Philip was very much in love with me," she declared, "and begged me at least sixty times to marry him. He threatened to kill himself if I remained obdurate, and so—well, I just married him to save his life."

Mrs. Belmont told of her legal separation from Raymond Belmont and of her alimony of $100 a month, which she was obliged to live on, meagre as it was. Concerning the question whether Philip had visited his wife after he reached the age of eighteen Mrs. Belmont said that he had visited her on June 5, when he was older than eighteen, and had remained in the apartment with his wife for some time. If this statement is substantiated the annulment suit may fail.

Then Philip came to the witness chair, and testified that he first met his wife in a restaurant in West Forty-fifth Street. He was then going to a boy's school at Pawling. He said he asked his wife why she was fighting the annulment suit and said that she replied: "Because I want to get some money out of your father."

Philip said his wife invited him to join her in an attempt to get money, but that he refused. Justice Gavegan told the lawyers to submit briefs and reserved decision.

WRIT AGAINST SPRECKELS.

Obtained by Mackay and Associates in a Cuban Plantation Company.

According to dispatches from Flagstaff, Arizona, the Superior Court there on the application of Clarence H. Mackay and several of his associates who appear as owners of a majority stock of the Federal Plantations Company, yesterday granted a writ of mandamus against C. A. Spreckels, President of the Federal Sugar Refining Company, and against his associates, Pierre J. Smith and Charles T. Bingham, who constitute a majority of the board of directors of the Federal Plantations Company, to call a stockholders' meeting of the latter company. There has been no meeting of stockholders in the last thirteen years.

In the complaint filed on behalf of Mr. Mackay it is alleged that Mr. Spreckels is a minority stockholder, but that he is President of the company and controls the board. The complaint also alleges that Mr. Spreckels has refused to call a stockholders' meeting.

This mandamus action, it was learned last night, is the outcome of a fight of long standing. It throws some light on the announcement last week of Mr. Mackay's retirement as a director in the Federal Sugar Refining Company. No explanation accompanied this announcement, though Mr. Mackay's resignation took place nearly a year ago.

The Federal Plantations Company owns about 40,000 acres of land in Cuba. This land, it is understood, is primarily timber land but could be utilized for the sugar industry. Mr. Spreckels said last night that he favored selling it. He wanted to dissolve the Federal Plantations Company, he said, but the Mackay interests had a different course in view, and the two interests had clashed. The Cuban property had never been operated, he said, and ought to be sold.

PLAIN, EVERYDAY DINNER COSTS THE STATE $3.15

Breakfasts for Some Industrial Commissioners Run to $1.75, Inquest Shows.

Further testimony about the expenses charged by members of the Industrial Commission for meals and hotel accommodations was given yesterday at the Diamond Candy Factory inquest.

Edward C. Countryman, auditor of the commission, testified that the Factory Commission cost the State about $600 a month for hotel and meal expenses, not including luncheons for employes in factory inspection in New York. Meals for the inspection force cost the State $16,500 a year.

District Attorney Cropsey brought out that the dinners of some members of the commission cost $2.50 to $3.15 each, while the breakfasts averaged from 80 cents to $1.75 apiece, all paid by the State of New York.

That the appetites of the Commissioners had aroused the interest of the State Controller was intimated by the witness, when he testified that a check was put on the meal expenses. A rule was adopted by the Controller limiting the expense of each Commissioner to $6 a day while in New York City, $5 a day in cities of the second class, and in cities of the third class $4 a day.

District Attorney Cropsey read the list of expenses charged in some of the meal bills of the Commissioners. In June the expense bill of Commissioner Louis Wiard of Batavia was $225.25, Commissioner Lynch's expense bill for that month amounted to $152.76, John Mitchell, Chairman of the commission, filed a bill for $22.80, while Commissioner Lyon of Brooklyn charged the State only $12.95 for that month. Commissioner Rogers's bill was $175.21.

The District Attorney, reading the items on this bill, showed that the cost of single meals as charged by Mr. Rogers amounted to $2.85, $3.10, and $3.15.

Mr. Lyons charged for one meal as high as $1.20, and in one instance as low as 20 cents.

The inquest was adjourned until Monday, at the request of District Attorney Cropsey.

GRACE MARSHALL LOW, MAY TRANSFUSE BLOOD

Girl Long Imprisoned Placed in Hospital and Stepmother Is Arrested.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Md., Nov. 24.—Grace Marshall, who, it is alleged, was imprisoned by her father in the Marshall home for nearly twelve years, is now in the Emergency Hospital in a serious condition, while her father and stepmother are in jail awaiting a hearing before Magistrate Tharp on Friday morning. Mrs. Marshall was arrested this morning. Marshall is accused of assault with intent to kill, while only a charge of simple assault was made against Mrs. Marshall.

Dr. Charles F. Davidson announced today that blood transfusion would be necessary to save the life of the girl, and that as soon as some person volunteered to give the required amount of blood it was quite probable that the operation will be performed.

Sheriff Stevens brought Mrs. Marshall into his office this morning and she talked for more than an hour of the various phases of the case.

She was very much cast down over her arrest. The first thing she said was: "Let Frank come out here too," referring to her husband. In every instance the Marshalls have refused to talk unless they were together.

The Sheriff refused to permit Marshall to be present at the interview. Mrs. Marshall told no new facts in her long talk.

BAY STATE SUFFRAGE VOTE.

Officials Returns Show Amendment Was Defeated by 133,087 Majority.

BOSTON, Nov. 24.—The official canvass of the vote cast at the Massachusetts State election Nov. 2, announced today, shows that Samuel W. McCall, the Republican candidate for Governor, won by a plurality of 6,376. The official returns also confirmed the unofficial announcement that the Prohibition Party polled more than 3 per cent. of the total vote for Governor and had become a recognized political organization in Massachusetts. The failure of the Progressive Party to obtain 3 per cent. of the total vote put that organization, with the Socialist and Socialist-Labor Parties, in the unofficial list.

The majority against woman suffrage was 133,087. The vote on suffrage was: Yes, 102,615; no, 295.702.

TAFT ADVANCES PLAN FOR BETTER SCHOOLS

Federal Inspection and Criticism Proposed in Address Before New York State Teachers.

FOR NATIONAL UNIVERSITY

Wants Teachers Examined by Federal Bureau of Education—Present System Defective.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 24.—The conversion of the United States Bureau of Education into a national university for school teachers was advocated today by ex-President William Howard Taft, in an address before the New York State Teachers' Association.

Mr. Taft criticised the present system of education in the United States as being in many instances inefficient and superficial, and suggested that the Federal Government might, through a system of inspection and criticism, aid the States in bringing about higher standards, both in respect to teachers and methods.

"Through its Bureau of Education," he said, "the National Government might help to promote State education by offering machinery to the people of a municipality, of a county, or of a State, by which they might, if they chose, have the schools they pay for investigated and examined, and the value of the education given tested by a survey or report of officers of the United States Bureau of Education. Such officers would be trained experts."

Referring to his plan for making the Bureau of Education a national university for teachers, Mr. Taft said:

"By searching and through teachers' examinations the Federal certificates would acquire a high value for their holders, and the professional qualification for teaching would be generally improved."

As a proof of the defects of the present system, Mr. Taft referred to the report of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, which showed that the local school superintendents of some States cannot spell or write good English.

Criticism of Rhodes Scholars.

Referring to the criticism, which he said was widely and justifiably made, that American school children only received a superficial education, Mr. Taft said:

"The criticism that we hear from England of the Rhodes scholars ought to give us anxiety as to our system of education and bring to our minds that our standards are not as high as they should be, that our discipline has a certain degree of flabbiness, and that there is too much of our education which makes for mediocrity and superficial results. The comparison that experience in the Rhodes scholarships enables friendly critics to make indicates that the Americans are bright, ambitious, and diligent, but that they lack thorough knowledge and thorough training, and do not seem to understand the necessity of hearing a subject from the ground up."

In respect to the elementary schools, Mr. Taft quoted Professor William McAndrew, division Superintendent of Brooklyn, on the result of some tests, as saying

"The tests made may be interpreted to show that in some of the schools of the division assigned to me many of the members of the graduating class apparently could not spell, write, and figure. I know that it is not customary to make such admissions in school reports, but recognition of the criticism seems to me to lead to some advantage."

"There are similar criticisms," commented Mr. Taft, "similarly justified, directed toward the education of college students and college graduates."

Mr. Taft declared that "there is a most important waste of valuable human time in the years of the life of the boy and the girl between 6 and 14 years."

"In the German schools and in the English schools," he said, "the amount that boys between 6 and 14 are required to commit may well command our admiration and wonder because it is so out of proportion to the amount that we require of our children. The German youth at 15 is as well prepared to enter a college course as our boys of 18 and 19. He has made up three years by harder work, longer hours, and fewer vacations.

"We cannot admit that our boys are not as capable of learning, but we must admit that we do not subject them to the same labor or the same discipline. We have too much marking time. There is no reason why we should not make our education as thorough and useful for the youth as that in France, or Germany, or England. We, as parents, have been content to follow the line of least resistance. We have not insisted on home discipline. We have allowed our children to have their way far more than foreign children have. I can illustrate what I mean by the story of the head master who received a letter from a mother beginning:

"'My Dear Sir: We send you herewith our Willie. He is a noble boy, but a bit wayward. He needs to have cultivated habits of study. Do not, however, be severe with him. Don't punish him. We never do except in self-defense.'"

Plan Based on Gary System.

While admitting that there cannot be religious sectarian education in schools supported by public funds, Mr. Taft urged that the study of the Bible, especially the New Testament, was admirably adapted to promote morality and incidentally to stimulate a good English style. In order to meet the objections of those opposed to compulsory Biblical instruction and at the same time supply moral instruction in the schools, Mr. Taft outlined a plan based on the Gary system.

"Moral or ethical instruction," he suggested, "might be required for two or three hours of the week, and then any parent or pupil might be permitted to substitute for these three hours, thus required, religious and Biblical instruction for the same periods by the teacher of any church elected by the parent or student, in some of the school rooms designated for the purpose. In that way we would have some moral instruction for all and religious and Biblical instruction for those who desired it. It would be compulsory in the sense that some kind of moral instruction would have to be taken. It would be voluntary in that no religious instruction would be given to any who did not elect to take it."

At the final business session of the convention this morning Alfred C. Thompson of Brockport was re-elected President. Myra L. Ingalsee of Hartford Vice President, and Richard A. Searing of North Tonawanda Secretary.

TIMID BARK AGROUND.

St. Joseph Ran on Jersey Shoals to Elude Supposed Pursuer.

ALANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 24.—The Italian bark St. Joseph, Genoa for Philadelphia, went aground today two miles from Brigantine Beach, but, according to coast guards who went out to her, the vessel is not in a dangerous position. Tugs were summoned from Philadelphia and shipping men express the opinion that the craft will be floated without serious damage.

The St. Joseph, which carries a crew of fifteen, has a cargo of oil. Her captain is reported to have said that the bark was chased off this coast today by a vessel which he thought might be a German commerce destroyer, so he ran within the three-mile limit for refuge. The chase, or what looked like one, was watched from the Board Walk here with field glasses.

AN INVENTIONS ATTACHE.

Captain Smith Will Sift Wheat from Chaff for Navy Department.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Captain William Strother Smith, U. S. N., has been ordered to Washington to serve as a special Attaché to consider ideas from inventors. Since the formation of the Naval Advisory Board, of which Thomas A. Edison is Chairman, the Navy Department has been flooded with communications from inventors.

Captain Smith, who is now Engineer of the Philadelphia Navy Yard, will report in Washington for duty early in December. He will serve as a sort of clearing house for relieving the bureaus of much preliminary work.

FLEET TO SEND MEN TO ARMY-NAVY GAME

Ten Battleships Just by Chance Anchor in Hudson When Annual Contest Is at Hand.

Ten battleships of the Atlantic Fleet, among them the new superdreadnoughts Texas and New York, steamed into the Hudson yesterday afternoon and anchored there to remain until next Tuesday morning. when they will steam out to resume battle practice manoeuvres off the North Atlantic Coast. It is denied that the football game set for Saturday between West Point and Annapolis has anything to do with the visit of the ships, but it is not denied that most officers and many of the enlisted men will take advantage of the opportunity to journey to the Polo Grounds and cheer for Annapolis.

The ships in addition to the New York and Texas are the Arkansas, South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Louisiana, and Minnesota. The Arkansas, Virginia, and Louisiana are the flagships, respectively, of Vice Admiral Mayo and Rear Admirals Coffman and McLean. The Arkansas, Texas, New York, and South Carolina are reached from the landing at Seventy-ninth Street; the Virginia, Georgia, Rhode Island, and New Jersey from the Ninety-eighth Street landing, and the Louisiana and Minnesota from 129th Street.

There are about 10,000 officers and men on the ten ships, and on board all of them special Thanksgiving dinners will be served today. All the bands, it was said yesterday, will be at the football game to cheer the boys from the banks of the Severn.

Beginning at 1 o'clock this afternoon, all the ships will be open to visitors from that hour to 4 P. M. and every day thereafter at the same hour up to and including Monday. Admiral Fletcher's orders are that all visitors must receive every courtesy and have every chance to see all that is permissable about the vessels.

Dock Commissioner Smith issued orders that each launch licensed to take passengers to and from the battleships must fly a pennant stating the maximum number of passengers the launch could carry safely and that any attempt to carry more than that authorized maximum would result in the prompt arrest of the boatman in charge. The regulations fix a maximum fare of 25 cents each way. Policemen, it is announced, will see that the regulations are enforced.

The fleet flagship Wyoming and the dreadnoughts Utah and Florida are at the Navy Yard, as are also several submarine flotillas and destroyer divisions. Altogether there are about 14,000 naval officers and enlisted men in New York for Thanksgiving and unofficially for the big game on Saturday.

SAYS MRS. BISHOP DRANK.

Battle Introduces a Butler's Record in Libel Suit Defense.

George Gordon Battle, the lawyer who is being sued for $50,000 for libel by Mrs. Abigail Hancock Bishop, because of a letter he wrote to the District Attorney about her, testified yesterday in his own behalf before Justice Goff and a jury in the Supreme Court. Mr. Battle said he had been retained by J. Temple Gwathmey to look after the interests of his wife, Lelia Gaines Gwathmey, who had been named in the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Bishop against her husband, James Cunningham Bishop.

A petition of Mr. Bishop, praying Justice MacLean to commit his wife to St. Vincent's Retreat, was read into the record. Mr. Bishop said his wife had been intoxicated in the Waldorf. A record kept by a butler said Mrs. Bishop consumed in one day twelve bottles of beer, besides a number of gin cocktails, and that she was confused and irrational in manner and speech.

The trial will be resumed tomorrow.

PROMOTION PROMISED TO WEDDED TEACHERS

Board of Education Provides Reward for Married Women Who Stay in Schools 10 Years.

The Board of Education yesterday by a vote of 26 to 9 amended its bylaws by providing that a married teacher or supervisor in the public schools of this city, who has had fifteen years' experience as a teacher, ten years of which shall have been in the New York public schools, may be promoted.

Dr. Ira S. Wile opposed the resolution because it was a penalization of women. John Martin spoke in favor of it.

"This bylaw," he said, "states that when a mother teacher reaches an age when her children are grown she shall not only be retained in the service, but given every encouragement. The woman who has reared children is desirable in the schools. I would make mothers the Presidents of women's colleges, and exclude spinsters. I would encourage mothers who have reached the age of 40, and even give them a bonus for their services. The aim of educational institutions should be to have a maximum number of mothers and to discourage spinsters, who have the idea that they can earn a living and so avoid the responsibilities of marriage."

Dr. Wile replied that the bylaws dealt with married teachers and not with mothers.

"Unfortunately," said Mr. Martin, "modern ideas make your statement to a degree true."

Before the regular meeting of the board was held there was a secret session, at which the budget for 1916 was discussed, and also the resolution offered by Isidore M. Levy against the religious feature of the Gary plan. Nothing decisive was arrived at in regard to the budget. In order to avoid religious feeling in the matter, Mr. Levy's resolution was referred to the Committee on Vocational Schools and elementary schools

ENDOWMENT FOR BRASHEAR

Friends Announce $50,000 Fund at Dinner to Scientist.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 24.—An endowment of $50,000, to be placed at the disposal of Dr. John A. Brashear, the scientist, during his lifetime, in recognition of his work, and after his death to be used to perpetuate his scientific labors, was announced at a dinner tonight in honor of his seventy-fifth birthday, Judge Joseph Buffington of the United States Circuit Court, the toastmaster, said that $32,000 of the fund had been subscribed.

The dinner was attended by nearly a thousand persons, including Charles M. Schwab, the steel man, and many other prominent men. Congratulatory messages received by Dr. Brashear on his birthday from President Wilson, Thomas A. Edison, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, and others were read.

Isham Denies Separation Story.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 24.—Ralph Isham, when seen at the Copley Plaza Hotel tonight, indignantly denied the story that he had separated from his wife, nee Marion Gaynor, and was to establish a Massachusetts residence. "Why, only this afternoon I talked with Mrs. Isham at St. James, L. I., over the telephone for about fifteen minutes, asking how the baby was and other things," he said. "I have been in Boston about a week on business for my firm and expect to be here the balance of the week."

A Nation at Peace Gives Thanks

FAR from the bullet-swept battlefields of Europe; from the scenes of ruin and desolation and permanent separations; far from those saddened streets where an avalanche of loneliness is falling upon millions of homes—a nation at peace gives thanks.

It's a great, young nation, busy at work and happy at play, yet today, as it pauses to reunite its families and to renew its friendships, it is sobered somewhat by the trials of its neighbors.

It gives thanks that here the uncertain separations of war are not present; that here the limits of communication are not marked, and it turns today to the telephone to rejoice that the human voice can speed from corner to corner of this broad land and bind even closer together the minds and the hearts of its millions of homes.

RECORD IS BRANDED 'FALSE' BY MELLEN

Was Prevented by Ledyard from Tearing Report on Billard from New Haven Book.

'I WAS ALMOST A CRIMINAL'

Testifies That Morgan Denounced Billard's Profit in Boston & Maine Deal as 'Unconscionable.'

A minute of the Directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, which appeared to establish a direct connection between the New Haven and the Billard Company, was denounced yesterday by Charles S. Mellen to be false. So indignant was he at its appearance in the company's records that he had been tempted, he said, to do a criminal act and rip it out, but had been restrained by Lewis Cass Ledyard.

The minute came up as R. L. Batts of counsel for the Government was trying to unravel before Judge Hunt and a jury in the Federal District Court the tangled history of the Billard Company and to show that, as the prosecution asserts, when it took over the Boston & Maine shares, which had once belonged to the New Haven, it was practically one of the new Haven subsidiaries. Consequently it was held to be merely an instrumentality in the conspiracy to monopolize the transportation facilities of New England, on which charge eleven of the ex-Directors of the New Haven are on trial.

The minute occurred in the account of the meeting of the New Haven Directors on Oct. 8, 1909, and purported to give the substance of a report on the Billard Company, made by Mr. Mellen to the board. In it it was stated that the New Haven had in its treasury $2,000,000 of the stock and $14,250,000 of the bonds of the Billard Company, and that the New Haven would make a profit of $1,649,200 out of the Billard transactions.

Mellen Repudiates Record.

When Mr. Batts brought this report to the attention of Mr. Mellen, he at once challenged its accuracy. He knew, he said, that a report on the Billard matters had been made to the Directors on that date, but he was positive that it was not the report which the Government had read from the minutes, or anything like that report.

"Why," he said, "the figures are incorrect. There is a slight discrepancy of a million or so in regard to the notes of John L. Billard, and it is impossible to make out what those figures mean. Now, I know I had prepared a statement for the Directors at that meeting with regard to Mr. Billard, but not concerning the stocks and bonds of the Billard Company, and that is not it."

Asked to explain how such a report could have got into the official minutes if he had not written it, Mr. Mellen suggested that some clerk might have taken a memorandum out of his portfolio and thought that was the report he had made.

"I left my portfolio after the meeting," he said, "on the table with all sorts of papers in it. Such a report as this might easily have been taken from it by mistake."

Mellen Saved by Ledyard.

Mr. Mellen some weeks later discovered this report in the minutes, he said, and he was so angry he wanted to rip it out altogether. But Mr. Ledyard warned him that to do so would be a criminal act, and he refrained.

"It was only Mr. Ledyard," said Mr. Mellen, "prevented me being a criminal."

Judge Hunt held that the Government if it wished to put in these particular minutes must produce further proof of their accuracy.

Before this question came up, Mr. Batts had been examining Mr. Mellen concerning the relation of Mr. Billard to the Boston & Maine stock he bought from the New Haven, in order to test the genuineness of the purchase. He wanted to know if Mr. Billard received the dividends.

"Of course," replied the witness, "Mr. Billard drew his dividends. At first they were at 7 per cent., but afterward they were reduced to 6 per cent. Still Mr. Billard did not do so badly. He was only paying 4 and 5 per cent. on the money he had borrowed on those shares from the National City Bank."

Mr. Batts then put in an agreement in October, 1909, between the New Haven, the Boston Holding Company, and the J. L. Billard Company, concerning the acquisition of the Boston & Maine shares by the Boston Holding Company after the act legalizing it had been passed by the Massachusetts Legislature.

As these transactions were being put in evidence, it came out that the late J. P. Morgan had objected to what he considered the "unconscionable profit" made by Mr. Billard.

Protest by J. P. Morgan.

"When the contract for taking back the stock was made in June, 1909," said Mr. Mellen, "Mr. Morgan and Mr. Ledyard were away. They returned in October, and then Mr. Morgan had added to the report a clause granting Mr. Billard only a 'reasonable profit.'

"As a matter of fact, however, the contract had already been signed, sealed, and delivered, and I figured out that on paper Mr. Billard made $2,748,700 on the deal. But I told Mr. Morgan that these paper profits were largely nominal, for Mr. Billard had taken over the stock of some of our subsidiaries at their face value, although they were worth only 65. But the reasonable profit clause enabled me to go to Mr. Billard and try to negotiate a better deal."

As Mr. Batts brought out the profit Mr. Billard made, he wanted also to show in detail the method by which the New Haven, which had been obliged in 1908 to get rid of its Boston & Maine stock, was able in 1909 to buy it back and hold it.

Charles F. Choate for the defense read the Boston Holding Company act into the minutes. This was passed in June, 1909, and authorized the New Haven to reacquire the Boston & Maine stock and place it in the hands of the Boston Holding Company.

The trial was adjourned to next Monday morning.

ACQUAINTED A WEEK, WED.

Pretty Governess Marries Honduras Man After Brief Courtship.

A courtship which lasted only a week ended in a wedding in Yonkers yesterday, when Alderman Ralph Dedrick married Miss Clara Lavinia Love, a governess in the home of Elias D. Costro at 40 St. Andrew's Place, and Parry Rosenhanpt, chief clerk of the Lela Railroad Company in Honduras. While shopping in Manhattan last Wednesday Miss Love was halted by the ropes of a fire line in the street. Rosenhanpt, who is here from Honduras on a business trip, volunteered to help her through the crowds. The next day he was a visitor in Yonkers, and two days later persuaded the pretty governess to accompany him back to Honduras as his wife. They were married in the City Hall. Rosenhanpt is 40 years old and his bride is 21. They may sail for Honduras next week.

MRS. DUER'S NURSERY BLESSED BY CARDINAL

Gift to Church of St. Vincent Ferrer, Opened—Donor Secret Till Ceremonies Begin.

With Cardinal Farley presiding at the ceremonies, a new day nursery at 209 East Seventy-first Street was opened yesterday under the auspices of the Catholic Church of St. Vincent Ferrer. The building, a three-story brownstone structure, was donated to the church for the purposes of a nursery by Mrs. John Beverly Duer of 107 East Sixty-fourth Street, widow of John Beverly Duer, a prominent clubman in this city, who died on Sept. 3, 1910, leaving his wife property of large value.

Mrs. Duer was opposed to giving the donation any publicity, and up to late last night the identity of the donor was not even known to the Dominican Brothers attached to the Church of St. Vincent Ferrer at 869 Lexington Avenue.

The opening ceremonies were conducted in the presence of a gathering of women members of the parish. Cardinal Farley delivered the blessing and spoke of the purpose which the nursery would fill the life of the parish. Mgr. Lavelle of St. Patrick's Cathedral was also present. The Right Rev. E. G. Fitzgerald, pastor of the Church of St. Vincent Ferrer, accepted the nursery on behalf of the parish.

The nursery will be in charge of a Board of Managers, with Mrs. Duer in the office of President. Miss Alice Grow was appointed matron. The nursery will be open every day from 7 A. M. until 6 P. M.

WALTON NOT A RECLUSE.

Friends of Dead Artist Say He Merely Disliked Publicity.

Friends of William M. Walton, the artist, whose body was found on Tuesday in the Clarkson Street Morgue, Flatbush, where it had lain for ten days after its recovery off Rockaway Point, arranged yesterday to have the body taken to the Stephen Merritt Undertaking Company's chapel, where funeral services will be held on Friday.

Mr. Walton's associates in the Century Association and the National Arts Club were convinced that he had not killed himself. In his rooms a diary and memoranda of matters which he wished to attend to in the few days following his departure from his home, 60 West Twenty-second Street, were found. His disappearance was not discovered until Monday, when a friend went to see him and found that he had been absent for three weeks.

On Monday Police Commissioner Woods, through the Missing Persons Bureau, began a search for Mr. Walton. When Lieutenant Williams heard of the body in the Flatbush Morgue, which had been picked up by the Captain of a fishing boat, he notified Mr. Walton's friends, and Dr. William J. Hoag, a dentist, of 331 Madison Avenue, identified the body by some bridge work which he had done.

Mr. Walton, so far as could be learned, had no near relatives. He came to this city from Philadelphia, but had lived in this city for thirty-five years.

His friends were anxious yesterday to correct an impression that Mr. Walton was eccentric and a recluse.

Among them were Edwin H. Blashfield, the artist, of 48 West Fifty-ninth Street.

"He was quiet," said Mr. Blashfield, "but those who knew him intimately will all testify to his genial nature and his love for congenial companionship. He spent most of his spare time at the Century Club, where I came to know him well. He often visited my home, as well as those of others of his friends.

"It is not true as I have heard some say that he loved queer things, rather was he fond of quaintness. He loved fairy tales and often painted little pictures portraying the scenes in some of his favorite stories. One especially that I remember was Cinderella's coach drawn by white mice. He was not financially embarrassed although he was not a rich man. I do not think he has any debts or obligations of any sort. But the allusion to Mr. Walton as an eccentric old man is absolutely misleading. He was simply a quiet citizen who loved study and who avoided any appearance of being in the limelight."

THANKFUL FOR DR. MEZES.

New City College Head Lauded at Students' Holiday Assembly.

A Thanksgiving Assembly was held yesterday noon in the Great Hall of the College of the City of New York. The gathering was under the auspices of the Student Council, the representative student body of the college. Daniel G. Krinowsky of the class of 1916, who is President of the Council, acted as Chairman. In introducing President Sidney E. Mezes, he said:

"One of the causes for the day's thanksgiving is the coming to the college of its new, great leader, Dr. Mezes."

President Mezes addressed the students, declaring that he favored increasing student self-government at the City College, and a sane, democratic participation of students in their own affairs.

The rest of the program was as follows: Violin solo by Isaac Halpern, '16; Handel's Largo by the Glee Club, Chopin's Scherzo by Bernard Kessner, '19; violin solo by Nathan Singer, '16; "Dank Gebet" by the Glee Club, and "Auld Lang Syne" by the students.

The Organization Committee expects to be able to report the entire amount at its final meeting on Dec. 2 next.

MRS. CHURCHILL WON'T RUN.

Suffragist Not a Candidate for Dr. Shaw's Place.

Another of the possible candidates to fill the place of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw as President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association was eliminated yesterday, when Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the novelist, at the national headquarters, 505 Fifth Avenue, announced positively that she could not accept the office.

"I should consider it a great honor to hold the position," said Mrs. Churchill, "but it carries with it tremendous responsibilities and demands the entire time of the woman who fills it. My family duties make so much of a demand upon me that I could not give all of my time to suffrage work."

Mrs. Churchill works for suffrage in New Hampshire, where the Churchills have a Summer home.

Married Despite Auto Crash.

As Miss Dora Kreckman of 1,229 Herkimer Street, Brooklyn, and David Babcock were on the way in an automoible with two friends to the Church of Our Lady of the Presentation to be married at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, their auto was struck by a Rockaway Avenue car at Rockaway Avenue and St. Mark's Place, Brooklyn, almost in front of the church. One side of the automobile was smashed in and the four passengers were bruised and showered with glass. Neither Mr. Babcock nor his bride would hear of delay, however, and they walked over to the church and were married by the Rev. James F. Flynn.

CROPSEY DENIES AIDING COCHRANE

$100,000 Defamation Action May Follow Judge Hylan's Letter to Nieman.

TOLD OF $5,000 FEE OFFER

District Attorney Says He Accepted Plea from Pickpocket Because He Surrendered.

A letter from County Judge John F. Hylan to County Judge James F. Nieman, both sitting in Brooklyn, suggests that District Attorney Cropsey was guilty of favoritism in accepting a plea from Samuel Shore, a pickpocket, who was represented by Henry F. Cochrane. When the letter was made public yesterday Mr. Cochrane said he would sue Judge Hylan for $100,000. Here is the letter:

> Nov. 20, 1915.
> Hon. James T. Nieman, County Judge of Nassau County, Mineola, L. I.:
> My dear Judge: I take the liberty to write to you with reference to the Shore case that is coming before you for sentence.
> I was informed this morning by an attorney that he was offered $5,000 if he could get the defendant off on a plea as a first offender. This attorney went to the District Attorney's office, took the matter up, and was informed that they would insist on a plea as a second offender.
> Another lawyer was consulted by Shore's people, whose name I do not remember; he was offered the same. He consulted with the attorney who came to see me, and this attorney told him that nothing could be done, as he had already taken the matter up with the District Attorney.
> Later on Shore secured the services of Lawyer Cochrane, and the case was placed specially on your calendar on Nov. 11, and a plea was taken for grand larceny, second degree, as a second offense, which had previously been refused by the District Attorney.
> The attorney that complained to me seems to feel very much grieved to think that the District Attorney would not show him the same consideration that was shown to Cochrane, who was the manager of the campaign for the District Attorney's re-election.
> I also had the Police Captain of the Detective Bureau call, thinking that the case was before me, and he informed me that there was a talk about money being used to get a light sentence for this man Shore, alias Cohen. Shore is a pickpocket of international fame, and I feel that you ought to know everything connected with the case before you sentence him.
> I cannot understand why any one attorney can make arrangements with the District Attorney for a lesser plea than another for a notorious pickpocket. With kind regards, I remain sincerely yours,
> JOHN F. HYLAN.

District Attorney Cropsey said:

"No agreement, expressed or implied, was made with any one as to what plea would be acceptable to this office in the event of Shore's surrender, nor was any intimation given as to what would be the attitude of this office in that event. After Shore's surrender the question of the acceptance of a plea by him was taken up, and, after giving the matter consideration, it was thought proper that the usual course be followed, and that a plea of the crime as charged, as a first offense, would be acceptable provided it met with the approval of the Court. This has been the policy of this office during my term as District Attorney in cases in which the party saves the expense of a trial to the country. I understand that Judge Hylan has said that his letter was based on statements made by Robert H. Elder, who at one time represented Shore."

Mr. Elder refused to make any comment. Mr. Cochrane said:

"I will bring an action to recover $100,000 if I can for the implication that I had any connection with District Attorney Cropsey in the matter of obtaining a plea in a lesser degree in this case, or that I tried to obtain a lighter sentence for Shore. The only interest I have had in this case was to try to recover the $7,500 in cash that Shore's wife put up for bail. Apparently somebody was promised $5,000 and feels disappointed. This feature of the story would have borne investigation by Judge Hylan, who was so quick to rush into print."

FOR DR. SCHECHTER'S PLACE

European Scholars Discussed for Revered Jewish Educator's Place.

Mention was made for the first time yesterday of names of famous Hebrew scholars who may be called to succeed the late Dr. Solomon Schechter as President of the Jewish Theological Seminary. The seminary is likely to go to Europe for a new President, it is said. Two names are discussed. One is that of Dr. Buechler, head of the Jews' College in London, and the other that of Dr. Toznanski of the Jewish Institute in Petrograd.

The seminary Faculty, at its first meeting since the late President's death, yesterday adopted the following minute:

> Dr. Solomon Schechter is no longer among us. The Lord hath taken him away. All Jewry mourns the loss of the illustrious scholar. American Israel laments the death of the inspiring leader. We members of the Faculty, who were privileged to labor with him in the upbuilding of a house of Jewish learning on this continent, and to experience the immediate touch of his fascinating personality, are grief-stricken at the sudden departure of our beloved President, revered master, and fatherly friend.

Resolutions expressing grief were adopted at a meeting of the students, Jacob Bosniak, student President, presiding.

Detail from Old Guard Marches.

A special detail of twenty-five commissioned officers of the Old Guard celebrated Evacuation Day yesterday by parading to the Battery, where the American flag was hoisted while a salute of twenty-one guns was fired by two guns from Battery F, First Field Artillery, N. G. N. Y. Captain Charles H. Rockwell was in command of the detail of the Old Guard, and about 1,000 persons witnessed the ceremonies at the Battery. A luncheon was served to the members at the Old Guard headquarters after the exercises.

MOTHER ADMITS ARSON.

Wanted Insurance to Feed Children, She Says, Pleading Guilty.

With an 18-months-old baby in her arms, Mrs. Sarah Weintraub of 325 East Houston Street, appeared before Judge Wadhams in General Sessions yesterday and confessed setting fire to her apartment on Oct. 17 last in order to obtain $600 insurance. She wept and pleaded with the court for mercy, crying that she needed the insurance to save her five children from starvation. Incidentally she exonerated her husband, who had been arrested with her.

"My husband had nothing to do with setting the fire," the woman insisted. "He was away in the Bronx looking for work that night. The idea came to me that the insurance money would buy food for my children. They had had nothing to eat for several days. I saw no other way to provide them with food, so I piled some rags in a room and threw a match into them.

Detectives who investigated the case corroborated the woman's assertion that the husband was innocent and Weintraub, therefore, was discharged. Several neighbors informed Judge Wadhams yesterday that they believed the woman really was out of her mind when she started the fire, and that she had been driven to her crime by desperation. Judge Wadhams, believing Mrs. Weintraub deserving of clemency, suspended sentence and sent her home to her children.

The fire which Mrs. Weintraub started was extinguished before it had done any damage.

Would-Be Kissers Paroled.

Jacob Witowsky and Raymond Maloney, both thirteen years old, who attempted to kiss Miss Matilda Weill, their teacher in Public School 30 in East Eighty-eighth Street, were placed on probation until March 1 by Justice Collins in the Children's Court yesterday. Dr. Max G. Schlapp reported that unless they were placed in proper environment they were likely to become a menace to themselves and to society.

BRIDGE CAR PROFIT 100%, SAYS KRACKE

Commissioner Insists on Better Terms for the City for Use of Williamsburg Span.

CONTRACTS EXPIRE TUESDAY

New York Railways Company and the B. R. T. Threaten to Abandon the Through Service.

The temporary permit under which the New York Railways Company and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit are operating cars over the Williamsburg Bridge will come to an end on Nov. 30, and Bridge Commissioner F. J. H. Kracke has brought before the Board of Estimate the necessity of making some new bargain with them, by which the city will gain a better return for the use of its property. The companies have served on the city what the Commissioner calls an "ultimatum" to the effect that if there is any greater stringency in the terms demanded they will not continue to operate a through service over the bridge, but merely a local service.

The Commissioner points out that he has two other offers. The Third Avenue Railway Company is willing to institute a local service on the bridge provided it can retain 10 per cent. profit over the cost of operation, and the Manhattan Bridge Three Cent Line is also ready to provide a local service. The Commissioner does not faver the Three Cent Line, and is inclined to continue the arrangement with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit and the New York Railways Company, provided the contract can be revised so as to give the city a better return and to retain the right of deciding what companies shall run across the bridge.

In figures given out yesterday Commissioner Kracke showed what a gold mine the use of the Williamsburg Bridge has been to the companies. The old Bridge Operating Company, which was controlled by the B. R. T. and the New York Railways Company and had a monopoly of the bridge service, made in the six years before 1914 an average profit of more than 100 per cent. It was then wound up and its service was taken over by the two big companies.

They have asserted that although the local bridge traffic is profitable the New York Railways lost $216,878 in 1914 on through traffic, which had to cross the bridge, and the B. R. T. $140,807. The Bridge Department has compiled figures which show that of the B. R. T. car lines in the four years, 1911 to 1914, those which did not cross any bridge made only 27.445 cents an active car mile, while those which ran over the Williamsburg Bridge made 27.76 cents and those over the Brooklyn Bridge 29.645 cents.

Another point which the Bridge Commissioner criticises is the arrangement which permits the B. R. T. to count against its franchise tax the tolls it paid for sending its cars over the Williamsburg and Brooklyn Bridges. These rebates, he asserts, between 1904 and 1914, amounted to $2,786,300, and he argues that there is no reason why they should be given back, because they are not imposed as taxation but simply as rental for the use of the city property.

There is nothing in the old contract to require the companies to keep the tracks on the bridge in repair. The tracks will have to be renewed in a short time, and it would only be fair, the Commissioner considers, that the new contracts should provide that the street railway companies should keep up the tracks in first-class condition.

So the Commissioner recommends that the contracts with the B. R. T. and the New York Railways be renewed, provided that the city obtains participation in the profits of the local service by an increased rental, that the tolls on the cars be no longer deducted from the franchise taxes paid, and that the city retain the right to open the bridge to other companies if it should think desirable.

Alice Nielsen to Return to Operetta.

Alice Nielsen, who has been singing in concert and who will make her first New York appearance at the Hippodrome Sunday night as soloist at the regular weekly concert, has announced her intention of returning to the operetta stage. Her manager, Charles L. Wagner, has secured from Sir James M. Barrie the rights to adapt his "Little Minister" for an operetta. It is probable that either Puccini or Wolf-Ferrari will compose the score.

THE LATHAM TO CLOSE BY ORDER OF REFEREE

Hotel Doors Shut Tomorrow and Guests Must Move Out—Employes Also Get Notice.

The Hotel Latham, 4 East Twenty-eighth Street, will close its doors at noon tomorrow, according to an announcement made last night by Albert Pratt, the manager, and by Bernard H. Sandler, an attorney.

Guests were notified last night that they would have to seek other quarters, and all employes received notice that their service would terminate tomorrow.

The failure of the company, Mr. Sandler said, was due to the inability of the Latham Operating Company, lessees of the building, to pay their rent. The Operating Company leased the building from the Alsace Realty Company, the owners, at an annual rental of $60,000. According to Mr. Sandler, the lessees owe $17,000 rent. The European war is given as one cause for the failure. The hotel numbered many Germans among its patrons, but few of them have put up there since the war began.

Mr. Sandler and Mr. Pratt said the Latham Company had done everything in its power to keep the hotel going, offering to pay $48,000 a year rent. This offer was refused. The order to close the hotel, Mr. Sandler said, was made by Peter B. Olney, referee in bankruptcy, following a meeting of creditors yesterday.

The straitened financial condition of the hotel first became known on Sept. 24, when the company made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. Following the petition for bankruptcy, Mr. Olney was appointed referee. What the other liabilities the company has, besides rent, Mr. Sandler refused to say. He also refused to say what the company's assets are.

The hotel is a twelve-story structure, containing 232 rooms. It was opened as a hotel seven years ago.

THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH?

The old patriotism is a baffling study to the New Patriotism, the patriotism which has divested itself of the unscientific and semi-barbarous worship of a flag. The new thinker, who regards the country he happens to live in "as an abstract "group which is important just so "far as it helps along the people "of the world toward liberty and life, "and both academical and absurd the "moment it stops helping," and who regards all other countries in the same way, is continually puzzled by the tough tenacity of the old, outworn, childlike idea. Sometimes he tries to study it and arrives only at the conclusion that man is in the mass an ass, still groveling blindly before old superstitions taught him by his priests, his rulers, and the cunning demon of Capital. However, one of the more intelligent of them, Mr. MAX EASTMAN, has made a cold, scientific study of the strange survival of this phase of the fetish-worshipping age and presents it to his emancipated fellows. He finds it in what he calls "baby love," which he explains:

> I mean the disposition of all men and women to revert in critical times to the altruistic passions of their own babyhood. He loves what he loved first and leaned on. He loves it, adheres to it, tenders to it his songs and his sacrifice, and that accounts in some degree for the uncanny, queer, blind, puppylike, almost chemical way in which otherwise intelligent minds cling to the opinion that their country is right.

This unreasoning instinct, crude and savage, attaches itself to many things. The poor fool does irrationally "love what he loved first and leaned on"; it has not yet been educated out of him, scientific as we have become. One building is no better than another, perhaps not so good. Buildings should be looked at with an appraising and critical eye. Sometimes, however, a man will make a long journey to look at a certain building, perhaps a very humble and unattractive one, entirely dwarfed by the better buildings around it. To him it is different, and none of the more stately dwellings even catch his eye. The fact that he was born in it is a silly and irrelevant one. The patch of grass in front of it is just like any other grass, and when criticism and science are perfected he will lose the foolish and unreasonable feeling which makes the grass he tumbled about in as a child seem interesting to him as a man.

There is one woman for whom he has a feeling different from that which he entertains for any other woman. Yet there is no reason except that she took care of him when he was a child, for which he should feel gratitude, of course, but there is nothing in that to set her apart from other mothers and make her seem a totally different being. She may be not nearly so good or wise a woman as those other mothers, and they may be doing much more than she toward helping along "the people of the world toward liberty and life." That his feeling toward her is different from that which he feels toward much better and more useful women, that perhaps he would unreasoningly lay down his life to defend her when he would not do it for another, is the survival of some crude instinct handed down from the savage times when such unreason was necessary for the protection of the tribe and the propagation of the race; it is outlawed now.

Still more senseless is his feeling for the school he attended, the college from which he was graduated. There are better schools and colleges, ones that do more for the world. Doubtless he would admit it. Nothing could be more ridiculous than his pleasure when some young men he has never seen before defeat some other anonymities in a race or a game, merely because they are studying in the same buildings where he studied twenty years ago. There are certain scents, certain colors, that are different from all others to him, and when he tries to analyze it he finds no reason, only an absurd stirring in his memory of something that happened a long time ago.

One plot of ground is like another, one patch of water as lovely as another. Of course we shall outgrow all this nonsense as the world grows wiser. Some have outgrown it already, and these are very fortunate, very happy, above all their fellows. They meet, usually, in Cooper Union and tell each other how happy and how fortunate they are, and how incomprehensibly slow of mind the rest of us are, and analyze us curiously, dissect us to see what is in our barbarous minds. How happy the world will be when we have all reached the high plane of the New Patriotism; for with the discarding by all the world of the old patriotism should go many other old things, hampering, hindering old things, things that have no standing in an analytical age. And yet perhaps there is, after all, a reason for them; there are many things in the mind that seem to be mysteries, and yet have a reason; and if this reason is deeper than reason itself then the Socialists and the New Patriots will not at once banish them all.

MISSOURI CRIES FOR CLARK.

The times are troublous for the Democratic Party in Missouri; the spectre of the Mysterious Stranger has been seen flitting around the political graveyards of nights; and to CHAMP CLARK there goes the appeal of frightened infancy, "Papa! I'se cry-"ing. Come upstairs and see what's "the matter wiv me." He must run for Governor, or the Mysterious Stranger (Missouri's name for a Republican victory, happily invented by JOHN MCCUTCHEON the first time that rock-ribbed State dumfounded her Republican sisters by appearing in their column) will swoop down on the terrified Democracy and carry it away.

So "the Clark-for-Governor movement is gathering strength," The St. Louis Dispatch tells us, and while the Speaker does not want to accept it, "the pressure has become so strong "that he cannot disregard the move-"ment." What has brought Missouri to this plight? The Post-Dispatch and The Rolla Herald inform us. All the officers of the State administration are busy trying to wirepull themselves into the Governorship, and the Governor is trying to wirepull himself into a Senatorship; the result, confusion, disheartenment among the rank and file. "The State adminis-"tration is in bad odor; yet nearly "every important member of it is a "candidate for his own or another of-"fice." The Post-Dispatch calls it a "situation disgusting to the Demo-"cratic voters and deadly to the "party." The Herald calls it "an un-"heard-of situation or condition in "Missouri politics," and says it is "jeopardizing the party with defeat."

The Democracy, then, seeking for a candidate, beholds nothing but candidates, and turns away heartsick. The Mysterious Stranger is heard, "like footsteps in the air, gliding round." The party must be saved by somebody who is not a candidate. But everybody is a candidate except CHAMP CLARK; therefore it turns to him, because he is the only man in Missouri who doesn't want it. "The Speaker," says The Post-Dispatch, "cannot ig-"nore the call of the united De-"mocracy of his State." The finger of fate points relentlessly at him; the one qualification for the Governorship, it seems, is not to want it. The only way the Speaker can escape is to say he wants it. We shall miss him from Washington; he is the handsomest Speaker this generation can remember, the only Speaker who looked at once like GEORGE WASHINGTON, CHARLES DANA GIBSON, and RICHARD HARDING DAVIS. We shall yield him to Missouri with regret. Still, her need is greater than ours; we can by searching find a handsome Speaker, but she can't get another Governor who doesn't want the office.

THANKSGIVING.

In observing the national festival of thanksgiving founded by the first New England settlers, the American people will find much to be truly thankful for this year, though, because of the contrariness of the human mind and the varying points of view, there may not be so general an agreement in regard to our bounties and blessings as might be wished for. We have escaped the perils and horrors of war, which has twice threatened the nation, and are still at peace with the whole world, while for innumerable material advantages we have reason to be grateful. Trade prospers and there is an inspiriting prospect of a union of national sympathies between all the countries of the Western Continent which never before existed. In spite of surface indications to the contrary, it is a fact that the people of this nation were never before so closely united in sentiment and in action. The influence of a small but vociferous body of people of alien sympathies who have belittled the benefits of American citizenship and disregarded its duties has been overestimated. They form only an insignificant fraction of the discordant element, inevitable in a nation of 100,000,000 living under democratic rule, and that element regarded as a whole, though it is not safely to be ignored, justifies no apprehension as to the endurance of the Republic as a land of free institutions. The crops are abundant beyond all our needs. In a normal way, quite apart from any special enterprises of the hour, our industries are developing, and the spread of educational advantages is strengthening our people daily as competitors with the other peoples of the world in the advancing of civilization.

Let us be thankful that we have not imbibed the warlike spirit, that we are free from the thirst for conquest, that we have shown ourselves ready and willing to succor the afflicted and lend our strength to the weak of all countries. While we have as a nation rejected militarism, we have happily become convinced in time of the absolute need of adequate defense and are about to take measures to make all our possessions immune to attack. Some of us may be inclined to permit the good feeling the holiday inspires to be impaired by misgivings touching the allegations of dislike for us in foreign countries. There has been something too much of this misgiving, and we are getting in the way of discovering a sort of poor cause for pride in being "the most hated nation," but let us not indulge our national failing in the matter of superlatives and continue to try, in spite of the liability to error as common to nations as to men, to do unto others as we would have others do unto us. Much of this misgiving is engendered here in the turmoil and ferment of contention common to all democracies. There will always be differences of opinion, men will persist in viewing their own affairs and those of their neighbors from varying points of view until the dawn of the millennium, when the inhabitants of this planet shall become like the gods of their imagining.

Thanksgiving Day is devoted to many pleasant activities in social life, in the pursuit of health and amusement, but of old it was a day of heartfelt thanksgiving, first of all, and so it should always be, and especially so it should be this year. It is a feast, but why should the feast be a gorge? The markets are abundantly provided with provisions for the holiday table. Grave statisticians inform us that nearly $1,200,000 will be expended in this city today for turkey. That veritable bird of freedom is obtainable in huge numbers, freshly slaughtered or from the iceboxes of the storage men, and authorities without prejudice insist that in either condition it is good and nourishing. There is no city better supplied with ducks, and where is better food for the unassuming? We note that the cranberry crop is inexhaustible, and that the quality of the celery in the markets is all that it should be. As for the oysters from the Chesapeake or from nearer home, they are now, as always, the best oysters in the world. If one avoids the jellies which contain glucose and phosphoric acid and the cider adulterated with benzoate of soda, and controls his appetite, he may well make his Thanksgiving dinner one of the day's blessings; but there are other and greater ones to be borne in mind. Today should be a day for the expression of general and sincere gratitude.

MR. TAFT ON THE COMMON SCHOOLS.

The address of Mr. TAFT before the New York Teachers' Association at Rochester yesterday was instinct with that common sense, frankness, dislike of sham, and generous public spirit which are characteristic of him. What he said about the public schools and their deficiencies and faults is what a multitude of parents must be thinking. The intelligence of the electorate is indispensable in a country which the people rule. The Americans pay lavishly for their public school system. In the speech of politicians it has become a sort of fetish, ignorantly worshipped. But do the common schools, the limit of most American educations, furnish a sound, accurate, and thorough primary education? Why are so many of their graduates unable to spell correctly, to write a tolerable letter? Why do so many business men complain of the quasi-illiteracy of employés fresh from the public schools? Why are slovenly English and "bad gramar" so common? These and similar questions have been asked over and over again.

Sometimes it seems as if the pioneer schools of which Mr. TAFT speaks, the "little red schoolhouses" of more primitive conditions, antedating the flood of theories wherein modern education is submerged, were more successful than some of their supposedly better equipped successors. To "read, write, and cipher," to know thoroughly "the three R's," rather looked down upon by the more learned pedagogues of today, to have committed to memory the pieces of good literature in some dog-eared old "Preceptor" or "Reader," to know well in summary American history—wasn't the scant education of our grandfathers and great-grandfathers an excellent one? They didn't know much, but what they knew they knew well. They were masters of the fundamentals. Their memories were enriched with some noble poetry and prose. Their attention was not distracted by a multitude of studies and books. Nearer to the heroic origins of the United States, their patriotism was instinctive, ardent, needed no stimulation of flags and flag days.

The moderns roam over more subjects, are taught according to this and that pedantry of system and terminology, get more ornament and flourish. Is the root of the matter in them? Mr. TAFT deplores the shallowness of American primary education, the known fact that so many college students never have learned in school, and so will never learn, to spell; the want of rigid discipline, the indulgence of parents and their refusal to support the teacher's authority. A school is not—or should not be—a republic, he wisely says. Here are children, between 6 and 14. They should be made to obey, learn to "mind." Do they? Is not "Parents, obey your children" an American commandment? American children do too much as they please. They aren't made to work hard enough in school. Either they loaf or they are victims of a sterile system that fritters away their time. German children of the same age are three or four years ahead of them. The school course is too large, Mr. TAFT thinks, and plenty of folks think with him. There is no sufficient drill. English is not beaten—if this corporal word is admissible—into the heads of the pupils. Some School Trustees and County Superintendents are not too literate.

A hundred true and admirable things Mr. TAFT says. The want of manners in so many school children is a matter worth dwelling upon. Why, to be "democratic," must you be rude? Courtesy, consideration for others, should begin, must begin, in childhood. Mr. TAFT wouldn't have manners taught in the schools, but they can be taught by precept and example. We like to think of those "old world" lads and lasses of Colonial days who used to courtesy, "make a leg" before their pastors and schoolmasters. Respect for age, where has it gone? Very likely the fault is in the home. All the more need for the school to remedy it.

It was a favorite theory of the late CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS that a child should be made to study what it doesn't like. An aversion to mathematics, for instance, marks a mental deficiency or laziness that should be corrected by the study of mathematics. Mr. TAFT shares this theory, for which there is much to be said. But nowadays a child is a spoiled child. Don't make the poor dear do anything he doesn't pine for. Coddle him, offer the sweetest candy of "education" to him, kindergarten him long after the kindergarten age. Our grandfathers were made of sterner stuff. Jack had to work hard. Education was labor, not pastime and prettiness.

All these censures of the public schools are necessarily general; and local exception to them may be taken by every community that is satisfied with its schools. The essence of Mr. TAFT's criticisms is sound. As to his suggestion of supervision and comparison of schools and issuance of teachers' certificates by a magnified Bureau of Education at Washington, those of us who don't yearn for any more Federal fingers in the State pie may not be enthusiastic.

MR. CARNEGIE AT 80.

Mr. ANDREW CARNEGIE has been called the happiest rich man in the world. He is certainly rich, very rich as fortunes go, yet for many years his unceasing flow of good spirits, his cheerfulness, his optimism, have reflected that state of mind and soul that men call happiness. Mr. CARNEGIE has been happy because he chose the right road to happiness. He lived laborious days in amassing his great fortune and no doubt there was joy for him in that, but we are confident that he has found yet greater joy in spending his money. Some years ago he took it as a rule of conduct that it was disgraceful for a man to die rich. To escape that reproach he had much to do, for he was a man of great possessions, but he applied himself to the task with unwearying zeal and with a good deal more than zeal. Mr. CARNEGIE has never been a thoughtless giver. He has not spared himself the toil of research and inquiry, the pains of taking thought how he might give in ways that would be most useful to his fellow-men. His innumerable minor benefactions, even the least of them, and the great foundation which bears his name, have been the subject of much study, of planning and of faithful effort to determine in what manner his beneficent purposes might best be carried out. Since his retirement from business that has been his occupation, his enjoyment, the source of his happiness.

Mr. CARNEGIE is about the most human millionaire the world has ever seen. Money in itself interests him but slightly in comparison with the worthy things that can be done with it. So it happens that his interests have been very broad, his sympathies easily enlisted in a multitude of good and noble objects he has been asked to promote and support. He has made friends without number because he is possessed of those qualities of kindness of heart and freshness of mind, of philosophy and of philanthropy that kindle esteem and win friendship.

Today, his eightieth birthday, Mr. CARNEGIE will receive many messages of good will, expressing the hope that still greater length of years and continued happiness may attend him. It is a hope that will be cherished and expressed with full sincerity throughout the nation in the innumerable communities which have reason to be grateful to him for acts of beneficence, for the ways he has chosen of doing good to his fellow-men.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Plain Words Spoken to New Citizens.

Justices DEVENDORF and CROUCH of the Supreme Court have been giving "final papers" to aliens seeking naturalization up in Utica, recently, and both have taken commendable pains to make the new citizens realize that a change of allegiance is a most serious proceeding, and that those who make it come under certain heavy obligations in addition to gaining some valuable privileges. The remarks of Justice CROUCH on this subject were particularly emphatic, and they deserve attention, not only in Utica, but all over the country, and not only by citizens of recent naturalization, but by those who gained legal equality with the native-born long ago.

Speaking of the oath just taken before him the Justice said, "that means that from this day forth you are to be Americans—not British-Americans, not German-Americans, not Italian-Americans," and he added:

> It means that if your native land is at war with another nation, so long as the United States is neutral, you may not, by an overt act against the rules of neutrality, give aid or assistance to your native land. It means that if the United States declares war on your native land, no matter for what reason, it will be your duty to fight against those of your own race or blood—and it will be treason, punishable by death, if you give them aid or comfort.

This is certainly strong language, and it will be interesting to see what naturalized citizens, if any, either deny its accuracy or in one or another way indicate that the statement constitutes a resented condemnation of their own activities and their own notion of what they owe the country of their voluntary adoption.

The point on which Justice DEVENDORF took occasion to dwell was that of vote-selling, as among the basest of crimes. As to that The Utica Observer notes that native-born as well as foreign-born citizens have been known to sell votes, and that the buyer of them is usually of the former class, "but the hyphenated American cannot say that America put the hyphen in his name. That is an exclusively imported institution."

Ancient Rites Performed.

As a son of new, rather than of old Japan, the present Emperor of the Island Empire can hardly have preserved, while performing the curious ceremonies marking his formal accession to the throne, the mental attitude—the sense all through them of doing something deeply solemn and highly important—with which his predecessors, including his own father, presumably, went through the same long series of ancient rites. In his education there must have been a considerable amount of modernity, and it may be that he views the old tales as to the origin of his family much as do those of his subjects who have acquired so thoroughly the learning and ideas of Western civilization.

If so the gravity with which he has invoked the shades of divine ancestors as he stood before their tombs may have been largely, or even wholly, for its real or supposed effect on that great part of the Japanese population which is still more or less sincerely faithful to the old conceptions of the royal family as essentially different from common mortals. To be too nearly sure of this, however, would not be safe. It is not only in Japan that belief in the super-humanity of Kings still lingers—especially among the Kings themselves.

The Kaiser, distinctly modern man as he is in so many respects, holds opinions hardly less antiquated as to his place in the cosmos than are those which the Japanese Emperor has seemed to be professing through the many days of stately ritualistic exercises, and the way the German talks about his progenitors is not, after all, so unlike what the Japanese has been saying in the temples visited by him and his suite of great nobles. And we are misled and confused, perhaps, by the inaccuracy that lies in the word "worship," as applied to the cult of ancestors in the East. Those who know most on the subject say that the devotion shown is not worship, as we understand it, but rather a respectful recognition of heredity as influencing the living.

Possibly, though not probably, the Emperor of Japan keeps up the antique rites for about the same reasons that some not altogether dissimilar still mark the coronation of an English King—and the installation of London's Lord Mayor, for that matter—not because he thinks them of momentous consequence, but because it is simple, easy, and in some respects pleasing, to go on doing things that always have been done, even after their emptiness is known.

His Veto Would Be Right.

Earnest requests have been addressed to the Mayor of Chicago by the official representatives of the city's most important charitable organizations, and what they ask of him is that he veto a council order permitting a "tag day" to raise money for the relief of destitute widows. The object is, of course, worthy enough, but the method is open to much and severe criticism, exactly as its Chicago antagonists insist.

Only one thing can be said for this form of begging—it does usually bring out funds, most of which could not otherwise be secured. It is, however, a device utterly unscientific, as well as highly obnoxious to anybody with a sense of delicacy. Not infrequently it offends the sense of propriety as well, not to mention the sense of decency, for experience has shown that to make a "tag day" at all successful the collectors must include as many young and pretty girls as possible, and for these to go about the streets accosting strangers with demands for money is something far from pleasing to the judicious. Too often the pious blackmailing done by these amiable persons involves submission by them to familiar jesting that they ought to resent, but cannot if they are to fill their little alms boxes.

Chicago needs no such help in caring for its widows. It is a great and prosperous city, perfectly able to meet its obligations, charitable and other, in better ways.

Where Will the Men Come From?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Assuming that the plans presented by the President are adopted, how will the 500,000 "Continentals," the additional 60,000 men for the army, and the 50,000 for the navy be secured?

The pet plan of Major Gen. Wood for the establishment of an army reserve has proved an ignominious failure. Only twenty-odd men out of thousands of ex-soldiers in the United States were induced to enlist for the reserve, when it was thought that the majority of them would be eager to join. The navy recruiting stations are experiencing considerable difficulty in maintaining the navy's present authorized enlisted strength, and the army also finds it correspondingly hard to secure desirable men, due, no doubt, to the favorable industrial conditions now existing. In fact, army and navy recruiting is practically at a standstill. ALBERT LIVAIN.

PINK-CUSHION DIPLOMACY.

A Lack of Fearless Messages Flung Straight from the Heart.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On the first page of THE TIMES this morning we see, heading the Washington correspondence on the latest German crime, a repetition of the now familiar and exasperating caption, "United States to Send Sharp Note." Sharp note! Not really? What matters it whether it be sharp or dull, wise or silly? What utter folly—I was about to say childish folly, but will not do the children such injustice, for whether right or wrong, they are, when roused, at least direct and to the point. How refreshing it would be to see a temporary banishment of that diplomacy whose honeyed diction has thus far presented each spade in the guise of a silver papspoon on a pink satin cushion! We should like to hear it called a spade.

I am sure there are thousands who wish to see one fearless, unstudied message, flung straight from the heart, written so unheeding that the ink blurred and the words fell over each other in swift compelling confusion, carrying conviction in their mighty earnestness and simplicity. Anything—anything but this deadly, serene, bland, bloodless, safe machine talk! We well know that prudence, like all the other virtues, can become a vice if carried too far. Would that gentle, refined, courteous living and speech were always possible! But there are times, and this is one, when stronger things become necessary, when a reversion to the elemental on one side demands a certain amount of the same on the other.

It is with thankfulness that I see voiced in the daily papers the growing indignation of this country at our shameful attitude in this world crisis. And the fine letters which daily appear, coming straight from the hearts of aroused, aspiring, patriotic people, are good to read. They show convincingly that a clear vision of the facts, and of our responsibilities, our duties, our dangers, is not confined to officials. Indeed, if it were possible to poll a vote of men and women of this country upon the needs of the present situation, it is safe to say that we would soon be doing things, not talking about them. But, as one of the writers said yesterday, "as protesting is our only weapon as individuals, let us continue to protest, and still protest," (against the inaction of our Government.)

Our first duty—that of protest fifteen months ago—was neglected. How can we much longer escape the solemn duty now before us to help, in whatsoever way appears best, to crush this terrible power that is still menacing the world? Can we let others fight our fight—for such it is? Our clear duty is to do the right thing as it shall be revealed to us and take the consequences, whatever they may be. Is there any doubt that if the call should come there would be no lack of men to respond to it with these inspired words:

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before
His judgment seat;
Oh, be swift, my soul, to answer Him, be jubilant, my feet!
Our God is marching on!

Concerning Mormon Clergymen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There seems to be a dispute between Al Davis and others concerning the representations he made to the clergyman who married him to Miss Kelly at Elkton, Md., that brings the couple again into public notice. THE TIMES states in its headlines, "Davis Says Mormon Saw Divorce Decree." And in its news item THE TIMES says, "Pending the arrival here of the Rev. Henry W. Carr, the Mormon who performed the ceremony for Miss Eugenia Kelly," &c.

Because of these references to the Rev. Mr. Carr as a Mormon clergyman, will you kindly give me space in which to state that as Presiding Elder of the Eastern States Mission of the Mormon Church I have full authority over all marriage ceremonies performed in Delaware on behalf of this church. No person connected with the Mormon Church has any authority to perform marriage ceremonies in Delaware except by my express designation. I have never designated any person connected with our church to perform a marriage ceremony in Elkton, Md.

It must be through error that the Rev. Henry W. Carr is put forward as a Mormon clergyman. No such person is known to us. We have no clergymen at all in Elkton, Md., and we do not use the title "Reverend" in connection with those who preach for our church. We use the designation "Elder." Our almost universal policy in our mission fields is to perform marriage ceremonies only for members of our own faith. In this case we most certainly are not guilty.

Military Drill in Brazil.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an article of mine on preparedness published in the Magazine Section of THE TIMES there is an error which I wish to correct.

The statement in reference to the German settlers in Southern Brazil that "many of them are now having their military drills" came to me so directly and from such a reliable source that I never doubted it. But that statement I now wish to withdraw, because it is materially different from the statement that these Germans, most of them supposed to have been drilled in the Fatherland, are keeping up their athletic associations and sports, including rifle practice. Even as first stated, the matter is of but little moment and does not affect my argument, but this correction is due to myself.

THANKSGIVING.

The cornfields are ripe and the apples are red,
Full are the barn and the bin;
The herds on the prairies a numberless head,
The harvest is now gathered in.

The forest paid tribute, the shop and the mine
Have gladdened the grateful heart;
The looms have been clacking, the weaving is fine,
And voices are loud in the mart.

The children are laughing and running to school,
Everywhere is the Spirit call,
Fair Science is straining to widen her rule,
The earth, sea, and air to enthrall.

A moment of silence—a rapturous thrill—
Let's give our thanksgiving to God,
For all these good gifts of His bounteous will
Are poured on America's sod.

The people in answer responsive arise,
Each heart is now turned to a shrine;
The old hymns would sing themselves out to the skies,
And lips to the old prayers incline.

But the old songs fall short; tongues
falter and halt,
The music is just off the key.
The harvest is wondrous, so where is the fault—
What lacks in our jubilee?

Then the soul breaks forth of that worshipping host
In Te Deum that shall not cease,
"We thank Thee, Lord, for the harvests rich, but most
For our harvest of peace."

RUSSIA'S WINDING ROAD TO FREEDOM.

The Menace of a Bureaucracy Which Only Through Defeat Will Hold Its Sway Over a People Fighting for Double Victory.

By LEO DEUTSCH,
Editor in Chief Svobodnoye Slovo.

New York, Nov. 23, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Sergius Syromiatnikoff, in his recent letter to THE NEW YORK TIMES, did not give the entire text of the Russian Socialist Manifesto. As I understand, Mr. Syromiatnikoff took the text of the socialist manifesto from Retch which had previously taken it from Volga Day. The censorship in Russia is very strict and therefore our manifesto could not appear in full in the Russian papers. Free and democratic America may know the full content. As one of the signers of the manifesto, I wish to give now the paragraphs omitted in Mr. Syromiatnikoff's letter. Addressing ourselves to the politically conscious Russian workingmen, peasants, artisans, clerks, &c., we say:

"Misinformed people may tell you that in defending from German invasion you support our old political régime. These people want to see Russia defeated because of their hatred of the Czar's Government. Like one of the heroes of our genius of satire, Shchedrin, they mix country with bureaucracy. But Russia belongs not to the Czar but to the Russian working people. In defending Russia the working people defend themselves, defend the road to their freedom. As we said before, the inevitable consequences of German victory would be the strengthening of our old régime.

"The Russian reactionaries understand this very thoroughly. In a faint, half-hearted manner are they defending Russia from Germany. The Ministers who resigned recently, Maklakov and Shcheglovitov, in November, 1914, presented a secret report to the Czar, in which they explained how advantageous it would be for the Czar to make a separate peace with Germany. They understand that the defeat of Germany would be a defeat of the principles of monarchism, so dear to all European reactionaries.

"Our people will never forget the failure of the Czar's Government to defend Russia. But if the progressive, the politically conscious people will not sincerely take part in the struggle against Germany, the Czar's Government will have an excuse for saying: 'It is not our fault that Germany defeats us; it is the fault of the revolutionists who have betrayed their country.' And this will vindicate the Government in the eyes of the people.

"The political situation in Russia is such that only across the bridge of national defense can we reach freedom. Remember, we do not tell you 'First victory against the external enemy and then revolution against the internal, the Czar's Government.'

"In the course of events the defeat of the Czar's Government may serve as a necessary preliminary condition for, and even as a guarantee of, the elimination of the German danger. The French revolutionists of the end of the eighteenth century would never have been able to overcome the enemy, attacking France on all sides, had they not adopted the boldest revolutionary tactics. But they adopted such tactics only when the popular movement against the old régime became mature enough to render their efforts effective.

"Furthermore, you must not be embarrassed by the argument of those who believe that every one that defends his country refuses thereby to take part in the struggle of the classes. These persons do not know what they are talking about.

"In the first place, in order that the struggle of the classes in Russia should be successful, certain social and political conditions must exist there. These conditions will not exist if Germany wins.

"In the second place, if the workingman of Russia cannot but defend himself against the exploitation of the Russian landed aristocrat and capitalist, it seems incomprehensible that he should remain inactive when the lasso of exploitation is being drawn about his neck by the German landed aristocrat (Junker) and the German capitalist, who are unfortunately at the present moment supported by a considerable part of the German proletariat that has turned traitor to its duty of solidarity with the proletariat of other countries.

"By striving to the utmost to cut this lasso of German imperialistic exploitation, the proletariat of Russia will continue the struggle of the classes in that form which at the present moment is most appropriate, fruitful, and effective."

The above extracts, omitted by Mr. Syromiatnikoff, make it quite apparent that the conclusion drawn by him was unfair and unwarranted. "Every one," writes Mr. Syromiatnikoff, "will see from this manifesto how far Russia is from the imminent revolution. * * *" It is highly possible that just the reverse of this may prove true. The Russian Government is continuing its antipatriotic reactionary policy. The Duma is dissolved, the comparatively liberal Ministers have been compelled to resign, the social forces of the country are even now forbidden to be organized for the purposes of national defense. And it may be that a revolutionary outbreak in Russia is really imminent. It will become inevitable if the present Government continues its policy of opposition to the inalienable right of the people to defend their country.

Then the Russian people will face a simultaneous struggle at two fronts; matching its determined resistance with the military efficiency of the German invader, the Russian people will have to combat the cunning efforts of the Russian bureaucracy of German extraction, which is still determined to preserve its established position as the undisputed ruler of the country.

Emil Vandervelde, the former Chairman of the International Socialist Bureau and now a member of the Belgian Cabinet, was entirely right when not long ago he wrote in L'Humanité that Russia is on of the biggest democracies in the world, unfortunately ruled by a small group of Germans.

A WRITTEN LANGUAGE.

Merely a Record in Black and White of Sounds the Tongue Has Uttered.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Percy Fridenberg—the spelling of whose own last name is an excellent example of "Jonnescu becomes Johnson for the sake of simplicity"—writes against any attempt to make English spelling phonetic, and predicts, without adducing any reasons, dire disaster if we should advance on such a path. His letter afforded me much amusement, for his position is neither rational nor logical, but merely the instinctive groping of a Tory temperament.

And when this gentleman alleges the difficulty of deciding which standard of pronunciation shall rule if spelling become phonetic, he is indeed chasing a chimera. It does seem queer that no similar difficulty arises in German, whose Bavarian, Berlinese, Westphalian, and Austrian pronunciations differ far more from each other than do ours as between Atlanta, Chicago, and Oxford.

When he says that Italian and Spanish are characterized by "pronouncing them as they are written" rather than "writing them as they are pronounced," he is simply showing his ignorance. When will men of his type come to understand that written language is only a record of spoken language? They ought to be aware that spelling is not an exhibit in a historical museum, but simply a notation for sounds. It is, if you wish, a cumbersome old shorthand. The music of a tongue resides in its sounds, in them alone. It surely does not reside in the notation of these. I submit that, had Mr. Fridenberg, for example, grown up to write "thru" instead of "through," he would never dream of thinking the latter more significant or beautiful or poetic. In Italian he tacitly approves of the exactly similar cases of "sviluppare" and "idrografia." Had counsels such as this prevailed, we should now, although we pronounce the words far differently, write with Chaucer, "Whanne that Aprille with his schowres soote," and English would be a dead tongue. The history of English spelling is continuous adaptation to sound. The Fridenberg sort of man is so habituated to one stage in this process that he fails to see its continuous action. S. G. RICH.

Who Would Be Free Themselves Must Strike the Blow.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It was indeed a pitiful appeal that your anti-Socialist penned. And so we learn that bankers' hours and bank clerks' hours are not synonymous. Bankers' hours are from 9 to 3, while, it seems, the hours of bank clerks include the 9 to 3 part and then go on from 3 to 9. And now that this momentous fact is spread before the public maybe something will be done to improve their pathetic condition. And then again maybe it won't. For, after all, who cares for bank clerks? Faithful they are unto death, poor souls; but who has time to search them out in their cages and learn what it is they want when they themselves seem to have no higher ambition than to win the title of "old and faithful servitor"? The working class now and then come to a faint realization of their power and importance, and, rising in their might, attract attention and gain some slight improvement in their lot. But who can even imagine bank clerks rising in their might? H. THOMSON.

Exit Stairs in Theatres.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The attention of the Chief of the Fire Prevention Bureau is called to the dangerous arrangement of exits from balcony and gallery now existing in one of the theatres on West Forty-second Street. At the close of the performance the two streams of people meet, when leaving the two upper tiers, in one common staircase. When the theatre is crowded the crush is very bad indeed, and in case of a panic results might be disastrous.

Does not the theatre law call for separate exits and exit stairs from each of the tiers?

KULTUR FOR THE TROPICS.

Why the Monroe Doctrine Has Ceased to Benefit Latin America.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you permit me to explain why I, a Latin, look forward with pleasure to the inevitable triumph of Germany in this war? It is because I believe that the German victory will be a blessing to the people of the American tropics—the West Indies, Mexico, South and Central America—for it will mean the destruction of that bulwark of poverty, ignorance, and anarchy, the Monroe Doctrine, an iron band that has kept industry, orderly development, and science from entering the fairest and richest portions of the globe.

I will not deny that the Monroe Doctrine may have been at times a noble intention, but it is one of the crimes committed in the name of liberty. It has been upheld because promulgated by the United States and accepted by Great Britain. No other power dared to challenge it, at least not so determinedly as to invite an armed conflict.

After this war, however, the prestige of British acceptance will count for little, and if America still insists on the validity of this policy she will find herself locking horns with Germany. I do not wish to be considered as speaking disparagingly of the "home of the brave," but I do not think that America will insist to that extent. Consequently, I hope to see the day when the Germans, with their genius for efficient training and scientific methods, will come to lead us along the great highway of orderly progress. I dareay that they will be rigorous, exacting teachers. So much the better. Latin America needs discipline.

Perhaps it may seem like base ingratitude for a Cuban, the graduate of an American college, with many dear American friends, to express such opinions. But I am thinking of the needs of the Latin race in the tropics. We know that at times the United States has shown a sort of good-natured generosity in dealing with Latin America, but there has never been anything like a firm, sustained effort to teach its people, or develop its resources. You have an excellent reason for neglecting us; you have been busy with your own tremendous development. But you must cease standing in the way of a people who are eager to aid us. You have given us years of "liberty" in which to fight our revolutions and repudiate our debts. Now you must give us the "liberty" to learn from a people willing to teach us. Their willingness may be due to purely selfish motives, but we can expect more from enlightened selfishness than from a slapdash generosity.

The Third Track on Third Avenue.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why does the Interborough delay so long in putting into service the middle track on the Third Avenue line? This third track has been completed from the Bowery to the Bronx, yet only a small stretch, from Fifty-third Street to 106d Street, is used, although the traffic is congested to such an extent that the "express" trains creep along at a snail's pace and the passengers are crowded like cattle. Was this middle track put in for express service or to store empty cars? The conditions on this line are intolerable, and although the means apparently are at hand to improve conditions, no attempt to use them is made. WILLIAM T. MEADE.

Finnish Ethnology.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Ivan Narodny of the Russian Chamber of Commerce states in THE TIMES that the Finns are Turanians, and that the Letts belong to the Indian stock. In the last century ethnologists vaguely designated anything neither Indo-Germanic nor Semitic as Turanian, but the term has long become obsolete owing to the rapid progress in race research. The Letts can no more be classified as Indians than Mr. Narodny, whose mother is an Esthonian, as a Laplander or Eskimo. Esthonian civilization is by no means due to Turanian influences, but to the Kultur of the Finnish Swedes that are Prussianized. ERNEST P. HORRWITZ.

F. K. MOHR MARRIES MISS ELSA SCHAEFER

Decorations of Chrysanthemums at Ceremony in St. James's Lutheran Church.

MISS ANNE GUEST A BRIDE

Wedded to John Wesley Starbuck in Cathedral of St. John the Divine —Ahrens-Thompson Nuptials.

The wedding of Frederick K. Mohr, a son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mohr of Philadelphia, and Miss Elsa C. Schaefer, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gustave Schaefer of 8 East Eighty-second Street, was celebrated at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in St. James's Lutheran Church, at Madison Avenue and Seventy-third Street, by the Rev. Junius B. Remensnyder, the pastor. The church was decorated with white chrysanthemums, which were tied in clusters with Autumn leaves to every pew and were massed in the chancel.

The bride, who walked with her father, wore a gown of white satin brocaded in silver, having a court train of cloth of silver, draped with tulle. Her tulle veil was trimmed with rose point lace and held with orange blossoms, both of which her mother wore when she married. A new note was struck in that instead of the usual low-necked corsage the bodice was finished by a yoke and high-boned collar of point lace. The long lace and tulle sleeves fitted the arms and extended over the hands. She carried orchids and lilies of the valley.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Henry S. Dunning, was the matron of honor. Her turquoise blue taffeta frock had a coatee of dull gold lace and a short, separate train. The bridesmaids were the Misses Anna A. and Margaret R. Schaefer, sisters of the bride. They wore apricot-hued taffeta frocks, with short, full skirts and separate trains. The corsages were cut in 1830 fashion, with fichu frills of silver lace that formed slightly pointed shoulder capes. The tulle sleeves terminated midway between the shoulders and elbows in deep, pinched puffs of the taffeta, finished by full elbow frills of tulle. All carried flat, triangular bouquets of half-opened sunrise roses and ferns that fitted over the arms.

All of the attendants also wore round mushroom hats of brown tulle, with brown velvet rims; the crowns were loose puffs of tulle rising almost to a point, and clusters of sunrise rosebuds were caught in the brims.

Miss Katharine Clark was flower girl and W. H. Klenke, Jr., acted as page. The flower girl was in white lingerie and carried a basket of sunrise roses. The page was in a black velvet costume.

Mr. Mohr's brother, Howard K. Mohr, was his best man, and the ushers were John K. Mohr, another brother; Howard Longstreth, C. Frederick Brice, Dr. Henry S. Dunning, Henry W. Rogers, and Thomas H. Bauchle, Jr. A reception followed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer.

Mr. and Mrs. Mohr will make their home at 210 Tenth Road, Ardmore, Penn., on their return from their honeymoon.

Starbuck—Guest.

The marriage of John Wesley Starbuck, formerly of Chicago, a son of James M. Starbuck, and Miss Anne E. Guest, a daughter of Mrs. William Woodward Guest of 523 West 112th Street, formerly of Baltimore, Md., took place at 12:30 yesterday noon in the St. Saviour Chapel of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, on Morningside Heights. The Rev. Dr. E. B. Nash performed the ceremony in the presence of the families and a few intimate friends.

The bride wore a traveling costume of midnight blue broadcloth, trimmed with fur and topped by a large sailor hat to match, faced with sand-colored velvet, and wore gardenias. She walked with her uncle, Raymond Francis Baby, who gave her in marriage. Miss Guest had no attendants. Mr. Starbuck's best man was Stanford Harmon of Chicago, and the ushers were Rex Lee Paris and Wyndham Phinney. Channing Lefebre played on the Cathedral organ before and during the ceremony. There was no reception.

On their return from their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Starbuck will live at 149 West Twelfth Street. Mrs. Starbuck is the niece of William Snowden and of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Gordon Carroll.

Wed in St. George's Church.

The wedding of William E. Ahrens of Woodside, L. I., and Miss Hattie J. Thompson, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Thompson of 522 West 183d Street, took place at 7:30 last evening in St. George's Church, Stuyvesant Place, and was followed by a small reception for the relatives at the bride's home. The ceremony was solemnized by Bishop David H. Greer, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland, rector of the church.

The bride was in ivory crepe meteor trimmed with silver lace and having a court train of silver brocade. The tulle veil was held with orange blossoms and her flowers were valley lilies and orchids. Mrs. J. J. Baum, a sister of the bridegroom, was the matron of honor and wore orchid pink taffeta veiled with lavender net, and carried chrysanthemums to match.

The four bridesmaids were the Misses Elizabeth Becker, Beatrice McCormick, Laura Ahrens, and Margaret Calderhead. Two were in rose colored taffeta and two in orchid hued taffeta; all carried pink chrysanthemums and wore short tulle veils held with knots of rosebuds to their coiffures. Little Miss Hazel Ahrens was the flower girl.

Mr. Ahrens had his brother-in-law, J. J. Baum, as his best man, and the ushers were Harry Wylie, Edward Allinger, William H. Hanna, and Richard Wegener. On their return from their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Ahrens will live at 825 West 179th Street.

Mrs. Clare S. De Hart a Bride.

Mrs. Clare Southmayd De Hart of Elizabeth, N. J., daughter of the late John Adams Southmayd, and Elihu Cunyngham Church of this city were married at noon yesterday in the chapel of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin in West Forty-sixth Street. The Rev. Paul F. Hoffman, rector of Christ Church in Elizabeth, officiated.

The bride's brother-in-law, George Barton Maldaur, gave her in marriage. George Frederick Miles acted as best man.

Only the immediate relatives attended, and a breakfast followed the ceremony at Delmonico's. The couple left later on a trip to Old Point Comfort and Washington, D. C.

Mr. Church is a consulting engineer and was Secretary of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity under Commissioner Thompson. He is a Sergeant in Company I, Seventh Regiment, and belongs to many clubs and patriotic organizations.

Married in Princeton.

The wedding of Miss Helen Louise Robertson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Robertson of Princeton, N. J., to Archie Huston Ormond, a son of Dr. Alexander T. Ormond, formerly of the Princeton Faculty and now President of Grove City College, was celebrated yesterday at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in Princeton.

Miss Louise Furman was the bride's maid of honor and only attendant. Dr. John K. Ormond of Baltimore acted as best man, and the ushers were Stuart Robertson, brother of the bride, and Harold H. Ormond, brother of the bridegroom.

The wedding ceremony was followed by a large reception. After an extended honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Ormond will make their home in East Orange.

MISS F. A. STERN A BRIDE.

Married to Arthur B. Hyman by the Rev. Dr. Schulman at the St. Regis.

The wedding of Miss Florence A. Stern, daughter of Mrs. Matilda Stern of 59 West Ninety-first Street, and Arthur B. Hyman took place at 6:30 o'clock last evening at the Hotel St. Regis. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Samuel Schulman under a bower of white chrysanthemums and Autumnal foliage in the Louis XVI. room.

The bride, whose brother, Simon S. Stern, gave her in marriage, wore a gown of white satin and tulle, trimmed with point lace, and a tulle veil fastened to a bandeaux of pearls and caught up with sprays of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids.

Mrs. Edith S. Shoninger was the matron of honor. She was in pink taffeta and silver lace, and carried Ophelia roses. Master Robert Stern acted as page.

Morris Hyman was best man, and the ushers were Martin Paskus, Nathan Stern, Morton Rusky, Henry Cohen, William Gordon, Frederick Lazarus, and Alert and Herbert Stern.

A reception followed the ceremony, with a subsequent dinner for 100 guests in the marble banquet room.

DICKERMAN SECRETLY WED.

Princeton Football Star Married Miss Corliss, Telephone Girl, Oct. 13

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 24.—It was learned here today that "Charley" Dickerman, the Princeton football star, had secretly married Miss Gertrude Marie Corliss of Roxbury, Mass., on Oct. 13.

The bride is a telephone operator in the banking firm of Tower & Underwood, Boston, Mass. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Corliss of Roxbury, Mass. The wedding took place at Bellows Falls, Vt.

Frank English Weds Mrs. Becker.

The marriage of Frank English of New York and Mrs. Lucille May Becker took place at 8 o'clock last evening in the Rose Room of the Hotel Majestic. The bride wore an empire gown of silver and white brocade, with butterfly sleeves of chantilly lace, a silver lace and tulle hat, with silver streamers and silver slippers. Her brother, Edwin Greenwood Ratcliffe, gave her in marriage. Dr. Mosler of St. Chrysostom's Church officiated. William Hart was the best man, and the ushers were Douglas Sheridan, Almeron G. Drake, William Brandon, and George Parsons. On their return from Lakewood, where the honeymoon is to be spent, they will live in Glen Ridge, N. J., where Mr. English has given his bride as a wedding gift a house and a twenty-acre plot. Mr. English is a member of the firm of Drake & English, brokers, 15 Wall Street.

DEBUTANTES BEGIN TO MEET SOCIETY

Miss Jeannette Blake Is Introduced by Her Mother at a Dance at Sherry's for 250.

MISS HELEN D. GEER A BUD

Presented at a Reception at Her Mother's Home—Miss Isabel Yeomans Makes Her Bow at Home.

The round of entertainments for the presentation of débutantes began yesterday and will continue until late in the season.

Mrs. Israel Octave Blake of 995 Madison Avenue introduced her daughter, Miss Jeannette Blake, last evening at a dance at Sherry's for about 250 guests. The dancing was in the small ballroom, and a seated supper at small tables was served in the adjoining suite. Mrs. Blake and the débutante received alone near the ballroom entrance, the latter wearing a white velvet frock, draped with tulle and touched with silver and rhinestone embroidery.

Many of the guests came at a late hour from the dance given for Miss Isabel Yeomans, and Miss Blake was a guest at Miss Yeomans's dinner preceding the dance. The guests included many of the season's buds and a few of last year's girls and young college men. Among them were the Misses Florence Gilbert, Helen Kerr, Katharine Lamont, Adrienne Iselin, Marie Johnson, Madge Lesher, Isabel Stettinius, Lillian Palmer, Helen Porter, Constance Peabody, Emmaline Sizer, Josephine Wells, Anna Ballard, Mary Alexander, Helen Clarkson, Dorothea Camp, Josephine de Gersdorff, Marietta Chapin, Elizabeth Chapin, Eva Mali, Kathleen Macy, Audrey Osborn, Mary Updyke, Priscilla Peabody, Gretchen Damrosch, and Margaret Warren.

Mrs. Walter Geer introduced her débutante daughter, Miss Helen Danforth Geer, at a reception yesterday afternoon at her residence, 246 West Seventy-second Street, which was followed by a dinner for those receiving and a dance in the evening. Mrs. Geer had receiving with her Mrs. William Bradley and the Misses Blanche Potter and Alice McWilliams. The young girls who assisted Miss Geer were the Misses Esther Denny, Grace Franklin, Anne Winchester, Margaret Dickson, Katharine Lyon, Claire McConnell, Marion Becker, and her two cousins, Augusta Geer and Margarethe Potter.

Mrs. George Dallas Yeomans presented her daughter, Miss Isabel Yeomans, at a reception held yesterday afternoon at her home, 6 Washington Square North. The débutante was in silver and white.

Among the girls who assisted in receiving were the Misses Helen Alexander, Margaret Busk, Jeannette Blake, Fredericka Bull, Helen Barrett, Irene Gibson, Elizabeth Chapin, Beatrice Beck, Grace Colgate, Mary Cushman, Katharine Crosby, Helen Byrne, Marion Danforth, Grace Franklin, Alice Gibbs, Dorothy Greer, Kate Friffen, Mary Hartshorne, Adeline Hatch, Ensley Hodgeson, Elizabeth Jennings, Helen Kerr, Mary A. Lincoln, Florence Lincoln, Sarah Larkin, Gertrude Murray, Katharine Olcott, Charlotte Platt, Marion Perry, Helen Porter, Lilly Ruperti, Helen Pierce, Anna Rathbone, Charlotte Riker, Isabel Stettinius, Ethel Simmons, Marion Townsend, Edith Williams, Muriel Wiggin, Hope Williams, Frances Bradley of Boston, Mildred Lee of Buffalo, Mary Curtis of Wilmington, and Alice Curtis of Bridgeport.

The reception was followed by a dinner dance, the guests being seated at small tables. Others came in late for the dancing.

The ball for Miss Yeomans is not to be given by her mother until the Easter season.

FREEMAN-HUNT WEDDING.

Congressman Takes Miss F. B. Hunt as His Bride in Scarsdale.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Congressman Richard P. Freeman of New London, Conn., and Miss Fredericka B. Hunt of Chicago were married tonight at 6 o'clock in the Congregational Church, Scarsdale, by the Rev. A. O. Pritchard. The wedding was attended by close friends only, and was followed by a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip W. Russell of Church Lane, Scarsdale.

Mrs. Russell was matron of honor, and the bridegroom was attended by Mr. Russell. Misses Polly and Milly Russell were the flower girls.

The bride was attired in white velvet, and her attendant wore a gown of orchid-colored satin. The flower girls were attired in white mull.

Congressman and Mrs. Freeman will stop at the Biltmore, New York, for the holiday.

Gabriel Del Orbe, Violinist, Plays.

Gabriel del Orbe, a native of Santo Domingo, who received his education as a violinist in Europe and is said by his sponsors to have appeared abroad frequently, gave a recital last night in the Chamber Music Room at Carnegie Hall. Among his numbers were Händel's Sonata in A, Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole" and a "Melodia" and "Rhapsody" of his own composition. The player has a well-developed left-hand technique, but his bowing is rough and sometimes spoils his effects. There are often crudenesses in his style, but in spite of all the drawbacks there is an indefinably interesting element about much of his work, due, perhaps, to an unswerving sincerity and a certain native vigor. Philip Hauser played the accompaniments.

MISS ELEANOR BRYANT WEDS F. F. A. PEARSON

Bride's Uncle Gives Her in Marriage to New Yorker in St. Mark's Church, Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 24.—Miss Eleanor Adams Bryant, daughter of Mrs. Walter Henderson Bryant of this city, and Frederick F. A. Pearson of New York were married to day in St. Mark's Episcopal Church by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Eliot White.

Henry Grier Bryant, an uncle of the bride, gave her in marriage. She wore a handsome gown of soft white faille, brocaded in silver. The skirt was draped over a tulle petticoat, trimmed with flounces of point lace, which had been worn by her mother on her wedding day. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids. Her tulle veil, which fell to the end of the long court train of lace and silver brocade, was caught with orange blossoms.

Miss Hannah Chapman Wright, who acted as maid of honor, wore a frock of pale lavender satin, trimmed with silver lace. Her hat was of dark brown maline, and she carried a muff of brown maline, finished with a spray of lavender orchids. The bridesmaids, Miss Freda Lesley Pearson of New York, a sister of the bridegroom; Miss Gertrude Lewis Pancoast, Miss S. Valentine Mitchell, Miss Eleanor Pepper, and Miss Christine Harestockton, all of this city, wore charming frocks of pink satin and silver lace. They also wore brown maline hats and carried muffs of the same, trimmed with orchids.

Pennington Pearson was his brother's best man, and the following acted as ushers: P. Frederick Rothermel, 3d, of this city, J. Frederick Pearson, Jr., George Norton Miller, Jr., Frederick C. Fearing, Charles Suydam Cutting, Beverly Bogert, Kort Hanson, Arthur Gammell, and Valentine Worthington, all of New York.

A breakfast at the residence of the bride's mother, 116 South Twenty-second Street, followed the ceremony. After a wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. Pearson will live in New York.

The marriage of Miss Willie Logan McGuire, daughter of Dr. W. P. McGuire of Winchester, Va., and W. Nelson Page, a relative of the Ambassador to Italy, Thomas Nelson Page, is to be celebrated at noon on Saturday, Dec. 4, in Christ Church, Winchester, Va.

Miss McGuire's uncle, the late Dr. Hunter McGuire of Richmond, Va., was Surgeon General on the staff of Stonewall Jackson, and her father also served under General Jackson in the famous Chews Battery. Her mother was formerly Miss Nannie Tucker, a daughter of the late John Randolph Tucker, a member of Congress for many years.

Engagements.

Mr. and Mrs. George Karkeek Kirkham of 147 Gates Avenue, Montclair, N. J., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lucile Kirkham, to Henry Gordon Dunn. Mr. Dunn is a son of the late John Dunn of London. He is a graduate of Cambridge University, and resides at the Hotel Montclair. No date has been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Storrs of Berkeley Avenue, Orange, N. J., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Katherine Simpson Storrs, to Dr. Conrad Berens, Jr., of 24 East Forty-eighth Street, New York.

Edna May a Movie Star for Charity.

Edna May, who before her marriage to Oscar Lewisohn was one of the most popular actresses on the American stage, has signed a contract with the Vitagraph Company to act for a motion picture. Miss May is said to have refused to consider posing for a picture until it was suggested that the money for her services might be turned over to charity. Then she agreed and the sum was fixed at $100,000.

Miss Katherine Kieran Engaged.

Professor and Mrs. James M. Kieran of Kingsbridge announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Katherine, to Joseph V. Hogue of this city. The marriage will take place early in the Spring.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Many country house parties are in progress over Thanksgiving Day, and in town the holiday will be celebrated with quiet family dinners.

Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, who has been visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Giuseppe Catalani, in Buenos Aires, will sail from that city today for New York. Mrs. Catalani was formerly Mrs. Hutchinson Dimock, and her marriage to the then Counselor of the Italian Embassy took place about two years ago.

Mrs. William E. Borah of Washington, D. C., is at the Vanderbilt, where she will be joined today by Senator Borah.

Mr. and Mrs. John Munro of 307 West Seventy-fourth Street will give a coming-out reception for their daughter, Miss Mary Watson Munro, on Dec. 4.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Peterson of Fair Lawn, N. J., are being congratulated on the birth of a son. Mrs. Peterson was Miss Euterpe Fairhurst before her marriage.

SIR HERBERT TREE HERE TO ACT IN THE MOVIES

Later He Will Appear in New York in His Plays—Says London Wants Light Pieces During War.

Sir Herbert Tree, the English actor-manager, arrived yesterday on the Ryndam, which had an unusually turbulent passage because of heavy seas. Sir Herbert will remain in New York till Saturday, when he will leave for California to spend several months acting for moving pictures. During his stay here he will arrange for a theatre in which to appear in a repértoire of his plays upon his return from California.

"It has been almost seventeen years since I last acted in New York," said Sir Herbert in his rooms at the Ritz-Carlton, "and I am anxious to give some of the productions I have made since then. I shall probably include 'Henry VIII.,' 'The Merry Wives of Windsor,' and some of my other Shakespearean productions in my repértoire. In case I am not called home to England and the plan is consummated, I shall bring over my productions from England."

When asked about England and the war, Sir Herbert asked to be excused from answering.

"I am in a neutral country," he said, "and feel I should refrain from discussing the subject. The war has affected the London threatre seriously. I have felt it particularly at His Majesty's because they want lighter, brighter plays than the classical tragedies. So I put on a play called 'Mavourneen.' I had hoped to do a cycle of historical dramas next year, but I fear now I shall have to postpone the undertaking.

Miss Iris Tree, the actor's daughter, is here with her father.

MR. COPELAND'S RECITAL.

A Boston Pianist Plays Debussy and Other Music.

George Copeland, pianist, came from Boston yesterday, as he did last season, to give a recital in Aeolian Hall, and, though New York is overabundantly supplied with piano recitals, there was that in his which gave his listeners much pleasure of a not too common sort. He began with pieces by Rameau and Bach, the latter being dance movements from one of the clavier suites and charmingly played, and Mozart's Fantaisie in C minor. He played a group of Chopin, the waltz in A flat, Op. 34, No. 1; the A flat Etude Op. 25, No. 1, and the G minor Ballade.

The most characteristic part of his program was that devoted to six pieces of Debussy. Mr. Copeland is known as a "specialist" in Debussy, and his recitals here last season showed that he plays this music with especial skill and authority. He did so yesterday. His performance of them showed a sympathy with their delicate and poetic qualities, an extreme facility in the special kind of technique they demand, which might be called the Debussy technique. Mr. Copeland had to repeat the brilliant and amusing "Danse de Puck." This and others he had played here before. In the piece called "Et la Lune déscend sur le temple qui fut" there is assuredly musical "impressionism" at its highest and music itself at its lowest terms. In all these things there seemed to be a fuller merging of the player's spirit in that of the composer, a more successful recapturing of the elusive and sometimes wayward quality of the music, than in anything else he did.

It seemed strange that though he could treat Debussy's fragilities with so much lightness and delicacy, he was in Chopin rather heavy-handed and prosaic—considerably less successful, in fact, than in anything else. The last numbers were two Spanish dances by Grovlez, interesting as a utilization, in a thoroughly modern vein, of the Spanish rhythm and melody. The first of these Mr. Copeland was made to repeat.

"Samson et Delila" Sung Again.

At the Metropolitan Opera House last night, the opening night's opera, "Samson et Delila," was repeated with Mme. Matzenauer and Messrs. Caruso, Amato, Rothier, and Schlegel in the principal rôles. Mr. Polacco conducted.

JAMES F. SUTTON DEAD.

Oriental Art Expert Expires at His Home in Bedford Hills.

James Fountain Sutton, an Oriental art expert, and a connoisseur of modern French paintings, died yesterday at his home in Bedford Hills, Westchester County. He was in his 72d year.

Mr. Sutton was a member of the firm of A. A. Vantine & Co. many years ago, and was one of the first Americans to visit China and bring back to this country rare porcelains and other Oriental objects which are now in great demand. He retired from the Vantine firm in 1880 and the following year became a partner with Rufus E. Moore in the Kurtz Gallery at 6 East Twenty-third Street, which was renamed the American Art Gallery. He bought out Mr. Moore and formed a partnership with R. Austin Robertson and Thomas E. Kirby in the American Art Association, at which art exhibitions were held. Mr. Sutton devoted his energies to the Oriental department.

Several years ago Mr. Sutton retired from active business and went to live at Bedford Hills, where he was born.

Frank L. Entwisle.

Frank L. Entwisle, a lawyer of Brooklyn, with an office at 50 Court Street, and attorney for the State Controller, died on Tuesday at his home, 67 Church Street, Richmond Hill, L. I., in his forty-seventh year. Mr. Entwisle was also associated for fifteen years with Robert F. Pilney, referee in bankruptcy, at the Temple Bar, Brooklyn. He was a former President of the Republican Club in Richmond Hill, and at the time of his death was a Director of that organization. Mr. Entwisle was a Mason, a member of the Royal Arcanum, and a veteran of the Twenty-third and Fourteenth Regiments, holding the rank of Sergeant Major in the latter. He is survived by his wife and a child.

Edward Stein.

Edward Stein, for many years prominent in gas industries in this city, is dead following an operation for cancer of the liver in New York Hospital. He was 65 years old. For many years he was Vice President and General Manager of the Union Carbide Company. At one time he was the Eastern manager of the Del Carbo Coke and Coal Company of Virginia. Mr. Stein married Miss Julia Miller of Chicago, who died ten years ago. His home was at 70 West Eleventh Street. He is survived by two daughters, Ola M. and Vera Stein.

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED FOR ARMY AND NAVY GAME AT POLO GROUNDS

ARRANGEMENTS FOR ARMY-NAVY GAME

Cadets to Arrive at Polo Grounds at 1 o'Clock—Police to Handle Crowds.

All the arrangements have been completed for the arrival and entertainment here on Saturday of the corps of cadets from West Point and midshipmen from Annapolis for the Army and Navy game at the Polo Grounds. The midshipmen will arrive at Jersey City some time before noon, and will go by ferry to the foot of 158th Street, disembarking at 12:35. Here the battalion will form and parade to the Brush Stadium. The West Pointers will arrive at Highbridge by special train and will go on shuttle trains directly to the station at 155th Street at 12:50. This arrangement will bring the cadets and midshipmen into the Polo Grounds shortly after 1 o'clock.

The gates at the Polo Grounds will be opened at 12 o'clock, and the band from Fort Totten will give a concert until the arrival of the West Point and Annapolis bands, which are to accompany the cadet battalions. The arrangements for the policing of the streets and the grounds have been completed by Inspector Ryan, who will be in charge. For the first time in many years the city police will be on duty inside the park, which at all other times has been policed by special park policemen. All traffic will be stopped at 155th Street, and ticket holders must show their pasteboards to the policemen at this point before they can get as far as the turnstiles.

Distributed throughout the stands will be 100 non-commissioned officers from both the army and navy, who will act as guides and will keep the crowds posted as to the various celebrities as they come to their boxes and seats. This innovation will be welcomed by the spectators, who will surely keep the guides busy, asking questions about all the gold-braided army and navy officers.

President Wilson and his party will occupy boxes on the navy side, north stand, during the first half of the game, and between halves will go over to their boxes on the army side. Governor Charles S. Whitman and his party will attend the game. Mayor Mitchel also is anxious to attend, but his physicians will not permit him to do so. Mrs. Mitchel and a party will occupy the city executive's box. Secretary of War Garrison and Secretary Daniels of the navy will both attend. Secretary John B. Foster stated yesterday that if the weather is fair the game will be witnessed by the largest gathering that has ever assembled in the Polo Grounds.

The Navy team will arrive here tonight, and the Army eleven will come tomorrow morning, and both elevens will practice at the Polo Grounds tomorrow afternoon in their final workouts. The Navy will practice at 2 o'clock, and following this the Army will hold a short signal and kicking practice. The gridiron has been placed in excellent shape by Ground Keeper Henry Fabian. Hamilton Fish, whose All-Star team played on the field a few weeks ago, said the turf was the best of any gridiron he has ever played on.

Big scoreboards will be placed at both ends of the field, and will give all the details of play. Arthur Irwin, the inventor of the score board, will be in charge of this feature of the game. An innovation will be a direct telephone wire from the press stand to San Francisco, over which every play of the game will be sent to a gathering of army and navy officers on the Coast.

The Army mule will be brought along by the West Point cadets, and the Navy will also have its Navy goat on hand to take part in the parade around the side lines. The singing and cheering this year will be more elaborate than ever before, and each side has new songs and cheers. One of the Army's songs goes:

Don't blame me for what happens to the Navy;
Blame the team.
Can't you see the Army's got the goods?
For it's a dream.
Watch the mule kick and bray;
You can almost hear him say
He's got their goat
Right by the throat.
So don't blame me for what happens to the Navy;
Blame the team.

And of course they will have the song to the old tune of Tipperary, which goes:

Army, Army, you're a wonder;
You will show the Middies under;
Win this game without a blunder,
For you've got to win, you've got to win,
And down that Navy, down that Navy;
It's for the honor of the Army.

BREAKS WILL DECIDE GAME.

Navy Thinks It Has an Even Chance to Defeat West Point.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 24.—Great enthusiasm was manifested during the last practice of the Naval Academy squad this afternoon, and at its conclusion the regiment of midshipmen, singing and cheering, escorted the team back to the dressing rooms. It was only a small demonstration, however, to that which will be given when the team leaves Annapolis at 9:40 o'clock tomorrow morning en route to New York. All the friends of the team will be on hand to indicate as strongly as possible the confidence in the men who are going to make a desperate effort to break the chain of Army victories.

The chief feature of the practice this afternoon, which was secret, was defensive work by the regulars against a strong scrub which had been tutored in the Army offensive plays as observed by the local coaches in their visits to West Point. Improvement in the line was manifest, due, in a large measure, to the work of Parmenter, the Harvard line coach, who has been here this week, and Brown, the old Navy guard and tackle, who has worked hard with the forwards during the whole season. The line has been weak this year, but it is now believed that it will put up a stiff defense against the plunges of the West Point backs.

This line-up is official, with the exception of Craig at quarter back. Lieutenant Ingram stated today that he did not wish to announce the occupant of this position until just before the game starts, but there is little doubt that the selection will be Craig.

Lieutenant Ingram spoke very optimistically of the prospects of the team today, though he has not done so previously. He believes that it has improved greatly during the week, and that it now has a fair chance to win. The other coaches, and nearly every one attached to the Academy, concur with Lieutenant Ingram and believe that the contest will be decided by the breaks of the game.

Every effort is being made to ascertain if any holders of Navy tickets have permitted them to fall in the hands of persons who are offering them for sale. Any person found guilty will be refused tickets hereafter.

Lafayette's Game with Dickinson.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Nov. 24.—The last football practice of the year was held on March Field tonight. The team received the final instructions for the game with Dickinson tomorrow. There was a signal drill and a long practice for the individual kickers. The victory of the Lafayette team over Lehigh on Saturday and the general popularity of the holiday football attraction will cause an unusually large demand for tickets. The college will entertain a large number of schoolboys and the Boy Scouts of Easton at the game. There will probably be some changes in the line-up. This will be made in part so that some of the men who have worked particularly hard may receive the coveted "L." It is likely that Captain Luhr will play his last game of college football at end and Woodruff will play the other end. Mummert and Ryon are the probable tackles, Gaynor and Gulick guards, Livesey centre, Taylor quarter back, Weldon and Leech half backs, and Martin full back.

CORNELL TACKLES PENN.

Ithacans Will Claim Eastern Title If They Win Today.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—Both the University of Pennsylvania and Cornell football squads had light signal practice today in preparation for tomorrow's contest on Franklin Field. The Pennsylvania players ran through their plays on the golf links of the Whitemarsh Country Club where they will remain until noon tomorrow. The Cornell team had its work-out in Atlantic City, and will stay at the seashore until tomorrow morning. Head Coach Sharpe announced that the line-up of the big Red eleven would be the same that started against Washington and Lee. The make-up of the Pennsylvania team had not been definitely decided upon tonight.

Despite the wide disparity in the records of the two teams in the season which will close tomorrow, there is much interest in the result of the game. The visitors, with an unbroken string of victories to their credit, are determined to win a decisive victory and clinch their claim to the championship of the big Eastern colleges.

The Pennsylvania students, coaches and players, on the other hand, are hoping that the Red and Blue team will repeat the history of two other elevens and retrieve an otherwise disastrous season by winning from the Ithacans. They recall how the Pennsylvania teams in 1902 and 1908 defeated the Cornell team under somewhat similar conditions. It will be the twenty-third annual Thanksgiving Day game between the two colleges, Pennsylvania having won eighteen and tied one, while Cornell was victorious in the last two games and in 1901.

FORDHAM VS. VILLANOVA.

Maroon's Last Game of Season to be Played Today at Fordham.

The Fordham football squad held its last workout of the season yesterday. Most of the time was devoted to a scrub secret drill in preparation for the Villanova game today.

Following the secret work, Coach Vaughn allowed the students to enter the grandstands and for half an hour the Maroon eleven worked in a signal practice for their benefit. All the new plays for today's game were tried out in secret. Coach Vaughn made a last-minute change yesterday, McGuire going over from left guard to the right flank, while his place was taken by Paul Conklyn, guard on the scrub. McGuire played end earlier in the year, but because of his defensive ability he was recently sent over next to Treanor at centre. This will be the only change, according to Coach Vaughn.

The signal work was topped off with some field goal punting by Al Yule and Jim Butler, the former making five beautiful scores. He is expected to prove the Maroon mainstay today. It is his last game in the Maroon uniform, and the Bronx students gave him a big ovation yesterday. Dave Dunn will also play his last college football game today. Both Yule and Dunn were forced to enter the snake dance the students held around the field following their cheering practice. The procession was led by the Fordham mascot, the "Ram." It will be presented to the athletic association by Manager Dodin today.

No Cripples on Villanova Team.

VILLANOVA, Penn., Nov. 24.—Coach Sommer gave the Villanova eleven their last practice before the Fordham game on the college field, which consisted of the usual signal drill, and every play which Villanova expects to use against Fordham was thoroughly reviewed. The team ran through their signals and the backs handled the ball unusually well. It is expected that the Blue and White will be able to put their strongest team on the field. Captain Reagan has fully recovered from the injury which he received in the Catholic University game, and he will be back in his old place at tackle. Conway and Ward are having a close contest for the position of quarter back, and it is not known who will start in this position. The rest of the team will line up as follows: Ends, J. Reap and Breithoupt; tackles, Captain Reagan and T. Reap; guards, Henry and Wilson; centre, Lynch; full back, Thornton; half backs, Forst and McGuckin.

Chance for Intersectional Game.

Interscholastic football for the championship of the United States may be decided in a game in New York or Brooklyn this Fall. A movement has been started with a view to arranging a game between the Hamilton Institute eleven and the East Aurora (Ill.) High School team. The contest may be played at the Polo Grounds or at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn, and the tentative date is Saturday, Dec. 4.

Representatives of the Hamilton team, which defeated the Columbia freshmen yesterday on South Field, are enthusiastic over such a project, and the only obstacle is in finding a financial backer for the game. Correspondence has been exchanged between Hamilton and the East Aurora team and has resulted in the latter aggregation demanding a guarantee of $1,200 for a game to be played in this city. Intersectional football contests for the championship of the United States were first held several years ago between Oak Park (Ill.) High School and Everett (Mass.) High School. This year the East Aurora team claims the Middle Western title because of winning a State Conference series.

Deetjen Out of Wesleyan Team.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Nov. 24.—Wesleyan's fastest back, Deetjen, wrenched his knee so severely in the Trinity game Saturday that there is little likelihood that he will be allowed to play in the game against Columbia tomorrow. His withdrawal has necessitated another shake-up in the team. Captain Hingeley has been shifted from centre to full back, where his offensive work will be needed with Deetjen on the side lines. Elmer Eustis will be brought in from right end to centre. Markthaler and Crafts will fill the place made vacant by Deetjen. After the hard game of last Saturday Wesleyan's chances against the Blue and White do not seem so good. Coach Dick Eustis, Assistant Coach Dan Kenan, and Doc Fauver have been busy this week working up a new offense. Parkinson, '12, who has been following the Columbia play this season, has been here this week showing the eleven the Columbia formations. Hap Harmon, Wesleyan's left-half, came through the Trinity game without a scratch and is in fine fettle to pull off some long runs.

New Coaches' Launch for Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 24.—A new coaches' launch, the Buzz, has been presented to the Yale crews by Colonel Charles L. F. Robinson, of Hartford, it was announced to-day.

The Buzz is of the V type, 24 feet long, five-foot beam, and is finished in mahogany. It has a speed of about sixteen miles an hour.

600 WEST POINT CADETS CHEER TEAM

March to Plains and Sing and Yell as Eleven Finishes Its Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Headed by four cadets on horseback and a cadet band, the first one by the way in the history of the institution, 600 cheering cadets carrying black, gold, and gray pennants, marched in six companies and in dress parade formation across the historic "plains" to the football field this afternoon, where, amid the wildest demonstration ever staged at the Point, they assembled in the stands and rooted and sang while the Army eleven went through its final preparation for the Navy game in New York on Saturday.

The cadets rehearsed all the songs and cheers that will be used at the Polo Grounds, to the accompaniment of the academy band.

Head Coach Daly and his assistants drove the soldier team through its final heavy work today, an hour being spent in the drill. Considerable of the time was devoted to scrimmaging with the scrubs, which team was disbanded at the conclusion of the workout. All the best players were in the fray, and came out of the rough drill in good physical condition. Frequent changes behind the line marked the progress of the drill, but it was chiefly done to familiarize some of the back field men with the new plays which were rehearsed this afternoon. Gerhardt worked at quarter back with Ford and Oliphant at the half back positions and Coffin at full back. Murrill drove the second set of backs, consisting of Walker and Place at the halves and Mitchell at full back.

The line charged as a unit today and was fast in getting down the field under Coffin's kicks. The latter showed some rather erratic work in his punting today, some of his lifts having plenty of carry and height, but others going straight up in the air.

Mitchell kicked for the first string men, and Ford, too, got into the punting drill with good effect. Oliphant was coached carefully in the goal from placement drill, and he also sent several over the bar for scores in drop kicks from the field. There will be a final drill for the Army men tomorrow morning, when the coaches will send them through a sharp signal practice in their last appearance on the "plains" this year. Several class games have been arranged for during the morning also.

The usual Thanksgiving Day battles between the "Runts" and "Flankers" and the "Engineers" and "Goats" are on the card for the holiday program.

Big Score for Hamilton.

Hamilton Institute added another football victory to its long list this season yesterday afternoon by trouncing the Columbia freshmen. The score was 61 to 0. The institute boys were never in danger of defeat, but kept the ball in play almost entirely in the Columbia territory. Only at the beginning of the second half did the freshmen show any knowledge of football. A few plays seemed to fool the Hamiltonians, but the scare was short-lived, and the freshmen began to fall back toward their own goal. Only once did they make a first down by rushing the ball.

In every period Hamilton Institute scored two touchdowns, and in the third an extra one was chalked against the freshmen. End runs were especially profitable for Hamilton, and their ease in gaining the required distances discouraged the use of the forward pass to any extent. Crovat, quarter back, was the individual star of the game. He scored 19 points for his team by getting two touchdowns and kicking seven goals. Formoso, left half back and captain, and Full Back Stackpole also made two touchdowns each. The lineup:

Hamilton Inst.	Position.	Columbia Freshmen.
Merrill	Left guard	Goldberg
Peters	Centre	L. Gordon
Canavan	Right guard	Peake
Parks	Right tackle	Van Nort
Moran	Right end	Wilson
Crovat	Quarter back	McGowan
Formoso	Left half back	Culloton
Clapp	Right half back	Dunn
Stackpole	Full back	Rosen

Touchdowns—Crovat, (2,) Formoso, (2,) Stackpole, (2,) Clapp, Moran, Wilson. Goals from touchdown—Crovat, 7.

Substitutions: Hamilton Institute—Eastman for Merrill, Darrah for Eastman, Wilson for Stackpole. Columbia Freshmen—Hegeman for H. Gordon, Tait for Raegener, Gertner for Goldberg, Nashly for Peake, Ketchum for Van Nort, Rogers for McGowan, Kalman for Rogers, Silberblatt for Kalman, Freas for Rosen, Hoberg for Freas.

Referee—Ed. Thorp, De La Salle. Umpire—J. Forsythe, University of Rochester. Linesman—A. L. Stimson, Oberlin. Time of periods—Twelve minutes each.

Clash of Indians and Brown.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 24.—Brown had its last practice today for the Carlisle Indian game tomorrow. The session consisted of a dummy scrimmage and a long signal drill. The coaches are confident that Brown will have little trouble in running up a fairly large score, although the indications are that the field will be soft and slippery, making footing uncertain. All of the players are in condition and should show even better team work than was in evidence at the Harvard game. The probable Brown line-up is as follows: Weeks, right end; Farnum, right tackle; Staff, right guard; Sprague, centre; Wade, left guard; Ward, left tackle; Buttner, left end; Purdy, quarter back; Andrews, right half back; Pollard, left half back, and Saxton, full back.

The Indians are expected to line up as follows: Looks Around, left end; Welmas, right tackle; Lass, left guard; Ed Morrin, centre; Joe Morrin, right guard; Martelle, right tackle; Bird, right end; Flood, quarter back; Mays, right half back; Dickerson, left half back, and Calac, full back.

The Carlisle team has been staying at Mansfield, Mass., since the Fordham game last Saturday and has been practicing morning and afternoon since Sunday. The squad arrived in the city tonight.

Guernsey's Lucky Kick.

They are telling a story on the Yale campus about Otis Guernsey's 54-yard drop kick in the Princeton game two weeks ago, which makes Princeton men more certain than ever that Yale's victory was very much of a fluke.

The yarn is that a few days after the game one of the Yale professors stopped Guernsey and congratulated him on his marvelous kick and the strategy of the Yale quarter back, Van Nostrand, in choosing such a daring play at just that moment.

Guernsey then explained, so it is said, that Van Nostrand on the last down signaled for a punt, and when the ball was passed back to the Yale full back he had every intention of making a punt from midfield. At the moment of the kick, however, Guernsey did not heed the signal for the play, and took matters in his own hands.

He never imagined that the drop kick would go over the bars, but decided to disobey the signals and try it anyway. Guernsey was more surprised than any of the spectators when the ball bounded over the crossbar. Princeton men who have heard the story say that this is the biggest piece of Yale luck they ever heard of.

Syracuse Expects to Win Easily.

MISSOULA, Mont., Nov. 24.—With the Syracuse University eleven outweighing the Montana University players ten to twelve pounds to a man, Coach O'Neill for Syracuse predicted an easy victory here tomorrow for his team. Coach Nissen for Montana said he was confident of victory, despite the fact Syracuse backers were laying even money that their team would win by forty points.

Maulbetsch Michigan Captain.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 24.—John S. Maulbetsch of Ann Arbor was today elected Captain of the University of Michigan football eleven for 1916. Maulbetsch, Michigan's star half back, has played two years on the team.

Cornell Beats Harvard at Soccer.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 24.—Cornell defeated Harvard at association football today, 1 to 0.

"Pud" McTighe for the Tigers.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 24.—Pud McTighe, a left-hand pitcher, who made a fine showing with the Toronto Club of the International League last season, was signed today by the Detroit Americans. President Frank J. Navin of the local club made the announcement.

RUTGERS TO PLAY N. Y. U.

New Yorkers Hope to Hold Jerseyites to a Small Score.

New York University had the last practice of its gridiron season yesterday on Ohio Field, where Coach Reilley put the 'Varsity through an important drill in anticipation of the game with the strong Rutgers men, whom the local eleven plays today. To add to the difficulties of today's contest, which will be a severe test for the Violet team, it was learned yesterday that Erwig, whose injuries have been bothering him since the middle of the season, would be unable to play in his usual position at right half back against the Red and Black team today. This will place the Violet eleven in a severe predicament inasmuch as Erwig is the third of the regulars now on the crippled list, while Taylor, the most dependable substitute for a backfield position, will also be out of the game because of an operation from which he is recuperating.

For today's game Coach Reilley will be obliged to either make a radical shift in the line-up of the 'Varsity or substitute Draper, a second-string back in the vacant position. If he decides to adopt the former course the change in the line-up will probably make it necessary for Egan, who has been playing right end to go to right half back, while McCullough will fill in at end.

The workout which the Violet coaches gave the squad yesterday consisted of a long kicking drill in which Cann showed up in good form. He attempted drop kicks and kicks from placement from difficult positions on the field, and it is expected that if the Violet scores against the Rutgers team today it will come as the result of the accuracy of Cann's toe. Following this work, Reilley gave an excellent demonstration of his own ability to play the game and opposed one side of the 'Varsity line in an attempt to give the line men additional drill in offensive playing. This was the most strenuous work that the practice included, however, and a signal rehearsal for the regulars took up the remainder of the period. In this workout, open plays were constantly emphasized, and it is evident that the Violet's offense will make use of this style of attack, as it is not expected that the straight running plays will prove sufficiently formidable to penetrate the Rutgers primary defense.

Reilley is expecting, however, to surprise the New Jersey aggregation through some open plays which the 'Varsity tried yesterday, and hopes to score on the visitors or at least make a better showing than that of last year, when Rutgers defeated the Violet 33 to 0.

The probable line-up of the New York team for today's contest is as follows: Waldman, left end; Williams, left tackle; Zimmele, left guard; La Monica, centre; Doggett, right guard, Somers, right tackle; McCullough, right end; Manly, quarter back; Egan, Cann, left half backs; Egan, right half back; Bernstein, full back.

SCHOOLBOYS' FOOTBALL.

Championship of Manhattan and Brooklyn Will Be Decided Today.

The high school football championships of Manhattan and Brooklyn hinge on the games which will be played on local gridirons today. Chief interest in Manhattan scholastic football circles is centred in the annual contest between De Witt Clinton and Commerce High Schools, which will be decided at the Polo Grounds this afternoon. For the first time in several years the West Fifty-ninth Street boys will enter this game favorites over the strong Commerce eleven. Their record for the year is much better than their rivals, and if the comparative scores of the two teams are any criterion, De Witt Clinton will score a certain victory.

Both Stuyvesant and Morris High Schools retired from football competition earlier in the season for one reason or another, and therefore De Witt Clinton and Commerce are the only teams remaining to play for the championship. Both squads have suffered defeat this season. In the game which reflects best the comparative strength of the two teams, De Witt Clinton defeated Stuyvesant by 32 to 0, whereas Commerce won by but 6 to 0. A record crowd is expected at this game because of the great rivalry that exists between the schools.

Two games will be played at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, bringing together Boys' High and Manual Training and Bay Ridge and Commercial. Upon the Boys' High-Manual contest depends the championship of Brooklyn. If Boys' High wins it will be tied with the Adelphi Academy eleven, but should Manual Training triumph, the championship will go to the Adelphi boys without dispute. Considering the work of the teams, there is little to choose between Boys' High and Manual Training, despite the fact that Boys' High has made the best record against Brooklyn teams. The Red and Black players have taken a remarkable brace since the opening of the season and at the present time are capable of giving as high class an exhibition as any other scholastic combination.

Poly Prep and Erasmus Hall, rivals for fifteen years, will engage in their annual game at Washington Park, and will be watched by some of the most prominent people in Brooklyn. Poly Prep is generally conceded to have an edge on Erasmus, despite the fact that the latter team has shown a sturdy defense and a splendid offense in all its recent games.

In the morning at Washington Park Brooklyn Prep and Rutgers Prep will meet, and in the afternoon at Hawthorne Field, Brooklyn, the St. Francis Prep squad will oppose an eleven of former students.

Union's Basket Ball Prospects.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The coming basket ball season at Union College promises to be a successful one. Although four members of last year's championship team have been graduated, the prospects for this year are very bright. All of last year's second 'Varsity are still in college, and it is expected that competition for places on the team will be keen. Coach Dawson has the following material from which to develop a team: Guards, Captain Zimmer, Girling, and Roof; forwards, Mudge, Haubner, Moynihan, and Scoby, and centre, Galbraith. The following new men have been out for practice: Yovits and Glover of Schenectady; Sittner and Whitbeck of Scotia, Moora of Montclair, and Goff of Pawling School. This season's schedule follows: Dec. 11, State College for Teachers at Schenectady; 18th, Clarkson Tech at Schenectady; Jan. 8, R. P. I. at Schenectady; 14th, Wesleyan at Middletown; 15th, Crescent at New York City; 22d, Amherst at Amherst; Feb. 5, Lehigh at Schenectady; 12th, St. Lawrence at Schenectady; 17th, Williams at Schenectady; 19th, Amherst at Schenectady; 22d, West Point at West Point; 26th, R. P. I. at Troy; March 1, Williams at Williamstown; 4th, Wesleyan at Schenectady; 11th, Princeton at Schenectady.

Xavier Boys Win Two Games.

Manhattan Prep basket ball team was defeated by the Xavier High School five yesterday afternoon by a score of 42 to 10 on Xavier's court. The line-up:

Manhattan.	Position.	Xavier.
Sexton	Right field	Brown
O'Reilly	Left field	Donovan
Cassidy	Centre	Farrell
Sullivan	Right guard	Cunningham

Field goals: Xavier—Brown, 3; Donovan, 6; Farrell, 2; Cosgrove, 3. Manhattan—Sexton, 3; O'Reilly, 1. Foul goals: Xavier—Cosgrove, 2. Manhattan—O'Reilly, 1; Sullivan, 1. Referee—Mr. Loftus.

The Xavier Goblins defeated St. Peter's second juniors by a score of 30 to 27.

Tie for Van Amringe Cup.

The fourth and last Van Amringe run for the Columbia cross-country team was held yesterday and was won by R. L. Hunt, a junior. His time over the four and one-half mile course was 27:25. J. S. Langthorne, '17, Captain of the 'Varsity harriers, was second and H. W. Look, another junior, finished third. T. E. McCracken, '19, was fourth. Captain H. G. Larson of the freshmen team was affected by the cold near the end of the race and could not finish. Hunt's victory now ties him with McCracken in the total point scores for the cup given annually to the winner of the series. The summary:

Position, Name, and Class.	Time.
1—R. F. Hunt, '17	27:25
2—J. S. Langthorn, '17	27:45
3—H. W. Look, '17	27:45
4—T. E. McCracken, '19	29:00

Individual point totals for four races—R. L. Hunt, 14; T. E. McCracken, 14; J. S. Langthorn, 15; H. W. Look, 15; H. G. Larsen, 10 points for three races.

COLUMBIA'S HARDEST TEST IN FOOTBALL

Blue and White Expects to be Defeated by Wesleyan on South Field.

Wesleyan football team will oppose Columbia this afternoon on South Field in the fifth and last game on the schedule of the Blue and White. The time of the game has been changed from 2 o'clock to a half an hour later on account of the Thanksgiving Day observances.

Win or lose, Columbia enthusiasts will be satisfied with the work of its team, which received its first lessons in football this Fall, and which has been victorious in four games. Early in the season Wesleyan was regarded as the strongest opponent, and although the victories over St. Lawrence, Stevens, Connecticut Aggies, and New York University served to create confidence, it is no secert at Columbia that Wesleyan is expected to win today.

In preparation for the hardest game of the season, Coach Metcalf has drilled the Blue and White in many new open plays the last week. Practice has been held behind closed gates while the new plays were tried out. Columbia will place its hopes today on the right foot of Miller, the quarter back, who won last Saturday's game against New York University. Yesterday Miller spent nearly an hour in drop kicking goals from the field. The Blue and White will take the field today with its strongest combination this year and will make no excuses in case of a defeat. Although Littauer is not scheduled to start the game, he is in fair condition and will surely enter at a later period. Monroe, the substitute full back who will start, has shown wonderful progress during the last two weeks and is a capable successor to Littauer. Mansbach and Donoho have been fighting all season for permanent possession of the right half back position. There is little to choose between them. Mansbach will start today.

Practice yesterday was restricted to a half hour of signal drill. Later the backfield men and the ends tried forward passes, while Miller practiced drop kicks. The first and second elevens from the battleship Minnesota had a workout on the Columbia field, but did not engage in scrimmage work with the collegians. The line-up today follows:

Columbia.	Position.	Wesleyan.
Healey	Left tackle	Wilkinson
Kennedy	Left guard	Young
Brown	Centre	Hingeley
Cleveland	Right guard	Talbot
Wilber	Right tackle	Gordon
Buermeyer	Right end	Eustis
Miller	Quarter back	Peck
Simonds	Left half back	Harmon
Mansbach	Right half back	Markthaler
Monroe	Full back	Crafts

Referee—A. G. Johnson, Springfield Y. M. C. A. College. Umpire—J. A. Hatch, Williams. Field judge—E. H. Hastings, Jr., Cornell. Linesman—J. C. Hennessy, Brown. Time of periods—Fifteen minutes each.

EARLY DATE FOR REGATTA.

Stewards Select June 17 for Crew Races at Poughkeepsie.

The Stewards of the Intercollegiate Regatta Association have selected June 17, 1916, for the next intercollegiate regatta, in which Columbia, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Syracuse, and the championship Pacific Coast crew row annually at Poughkeepsie. This is ten days earlier than the race is usually rowed, but the change is made necessary by the fact that the tidal conditions will make it impossible to hold a race over the usual regatta course in the last week of June. Rather than postpone the race until early in July, the Stewards have chosen the alternative of rowing the race at the end of the third week in June.

The refusal of the West Shore Railroad Company to operate the observation train northward on account of the tidal conditions makes it impossible for the Stewards to select a fixed date annually, as in the case of the Yale-Harvard race at New London. As a rule the race on the Thames is rowed a week before the Poughkeepsie crews go to the mark, but 1916 will see the Yale-Harvard race decided almost a full week later than the Poughkeepsie regatta.

It is possible that the Stewards will endeavor to put into practice the plan suggested a year ago for holding the freshman and junior 'Varsity races in the morning, leaving the race for the 'Varsity crews in the afternoon.

Evander Childs Shooters Win.

Riflemen of Evander Childs High School defeated the marksmen representing Stuyvesant High School in an interesting and closely contested match yesterday afternoon in the Public Schools Athletic League round-robin competition for the Whitney trophy, by the score of 163 to 161. The match was decided on the Evander Childs range at Westchester. Several members of the two teams came within one point of making a perfect score of 35 points. The individual scores:

EVANDER CHILDS.	Points.	STUYVESANT H. S.	Points.
Kuhlman	34	Saunders, (Captain)	26
Brown, (Captain)	33	Marsh	34
Merola	29	Morgan	34
Koenig	34	Delvin	33
Tischler	33	Levin	34
Total	163	Total	161

Innovation for Six-Day Race.

The Madison Square Garden six-day bicycle race management has decided upon an innovation for the race, which starts Monday morning, Dec. 6. Instead of allowing the riders to pair up as they wish, the selections will be made by lot. Thus in place of having a few teams with a strangle hold on the big prizes before the race has fairly started, this year's event is expected to be more open than usual. Each entrant will be required to pass a physical examination before he is allowed to start.

Newark Games on Sept. 1 and 2.

For the third time since the 1916 national track and field championships of the Amateur Athletic Union were awarded to Newark, the dates have been changed. It has finally been decided to hold the junior title meeting on Sept. 1 and the seniors on the following day. These dates were requested by the Athletic Committee of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary celebration in Newark. First the committee asked for the meets to be held in the middle of August, and later they wanted the games on the Friday and Saturday following Labor Day.

Two Hikes for Walkers Sunday.

There will be a busy day for the Walking School of the Walkers' Club of America next Sunday. Two hikes are on the schedule, one of fifteen and one of twenty-five miles. The short route will lead to Hastings and return, while the long-distance squad will make a round trip to Ardsley-on-Hudson. The pace on both hikes will be moderate, and all recruits are welcome. Both walks start from Van Cortlandt Park subway station at 9 A. M.

Final Round of Handball.

The semi-final round of the open handicap handball tournament at Van Kelton Stadium was played yesterday. T. Brennan defeated J. Carrigan 18-21, 21-13 and 21-4. In the other bracket Harry Davis defeated J. Smitney 21-14 and 21-8. The winners will compete in the final round this afternoon, the best three out of five games to count.

Ganzel Signs New Players.

In a letter to Dick Carroll, John Ganzel, manager of the Brooklyn Feds, says that he has signed eight young players for next season whom he considers to be the pick of those in the minor organizations. Ganzel wrote from San Francisco, and said that he was going to Honolulu, but would be back in Brooklyn by the first of the year.

LINOW FULL OF FIGHT.

Russian Cossack Strikes Cutler and Referee in Wrestling Bout.

Ivan Linow, the giant Cossack, provided all the excitement in the second international wrestling tournament at the Manhattan Opera House last night in the second bout of the evening. He roared like a lion, scratched like a cat, shrieked in his native tongue and used every foul hold known to wrestlers besides a few that he invented on the spot. Charlie Cutler, the American strong man, had defeated the Russian once and Linow demanded a return match to a finish. He started in by grabbing Cutler by the hair, and then he endeavored to knock Cutler's head off by butting it with his own close-cropped skull. After five minutes of rough work, Linow led a hard left to Cutler's jaw, and the wrestling bout was changed to a fight much to the delight of the spectators.

After being cautioned by George Bothner, who was referee, the Cossack still continued to use leg holds and other forbidden tactics. He rushed Cutler off the mat repeatedly and then appealed to Bothner to make the American stay on. In the second period the foreigner went wild when he saw that Cutler was more than holding his own, and he struck the American several times. In spite of the cries of the spectators for the disqualification of the offender, Bothner let the struggle go on until Linow got tired of hitting Cutler, and struck Bothner for a change. It was certainly a big change, for Bothner retaliated with interest, and drove the giant Russian into the wings with three healthy swings.

Even after this the match was continued, but when the spectators threatened to invade the stage to attack the offender, Bothner awarded the match to Cutler.

Andres Balsa, of Spain, threw Al Maskut, of Turkey, in the first bout in 8:55 with a body hold. Alexander Aberg, the undefeated champion, spun Le Colosse, the Frenchman, around until he was dizzy, and then threw him with a pivot and a waist lock. Berner, the German entrant, won the applause of the crowd by the fine showing he made against the much larger Zbyszko. The bout was a draw.

Tofalos, the Greek, wrestled a draw with Anton Irsa of Austria, and Johnson of Sweden threw Schilling, of Germany, in 12:18, with a side roll and body hold. After the matches were completed, George Bothner challenged Linow, the Cossack, who struck him, to a finish match for a bet of $500.

HORSEMEN HOLD MEETING.

Association Formed for Better Highway Rules Throughout State.

The adjourned meeting of the New York State Association of Horsemen was held yesterday at the Holland House. This organization was formed in Albany last month. Its object is to secure better highway rules for horse-drawn vehicles and to further the breed of the general utility horse.

In the absence of A. H. Cosden, the President, Ernest I. White of Syracuse presided. Amendments to the by-laws were discussed and will be adopted at the next meeting of the association, which will be held in New York City during the Old Glory midwinter sale in February.

Delegates at the meeting were instructed to start a membership campaign in the counties and districts in which they live. A number of new members were elected to hold office. Among them were John M. Carlisle, former State Highway Commissioner, who was appointed on the Executive Committee; Nathan Straus, New York City, was elected Honorary Vice President, and Ernest I. White was made one of the Vice Presidents.

CRICKET DEFEATS BASEBALL

New South Wales Will Have Summer Game in One League.

Special Correspondence of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 9.—The trial of strength between the New South Wales Baseball Association and the National Baseball League of New South Wales has ended in a half and half victory for each organization. The association had controlled baseball in New South Wales and had confined its activities to games in the Winter. The league depended upon the popularity of Summer baseball, and had gradually become the rival of the association. A few weeks ago the association found itself forced to try to provide Summer games for its members, many of whom were cricketers as well as baseball players.

The opening of the Summer baseball season today found the association without a team. The league has twenty-four clubs. This proved apparently that among the members of the association there was not the demand for Summer baseball that many followers of the American sport had expected and that cricketers would prefer to play the old game. The association has now decided to drop the idea of Summer games altogether.

Sophs Win C. C. N. Y. Swim.

By scoring thirty-eight points the sophomores of the City College won the annual interclass swimming meet in the College of the City of New York pool yesterday. The best performance was the 100-yard swim, won by D. Bosworth of the sophomore class in the good time of 1:05. Liebner gave a good exhibition of form in the fancy dive, which he won easily from Klemes. The summaries:

800-Foot Relay.—Won by 1918, (Hays, Cording, Bornneman, D. Bosworth;) 1919, second; 1916, third; 1917, fourth. Time—2:57 1-5.

50-Yard Swim.—Won by Shauer, 1916; Cording, 1918, second; Hays, 1918, third; Kurzman, 1919, fourth. Time—0:29 1-5.

100-Yard Swim.—Won by D. Bosworth, 1918; Schoenberg, 1919, second; Schroeder, 1917, third; Bornneman, 1918, fourth. Time—1.05 4-5.

One-Length Novice.—Won by B. Bosworth, 1919; Lehrman, 1918, second; Mueller, 1918, third; Greenberg, 1918, fourth. Time—0:19 2-5.

Two-Length Swim, Novice.—Won by Wolff, 1918; Isler, 1918, second; Grassheim, 1919, third; Meyer, 1919, fourth. Time—0:47 2-5.

Fancy Dive.—Won by Liebner, 1919, 92 points; Klemes, 1917, second, with 86 points; Greenbaum, 1918, third, with 85 points; Chambers, 1919, fourth, with 64 points.

Plunge for Distance.—Won by Auerbach, 1919, 57 feet 6 inches; Schwartz, 1917, second, 56 feet; Beskind, 1917, 46 feet, third; Jones, 1916, 42 feet, fourth.

220-Yard Swim.—Won by Howay, 1918; Gross, 1916, second; Karsten, 1918, third; Baehr, 1919, fourth. Time—3:05 4-5.

Point Score.—Class of 1918, 38 points; 1919, second, with 28 points; 1916, third, with 12 points; 1917, fourth, with 10 points.

Jersey City's Athletic Season.

Commissioner Moore of Jersey City, Director of Parks and Public Buildings, yesterday gave out the following report for the season just ended, showing the activities of athletes at the Reservoir Playgrounds:

"There were 353 regular games of baseball played on the four diamonds in the park during the season, and crowds aggregating a total of at least 175,000 persons witnessed these contests, which do not include the hundreds of games played between small boys during the week days. Twenty different clubs played on Saturdays and Sundays, and three leagues, the Jersey City Playground League, the Church League, and the Public School League. The Reservoir team of the Jersey City Playground League won the pennant in that organization, and also the Interstate League of New York and New Jersey, Public School 28 won the silver cup of the School League on these grounds. The lawn tennis courts have been installed since Sept. 13, on which there have been 122 games played.

"The athletic field was used almost every Sunday morning and evening during the months of May, June, July, August, September, and October, during which at least 35,000 persons enjoyed the events. There were eight large athletic events during the season. The Y. M. C. A. had two meets, Anchor Athletic Club had four meets, Public School had one, and the James E. Sullivan meet, which was the largest ever held in Jersey City, making a total of about 250,000 people who used the grounds and found recreation there."

MANY BARGAINS AT OLD GLORY SALE

Well-Bred Trotters and Pacers Go for Low Figures at Garden Auction.

Nearly 200 horses were sold yesterday in Madison Square Garden, the third day of the annual Old Glory sale. Among a number of others, the consignments from W. K. Dickerson of Goshen and Cobb Brothers of Ithaca were put up at auction.

Compared with the previous day the prices were extremely poor, the highest being $900, while some of the horses offered were sold for $25 and $35. The top price was paid by H. Irwin of New York for Treganta, with a record of 2:18¼ over a half-mile track. The mare is out of a half sister of Walnut Hall, 2:08¼.

Jessie Watts of the family of Choral, sired by General Watts, was bought by T. S. Miller of Newark for $525. W. Lease of Parkway, L. I., obtained Teubaron, one of the Beaumont Farm consignment, for $625. This is a two-year-old colt, with engagements in the Kentucky and Horse Breeder Futurities, Champion Stallion Stake, and the Matron Stake.

A. Wishart of Quebec obtained a bargain when Carmen McKinney was knocked down to him for $110. The filly is a two-year-old, sired by McKinney, a fifty-thousand-dollar stallion, and the dam, Charming Bunker, who was bought not many years ago for $10,000.

The consignment from Cobb Brothers only brought fair prices. Fourth Sheet and Direct Sheet, the first by Main Sheet and the latter sired by Direct Hal, were both purchased by A. L. Thomas of St. Joseph, Mo., for $500 each.

The best prices obtained were:

Long Island A. C. Activities.

The efforts of the Long Island Athletic Club to regain its former prestige will be continued tomorrow night when a special meeting of the club will be held at the headquarters of the Bushwick Amateur League, Shubert's Hall, in Monroe Street, Brooklyn, which will be presided over by President Frank H. Plant. Matters of importance bearing on the coming indoor track season will be discussed. As a preliminary to the start of the board floor campaign the track manager has notified the following men to report to Coach James Rosenberger for training: George Bowman, H. Bowman, T. Bowman, E. Bragdorf, E. Betts, D. Brennan, D. Brown, C. A. Braunelich, T. Carroll, H. Carroll, S. Cathcart, J. Ducey, L. Glantzlen, J. Gallagher, R. Henderson, L. Holmes, W. Kramer, H. Kramer, G. Kimball, R. To Interpret Basket Ball Rules.

Basket ball officials throughout the country have been invited to attend a meeting at the Hotel Astor on Friday night, Nov. 26, to interpret the joint rules which were recently adopted by the Amateur Athletic Union, the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. and the Young Men's Christian Associations. The meeting has been arranged by George T. Hepbron, Chairman of the A. A. U. Basket Ball Committee. The new rules probably will be new to players, coaches and officials, for they are a combination of the playing regulations of the three largest amateur organizations in the country. A better understanding of the rules is expected to help make the coming basket ball season the biggest in recent years. In fact, the combining of the rules has led the Amateur Athletic Union to make preliminary arrangements for holding a championship tournament in which college, Y. M. C. A. and other teams will be invited to compete. Every man who competes in the tournament must be registered with the Amateur Athletic Union.

AMATEUR BILLIARD DATES.

Two Tournaments to be Held in New York in January.

Dates for the national amateur billiard championship tournaments were decided upon and two awards made at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players in this city last night. The Class C 18.2 balk-line tournament will begin Monday, Jan. 3, at the Morningside Academy, New York City, with Robert Weld as official referee. The Class B 18.2 balk-line tournament will be held at the Brooklyn Billiard Club, Brooklyn, beginning Monday, Jan. 24; no referee was appointed by Edward F. Gray, who presided at the meeting.

The pocket billiard tournament will begin Monday, Feb. 14. Officials of the Chicago Athletic Club have applied for the tournament, and it is likely to be awarded to Chicago.

The Class A 18.2 balk-line tournament will begin Monday, Feb. 28. The Arion Club of New York City, as well as a Chicago club, are negotiating for the premier of American billiards. The final award will be decided at a special meeting of the National Billiard Association in about two weeks.

RACING YEAR IN ENGLAND.

L. Neumann Heads List of Winners with Small Total of $67,730.

"When you find an owner of race horses heading the list for the English season with a total of $67,730, as L. Neumann has done this year," says The London Sporting Life, "the difference between a normal campaign and that of 1915 is forcibly brought home. Last year J. B. Joel was at the top, with nearly $155,000—more than twice the amount which served the same purpose at the close of the campaign a few days ago. Mr. Astor was second in 1914, with $83,000; Mr. Hulton third, with about $75,000; the late Lord Cadogan fourth, with $71,500; Sir Ernest Cassell fifth, with $65,000; His Majesty, George V, sixth, with $58,000, and Colonel Hall Walker next, with $56,500. Thus, no fewer than seven owners were credited with five-figure amounts, and, by way of contrast, this year there are only two—Mr. Neumann and Mr. Joel—who, between them, amassed $124,410, or about $35,000 less than Mr. Joel put together 'on his own' in 1914.

"The figures quoted provide the most eloquent testimony possible to the difference between racing as we have known it for so many seasons and as it has been during the troublous year which is now so rapidly drawing to a close. The same features, of course, are observable right through the long series of statistics, and it is a striking fact that a score of sixty-one has sufficed to place Donoghue at the head of the jockeys, and that the modest totals of thirty-six and thirty-five were good enough to enable F. Bullock and F. Rickaby to claim second and third positions.

"It is seldom, indeed, that the leadership among the jockeys is attained without something well over a hundred successes having been achieved, and Donoghue last year won more than double the sixty-two, which landed him so far ahead of his nearest rivals this time. Time was when nearer 200 than 100 was necessary, and Fred Archer frequently exceeded the second century, but those days are no more, the advantages enjoyed by apprentices and the wider scope afforded to riders of all grades having served to destroy anything in the shape of a 'cornering' of interests."

Champions in Open Mile Walk.

Two champion walkers are among the entries in the open one-mile invitation walk under A. A. U. rules, to be held at the Seventh Regiment games in the armory on Saturday night, Dec. 4. They are Edward Renz of the Mohawk Athletic Club and R. F. Remer, unattached. The other entries include William Macfadden and J. B. Pierman, N. Y. A. C.; Al Voelmeke, M. Birch of the Pastimes, T. Moroney and J. J. Farrell of the Bronx Church House, and Alex. Jessup of the Mohawk Athletic Club.

AMATEUR BOXERS IN N. Y. A. C. RING

Clubmen Enjoy Efforts of Contestants in Lively Bouts in City House Gymnasium.

Amateur boxers furnished plenty of sport for the members of the New York Athletic Club at the city clubhouse, Sixth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, last night, when the preliminary rounds in three classes were decided. Nearly thirty bouts were put on during the evening, but the majority of them terminated quickly, either by the knockout route or through the intervention of the referee.

As is usual with amateur ring contests, there was little science displayed, and few of the contestants showed any knowledge of ring tactics, wild swings which landed on any spot within reach and misjudged blows were a-plenty, but when an opening presented itself whereby a telling point might be scored it was seldom the men knew enough to take advantage of it. Yet in spite of these drawbacks there was plenty of real old-fashioned slugging.

Three of the five bouts in the preliminary round of the 115-pound class were stopped by the referee in the first round on account of the boys being unevenly matched. In the other two contests there was plenty of lively milling. G. Guttman, unattached, and F. Micoli, East Side Parish, were so evenly matched at the end of their three-round bout that the judges were unable to agree on the winner, the referee's decision going to Guttman on aggressive work. M. Hyman, Union Settlement, found J. Oliver, Sunshine Settlement, a tough proposition, but managed to get the decision on points.

C. Goldberg, Glencoe A. C., stopped R. Tim, unattached, in one round in the first contest in the 125-pound class, and J. Satnekow, Rutgers Place Gymnaseum, made short work of W. Sheridan, Glencoe A. C., who apparently knew more about posing than boxing. One round was enough for the Glencoe representative. The contest between J. Sullivan, unattached, and A. Vouchee, Dominican Lyceum, was one of the best of the evening. At the end of the third round the judges disagreed and the referee ordered an extra round, which was all in favor of Sullivan. W. Gressler, East Side House, defeated E. Mattini, unattached, in a one-sided bout. Gressler drove his man all over the ring and always held a safe margin. He dropped Mattini twice, when the referee stepped in. The other contests in this class were too one-sided to be interesting.

In the second round of the 115-pound class four boxers reached the semi-final round. These were J. Guttman, unattached; C. Beacher, Educational Alliance; J. Curry, unattached, and C. Valgar, Educational Alliance. All four men scored easy victories, the last named going into the semi-final brackets by default.

There was not much science in the middleweight class, but there was plenty of willingness on the part of the men, and as a result there was no lack of action. The bouts were on the slam-bang order, and the boxers tired very quickly under their efforts. The summary:

115-Pound Class.—Preliminaries—J. Curry, unattached, defeated A. Chadwick, unattached, one round, referee's decision; E. Litt, Evening Recreation Centre 188, defeated B. Valgar, Educational Alliance, one round, referee's decision; J. Guttman, unattached, defeated F. Miceli, East Side Parish, three rounds, referee's decision; C. Beacher, Educational Alliance, defeated E. Applegate, unattached, one round, referee's decision; M. Heyman, Union Settlement, defeated J. Oliver, Sunshine Settlement, three rounds, judges' decision.

Second Round.—G. Guttman, unattached, defeated E. Litt, Evening Recreation Centre 188, one round, referee's decision; C. Beacher, Educational Alliance, defeated H. Schleschenger, unattached, one round, referee's decision; J. Curry, unattached, defeated T. Quinn, Christ Church House, three rounds, referee's decision; C. Valgar, Educational Alliance, won by default.

125-Pound Class, Preliminaries.—C. Goldberg, Glencoe Athletic Club, defeated R. Tim, unattached, one round, referee's decision; J. Sullivan, unattached, defeated A. Vouchee, Dominican Lyceum, four rounds, judges' decision; J. Sinclair, Union Settlement, defeated S. Cohen, East Side House, two rounds, referee's decision; J. Sutenkow, Rutgers Place Gymnasium, defeated W. Sheridan, Glencoe Athletic Club, one round, referee's decision; W. Nelson, Atlas Athletic Club of Kearney, N. J., defeated S. Masso, Bloom Athletic Club, three rounds, referee's decision; W. Gressler, East Side House, defeated E. Mattini, unattached, two rounds, referee's decision; J. Duffy, unattached, defeated J. Ingram, unattached, one round, referee's decision.

158-Pound Class.—Preliminaries—J. Stigliohotti, unattached, defeated P. Kamowitz, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision; D. Anglin, East Side House, defeated E. Quinn, unattached, Stanford, Conn., three rounds, judges' decision; S. Harwitz, Union Settlement, defeated J. Byer, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision.

Semi-final.—A. Sutton, Trinity Club, defeated C. Axel, unattached, one round, referee's decision; W. Loughman, Trinity Club, defeated J. Stigliohotti, unattached, one round, referee's decision.

Boxer Ferguson Suspended.

Chairman F. A. Wenck of the State Athletic Commission yesterday suspended Sandy Ferguson, the New England heavyweight, from further boxing in a ring in this State. Ferguson was to have boxed Charles Weinert, the New Jersey heavyweight, Tuesday night at the Broadway Sporting Club in Brooklyn, but his condition was such that the club physician forbade his entrance into the ring.

TWO RACES FOR LESLIE.

Wins 880-Yard and Mile Run in Soldiers' Games.

Sidney Leslie, the one-mile Military League athletic champion, was the star of the annual Fall games of the Thirteenth Coast Defense Corps in their Sumner Avenue (Brooklyn) Armory last night. Leslie won both the half mile and mile handicaps, closed to members of the regiment, running from scratch in each. The Long Island Athletic Club athlete was in his best form, and annexed the 880-yard run without any difficulty in 2:02. He did not have to extend himself at any stage to come home ten yards in front of R. C. Savage of the Fifth Company, to whom he conceded thirty-five yards.

In the mile run Sid gave his brother Willie a lesson in running, giving him a start of seventy-five yards and beating him by fifteen in 4:38 4-5. The field in this event was mediocre, and Leslie could have greatly increased his advantage had he not lagged behind to coach his brother.

Eddie Goodwin, premier board-floor cycle rider of the Metropolitan district, came into his own in his first start of the season when he won the two-mile handicap open race. Goodwin, owing to his failure to enter on time, was placed thirty yards behind scratch, but even this added penalty did not prevent him winning. He beat Nat Gutoff of the Empire City Wheelmen by fifteen yards after giving him 100 yards start.

Willie Plaut of the Long Island A. C. gave a splendid exhibition of walking in the two-mile open handicap event, but he lacked five yards of beating Alexander Jessup of the Mohawk A. C., who received 1 minute and 10 seconds handicap. Plaut had five seconds start on Dick Remer, who was on scratch.

The crack Knights of St. Antony relay team, composed of La Rose, Farrell, Neil, and Blush, with 16½ yards handicap, won the half-mile relay for small clubs. A Trinity Club quartet took second place, with the Central Congregational A. A. third. Roy Morse, the national furlong champion, ran as anchor man on the Salem-Crescent A. C. team, but he did not have a chance to win, for his team was practically thrown out of the race on the first leg through the rough tactics of their opponents. The summary:

100-Yard Dash, Handicap, (Closed.)—Won by F. Myne, Seventh Company, (8 yards;) W. J. Fisher, Third Company, (2 yards,) second; Irving Summergrade, Second Company, (2 yards,) third. Time—0:10 4-5.

880-Yard Run, Handicap, (Closed.)—Won by Sidney Leslie, Fifth Company, (scratch;) R. L. Savage, Fifth Company, (35 yards,) second; William Leslie, Fifth Company, (35 yards,) third. Time—2:02.

440-Yard Run, Scratch, (Closed to Royal Arcanum.)—Won by Harry Buhler, Atlantic Council; Saul M. Boas, Irving Council, second; R. E. Gallagher, De Forest Council, third. Time—0:58 1-5.

One-Mile Bicycle Race, Handicap, (Closed.)—Won by S. C. Fenton, First Company, (80 yards;) Antony Attardi, Fifth Company, (scratch,) second; A. E. Rhoades, First Company, (100 yards,) third. Time—2:26 1-5.

220-Yard Hurdle, Handicap, (Closed.)—Won by E. Kaskell, First Company, (5 yards;) C. C. Ruggles, Fifth Company, (scratch,) second; J. Maguire, Seventh Company, (5 yards,) third. Time—0:28 3-5.

Four-Men Hike, Novice, (distance about 4½ miles.)—Won by Tenth Company. Time—26:52 1-5. First Company, second. Time—29:09 4-5. Ninth Company, third. Time—29:52 2-5.

300-Yard Run, Handicap, Closed.—Won by J. Byrne, First Company, (4 yards;) C. E. Faber, Sixth Company, (9 yards,) second; K. Zilich, Second Company, (8 yards,) third. Time—0:35.

440-Yard Run, Novice, Handicap.—Won by L. Phipps, Sixth Company; J. Lynch, First Company, second; E. Ressiquie, band, third. Time—0:58 4-5.

Two-Mile Walk, Handicap, Open.—Won by Alexander Jessup, Mohawk A. C., (1:10;) William Plant, Long Island A. C., (5 seconds,) second; J. Gallagher, Long Island A. C., (40 seconds,) third. Time—15:48 1-5.

One-Mile Run, Handicap, (Closed.)—Won by Sidney Leslie, Fifth Company, (scratch;) William Leslie, Fifth Company, (75 yards,) second; Frank R. Plant, Fifth Company, (65 yards,) third. Time—4:38 4-5.

Two-Mile Bicycle Race, Handicap, (Open.)—Won by Eddie Goodwin, unattached, (30 yards back of scratch;) Nat Gutoff, Empire City Wheelmen, (70 yards,) second; Antony Attardi, Empire City Wheelmen, (40 yards,) third. Time—4:48 3-5.

Half-Mile Relay, Handicap, (Closed to Small Clubs.)—Won by Knights of St. Antony, (W. La Rose, Farrell, Neil, and Blush,) 16½ yards; Trinity Club, (Johnson, MacKin, Silvio, and Stephenson,) 27½ yards, second; Central Congregational A. A., (Atherton, Liffner, Uhl, and Freedman,) 23 yards, third. Time—1:35 2-5.

$40,000 BID FOR BOUT.

John Reisler Would Give That Sum for Willard-Moran Fight.

John Reisler, a fight promoter, outbid Manager Jimmy Johnston yesterday when he made an offer of $40,000 for a ten-round bout between Champion Jess Willard and either Frank Moran or the winner of the Gunboat Smith-Jim Coffey bout on Monday night.

The offer was made yesterday afternoon at a conference in Jack Curley's office between Tom Jones, Willard's manager, and Reisler. Jimmy Johnston recently made an offer of $35,000 for Willard's services.

Jones and Curley asked Reisler where he intended to hold the bout, and Reisler said that he had an option on a local baseball park. It is believed that Reisler has an option on either Ebbets Field, where John Weismantel staged several bouts last Summer, or Washington Park, the Federal League ball park. Both of these places are fitted with electric lights.

Jones and Curley became deeply interested when they heard Reisler's big offer, and it is not unlikely that a match may be arranged. It is believed that, if everything can be arranged satisfactorily, Willard will be matched with the best of the other heavyweights after he has boxed against Fred Fulton.

Gunboat Smith is anxious to get another chance at Willard, as he holds a decision over the champion for a twenty-round bout on the Coast a few years ago. The proposed bout will not be held before next May.

Substitute Boxer Wins.

Kayo Smith, who was scheduled to appear against Sailor George Volk in the main ten-round bout at the New Polo Athletic Association in Harlem last night, was unable to keep his engagement, and the management substituted Al Mantone of Harlem. The latter proved an able emergency man and easily carried off the honors over his more rugged opponent. Volk was slow on his feet, while the Harlem welterweight was exceedingly fast, and Mantone was able to outpoint the sailor, jabbing him repeatedly and quickly stepping out of the way of Volk's returns.

For the first three rounds it was all Mantone. Volk being unable to evade his lightning-like jabs to the face, and particularly a left-hand blow, which Mantone landed at will. The Harlem welterweight continued his clever boxing up to the ninth round, only occasionally sending over an effective blow. Several times when Mantone got his opponent on the ropes Volk would drop his hands to his sides and let his adversary hammer away at his body without showing any effects of the blows. In the ninth and tenth rounds Volk got busy and landed some damaging punches, but he could not overcome Mantone's advantage gained in the early rounds.

Eddie Clifford and Jimmy Coffey, both welterweights, boxed an interesting draw as the final ten-round contest.

Chaney Knocks Out Reynolds.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 24.—Bobby Reynolds of Philadelphia, who last week boxed a six-round bout with Featherweight Champion Kilbane, was knocked out by George Chaney of Baltimore in the second round of a scheduled ten-round bout here tonight. Reynolds was knocked down twice for a count of nine in the first round. He was put out by a blow to the jaw after one minute and eight seconds of furious fighting by Chaney. Chaney is seeking a match with Kilbane.

GETS AID OF POLICE TO SEIZE HIS HOME

A. A. Albright Found His Apartment Held by an Angry and Threatening Woman.

SHE HAD EVICTED SERVANTS

Says She Got Telegram to Call, and Her Husband's Effects Were Taken from Her Flat While Absent.

A closed motor car drove up to the West Sixty-eighth Street Police Station at 10:30 o'clock last evening and Andrew A. Albright, President of the Rubberset Company of 56 Ferry Street, Newark, N. J., alighted and entered the station. To Lieutenant O'Leary Mr. Albright said that his wife, his small daughter, and a maid were waiting in the car outside, too frightened to go home, and he wanted a policeman to drive two women from his apartment in Harperly Hall, 1 West Sixty-fourth Street, where they had taken possession and driven out his butler and several maids.

Policeman Maguire got up beside the chauffeur, and the party drove to Harperly Hall, where, on the fifth floor, Maguire found the butler and maids gathered in the hall outside the Albright apartment. Within were Mrs. Joseph Kaufman, a pretty young woman of 23, and a woman of middle age, who brandished something long and slender, wrapped in paper, but looking like a horsewhip.

At sight of the policeman Mrs. Kaufman agreed to leave, and, with her bodyguard, whom she introduced as her maid, she followed the policeman to the sidewalk. Then she insisted on going to the station, where she told Lieutenant O'Leary she wanted to explain to him her presence in the apartment.

"I am Mrs. Joseph Kaufman," she said, "and my husband is connected with Mr. Albright's company. We have been married a little more than two years, and recently he left me and advertised he would no longer be responsible for my debts. I live in the Chautauqua Apartments at 574 West End Avenue, and today I received a telegram from Mrs. Albright. I hurried to her home at once, but was told by a maid her mistress was in Boston. I could not imagine what it meant, so I returned home. I found that in my absence the apartment had been ransacked and everything belonging to my husband had been removed.

"It was satisfied then Mrs. Albright had sent the telegram as a ruse to get me out of the apartment, so I went downtown to see my lawyer, Mr. Jerome. He told me my husband had started proceedings in divorce today. Mrs. Albright is at the bottom of all my trouble, and I know she caused this action for divorce. I went right back to her home, but she wasn't there, and that's all there is to it."

The Albrights, it developed, had been in Boston and had returned to find their home captured and their servants evicted. The affair made Mrs. Albright so nervous she dared not enter the apartment until Mrs. Kaufman had left, and this, according to Mr. Albright, Mrs. Kaufman declined to do until he got police aid.

Mr. Albright told Lieutenant O'Leary his wife was so upset they had determined to spend the night at the Knickerbocker Hotel instead of their apartment, but at the Knickerbocker later it was said they had not registered.

NEW RAILROAD RULE TO EASE CONGESTION

Lines to Eastern Ports Cut Free Storage in Cars from Thirty Days to Fifteen.

The problem of relieving the freight congestion on the railroads entering New York and other prominent Eastern ports was taken up yesterday by the traffic officials of all the roads affected at a meeting called by the Trunk Line Association. An agreement considered of great importance by the railroad men was reached after a five-hour conference.

In accordance with this agreement, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 1916, shippers sending freight destined for export will be charged demurrage if their shipments are not released from the railroad cars or from the railroad's freight terminals within fifteen days. Under the present rule no demurrage is charged for thirty days.

The new ruling will not apply to freight which is billed to a foreign port on a through bill of lading. Nor will it apply to grain shipments, for which a special provision of ten days for free storage has been made. The exception made for through freight, however, is not regarded as material, since the great part of freight is consigned to the ports free on board and is there transferred to ships by agents of the shippers.

New York City, of course, is most affected by this ruling, because the congestion is worst here. The other ports affected are Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk, and Newport News. All of the railroads entering these ports are subject to the provision, including the New York Central, the New York, New Haven & Hartford, the Erie, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, Lehigh Valley, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Reading, and Pennsylvania.

In changing the free storage provision from thirty days to fifteen days the trunk lines met the request of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Railroad men denied yesterday that formal request had been made by the commission, but the attitude of the commission was well known. On several occasions it reminded the roads that they were very liberal with their free storage privileges for export freight.

Special Relay for Fourteenth Games.

A feature of the Fall games of the Fourteenth Regiment of Brooklyn on Saturday, Dec. 4, will be a one-mile relay race, scratch, for the championship of the Borough of Brooklyn. Among the clubs eligible for this competition are the Central Congregationals, Knights of St. Anthony, Presentation, Long Island, Brooklyn, Loughlin Lyceum, and Smart Set. There will also be a relay race at the mile open to regimental teams of four, in which the Seventy-first, Thirteenth, Twenty-second, and Twenty-third Regiments and Second Battalion, N. M., are expected to compete. Nine events closed to the athletes of the Fourteenth Regiment will complete the program.

Notes for the Boxers.

Several good holiday boxing cards are offered at the local clubs this afternoon. Three ten-round bouts will be staged at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn. Jack Toland of Philadelphia and Young Dave Kurtz of Newark, N. J., are the headliners, with Allie Nack, former Metropolitan A. A. U. champion, and Battling George Davis, the principals in the semi-windup. The curtain raiser will introduce Barney Williams of Fort Slocum and Harry Nelson of the Bronx.

Young Ahearn and Kid Wagner are scheduled for the feature bout at the Clermont Athletic Club this afternoon. In the second bout Frankie Whitney, the Western lightweight, will make his first appearance in the East, tackling Walter Mohr. The other bout will be between Kokomo Kid and Eddie Wallace.

Three ten and seven four-round bouts are offered as a Thanksgiving Day card at the Queensboro Athletic Club of Long Island City. Mike Smith of the West Side and Sam Boyd of Connecticut will appear in the main bout. Charlie Dunn of Albany and Tim Murphy of the West Side and Young Gorman of Maspeth and Johnny Grist of the Bronx will figure in the other battles.

The new Polo Athletic Association announces a double bill for tomorrow night. Eddie Siegel faces Harlem Danny Burns in the first ten-round bout, while the windup will bring together Jimmy Blute of Yorkville and Red Mack of Newark. The special contest will be between Tom Quigley of Newark and Leo Yunker of the East Side.

Frankie Notter of the East Side and Soldier Bartfield, both clever welterweights, will be the principals in the Broadway Sporting Club entertainment on Saturday night. The remainder of the card includes Scotty Welsh of Harlem and Young Maato, Tommy O'Tarta and Demmy Heins, and Young Schaefer and Jack Meyer.

Pierce, members at large on the Executive Committee.

A feature of the teachers' contest for Gregg medals tomorrow evening in the green room of the Hotel McAlpin will be a class of students from the public schools and from the Hebrew Technical School for Girls, to whom instruction will be directed by the various contestants.

The Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States, Organization of Local Rabbis, the Mizrachi, the Union of Orthodox Congregations, the Hebrew Teachers' Organization, and the Chairmen and Principals of Talmud Torah have adopted a resolution against the religious feature of the Gary plan as not in accord with the American cardinal principle of complete separation between secular education and religion. The system is also opposed as harming Jewish religious schools by its lengthening of the school day.

Plans have been made for holding the tenth annual dinner of the graduates of P. S. 85, Brooklyn, at the Hotel Mohawk, on the evening of Feb. 19. President James Pasta of the alumni association, under whose auspices the banquet is held, announces that John J. Winter has consented to serve as Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements.

Free evening course in ladies' garment designing is offered at the Murray Hill Evening Trade School, 237 East Thirty-seventh Street, to those in various branches of the trade. Both theory and practice will be taken up. The work will include the designing and cutting of cloaks, suits, and tailor made dresses. Registration Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 7:30 to 9:30 P. M.

The establishment of two classes for unemployed boys and girls of legal working age in the Bush Terminal Building, Brooklyn, has been approved, as also the organization of two continuation classes in the Traffic Department of the Western Union Telegraph Company, 24 Walker Street, Manhattan.

The Board of Estimate has approved the selection of school sites on East 168th Street, between Findlay and Teller Avenues, adjacent to P. S. 53, and on Prospect Avenue, Jennings Street, and Ritter Place, adjoining P. S. 40, the Bronx.

It was decided yesterday to consolidate the two separate schools in P. S. 2 building, Manhattan.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The low area central in North Pacific Coast districts Monday evening has advanced to East Nebraska and increased considerably in intensity. Thus far it has not been attended by precipitation, except in its rear. Snow has fallen in the Middle Rocky Mountain region, and rain or snow over the Plateau States, and also in the Pacific Coast States.

In the East the weather is dominated by a high, which has built up in the last twenty-four hours over the Canadian Maritime Provinces.

Fair weather is indicated for Thursday and Friday east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio Rivers, including the Middle Atlantic States and New England.

Rain is indicated for the upper lake region Thursday, and for the lower lake region Friday.

Temperature will rise slightly in Atlantic Coast districts.

Winds for Thursday and Friday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate north, becoming variable Friday; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate north, becoming southeast Friday; South Atlantic Coast, moderate northeast.

FORECASTS—TODAY AND FRIDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Fair Thursday and Friday.

New England—Fair Thursday; Friday cloudy.

Western New York—Fair Thursday; Friday probably showers.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

The Test of an Investment is its ability to give an income which can be depended upon always. For this reason we believe the preferred stock of the Consumers Power Company (Michigan) should have the careful consideration of conservative investors.

The Consumers Power Company has always shown most satisfactory earnings, which are now three and one-quarter times the amount necessary to pay dividend charges after paying all fixed charges. The stock is protected by tangible property.

It is commission approved.

It yields well over 6%.

Railroad Bonds
Their Attractive Basis

The behavior of high grade Railroad Bonds during the past few weeks indicates that the buying power of the United States has overtaken foreign liquidation.

This liquidation, without affecting the soundness of good issues, came in such volume as to create the lowest prices for bonds in many years. Although prices for high grade bonds have rallied they still offer exceptional opportunities.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks More Active; Prices Higher—Influences Controlling Present Market Sentiment.

The retirement of a further part of the short interest was the most probable explanation of the increase in activity and of numerous advances in the stock market yesterday on the eve of the holiday. This influence was supplemented by unusual activity for special reasons here and there in the list, as in Texas Oil, which rose in a manner which recalled the sort of advances which were very common in the market for a long period this year, but which have not been frequent of late.

We are close to the end of November, which is considered a month likely to be given over to more subdued markets than those of earlier months. We are also seemingly well along with the process of offsetting some of the excess of activity and excess of bidding up of prices which preceded the uncertain markets of recent weeks. The technical position of the market at the end of that period of upbidding, the need of the market resting to allow business to make good some of the hopes upon which the rise in the stock market had been based and the disposition to wait on more favorable news from Europe, have all contributed to the course events have taken on the Stock Exchange this month.

The technical position of the market has been improved in that commitments have been reduced and prices in many instances lowered. Business has been steadily showing improvement, a fact attested again yesterday by exceptionally good reports of railroad earnings for October. What the course of the war news is to be the financial community has no way of knowing. It is an important element in the market's present calculations, but it does not follow that the military news from Europe would be controlling if other factors gained in strength as they will if business in the United States bears out present signs of further expansion. Further expansion is indicated, but only in some directions; in some it has already gone as far as it can go, save through such additions as can be made to the country's existing manufacturing plant. That is so, for instance, in the steel trade, where orders have continued to pile up despite record-breaking production. The railroads are being almost equally pressed, as is indicated by the necessity the Eastern roads are under of reducing the time allowed for the unloading of goods shipped for export and by the urgent demands of the railways for additional equipment. Managers and regulators between them, under a better-ordered system of railroad management, might have provided against this by providing that equipment when the steel mills of the country had little else to do, but in buying in a period of very great activity in the steel trade the railroads are doing now only what they have customarily done in the past. It is a situation which is welcome only as one of the usual signs of prosperity. It is a pity that we cannot take our prosperity in more even allowances, but the art of doing that still remains to be attained.

The stock market did not display any concern over reports from London that no further orders for munitions were likely to be placed in this country. It was thought unlikely here that the orders for munitions would stop abruptly, and if they were to decline from now on, and the financial community has been expecting that they would decline as the Allies develop their own munition-making resources, the gradual change from war business to peace business would be welcomed. Already the peaceful demands upon our industries are greatly outweighing the war demands. The sooner we have only peaceful demands to fill the better.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

Better News from the Balkans Causes Spirited Trading.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Arrangements made by the authorities to borrow money from the leading banks for short periods instead of a month caused a hardening in money and discount rates today. American exchange was weaker on the appearance of a number of buying orders believed to be for New York account. Cable transfers ranged from 4.70¼ to 4.70⅜.

Better Balkan news cheered the stock market. The war loan hardened, and Kaffirs and copper and rubber stocks were the firmest in other sections. Dealings in the stocks recently protected by the minimum showed declines ranging from 4 to 8 points, but the transactions were small.

American securities were dull until near the close of the session, when a few buying orders caused a steady finish. Several American gold bonds were sold.

The Bank of England, it was officially announced today, will close at 3 instead of 4 o'clock in the afternoon commencing Dec. 1.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 64 francs 50 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 86½ centimes.

EXTRA DU PONT DIVIDEND.

28½ Per Cent. Declared for Holders of Powder Company's New Stock.

WILMINGTON, Nov. 24.—The Directors of the E. I. du Pont Powder Company at a meeting here today declared dividends as follows:

One and one-half per cent. regular quarterly dividend on the old stock; 1½ per cent. regular quarterly dividend on the new stock, and an extra dividend of 28½ per cent. on the new stock. The dividends were on the common stock of the old and new issue. A regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent. was also declared on the new preferred stock.

Baldwin Works Declare Dividend.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—The Baldwin Locomotive Works today declared the regular semi-annual dividend of 3½ per cent. on the preferred stock.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Status of the Munition Business.

News from London published yesterday that the Allies are now turning out munitions so rapidly as to make it unlikely that further orders will be placed in this country did not cause any apparent disturbance in munitions stocks. The situation has been undergoing a gradual change since the beginning of the war, more than a year ago. At that time Great Britain and France had very small stocks of explosives and guns and the facilities for manufacturing them were far from adequate. Since then the Allies have been turning out munitions on a steadily increasing scale, and they are now manufacturing a very large part of their supplies. J. P. Morgan & Co., purchasing agents for France and Great Britain in this country, have from the outset advised the manufacture of as large a share of munitions as possible at home, owing to the fact that there were few plants in this country able to go into this business without radical changes in equipment. It was their idea, according to information obtained yesterday, that the Allies should only try to obtain in this country what they needed beyond the capacity of their home plants to manufacture.

Orders for Renewals.

Nearly all the munitions contracts placed here have renewal clauses providing for the duplication of original orders at the same price. As the first orders are completed these clauses are being exercised, as a rule. It was said yesterday that while the British are now turning out guns and shells on a large scale the size of the offensive movement means that they must still count on supplies from this country.

Caring for Domestic Business.

The war contracts brought to the United States served to start many idle plants, and to speed up others at a time when domestic business was flat. For that reason they were especially welcome. Lately, the regular business in which many of the munitions makers are engaged, such as the manufacture of locomotives and cars, electrical machinery, and acids, has picked up, and the war contracts have been less sought after. The belief was expressed yesterday by a man who has handled a large amount of war business that it will be much better for the United States if the report from London proves to be true. He would like to see the war business gradually disappear in favor of regular work.

An Anonymous Objection.

The Mexican Petroleum Company is sending out proxies for a meeting to be held Dec. 10 in Los Angeles to vote upon a proposal which will amount to the grouping of stock in a voting trust if the plan goes through. Evidently there are minority stockholding interests, or perhaps individual holders, who object to the proceeding, although not over their names. A few weeks ago an anonymous circular was sent to brokerage houses of the financial district commenting caustically on the plan, and urging stockholders to think deeply before they sent their proxies. Yesterday another anonymous communication appeared, urging stockowners not to consent to the proposal. The gist of the printed matter was that holders of the company's shares would be putting too much power into the hands of the Directorate if they sent their proxies. In most cases the circular was tossed into the waste basket after the recipient had read it, but it caused considerable comment just the same. E. L. Duheny, head of the company, was absent from his office, and no other Director could be reached to discuss the countermovement to the plans of the management.

Big Powder Dividend.

The du Pont de Nemours Powder dividend yesterday reflected something of the profits in the explosives industry in these war times. It was the first payment ordered on the company's new stock, of which two shares were recently issued for each of the old shares, and the extra disbursement of 28½ per cent. for the quarter brought satisfaction to many persons who had paid high prices for their stock. The usual dividend of 1½ per cent. was ordered on the new shares, making a total disbursement of 30 per cent. for the three months.

Southern Pacific.

Three large roads have issued their October earnings statements and two of the three have made high records for the month. First came the Baltimore & Ohio, and yesterday the Southern Pacific followed. The theorists may gain a point by arguing that prosperity must be general since it affects an Eastern and Western road in exactly the same way. There is particular significance in the Southern Pacific figures because the freight earnings increased so handsomely. For the last few months the passenger earnings had shown great increases, due to the Pacific expositions. It was feared that business would slow down after people had tired of expositions. It appears, however, that while the passenger traffic showed added increases in October, the freight earnings showed even larger increases. The October gross earnings for the Southern Pacific were $14,133,363, an increase of $2,128,317. The net earnings were $5,282,704, an increase of $1,200,302. The freight earnings increased $1,192,685 and the passenger earnings increased $731,340. Results for the four months of the new fiscal year show an increase in the net earnings, compared with the same period of 1914, of $4,582,267.

Mercantile Marine.

The foreclosure proceeding on the collateral trust bonds of the International Mercantile Marine is on the calendar of the United States Court for the morning of Dec. 6. There have already been two postponements of this action, each at the request of the Preferred Stockholders' Committee. If the case is heard on this occasion an argumentative battle seems assured. It is considered likely that a new plan for reorganizing the Marine Company will appear before the date set for the motion to enter a foreclosure decree.

ALARM OVER STEEL BOOM.

High Prices Checking Home Buying—More Plants Enlarging.

Steel trade comments this week say that no new orders for shells are in the hands of agents in this country, but that this does not indicate a slackening of manufacture. The price situation is causing some concern to general buyers of steel. The Iron Age says:

> The steel trade is rushing on at a speed which may easily carry it past any danger signal. The rapid advance of prices is viewed with concern in some quarters, but the protests are rather of helplessness in the face of such a situation.
> The Pennsylvania Railroad's announcement of the withdrawal of its inquiry for 11,000 cars, on which the bids showed a startling advance in prices—nearly 100 per cent. in some cases over the lowest car bids of the year—is the first strong demurrer in the home market.
> Following the recent statement that France would limit further steel buying in this country because of high prices, a London cable announces that the Allies have reached such a rate in munitions manufacture that further orders need not be placed here. It is true that there is now no new shell business in the hands of the Allies' agents here, but it is known that options were taken on quantities beyond those named in existing contracts. Further, whatever the increased munitions capacity of the Allies, they have found no way of increasing their output of steel. It is known, too, that one large buyer here for a French steel company that has already taken 400,000 tons of large rounds will continue to be a buyer in this country for another twelve months.

The Iron Trade Review says:

> Programs for enlargements of steel works capacity are becoming very numerous under the intense pressure of demand, which makers seem as far as ever from satisfying, notwithstanding the fact that the high prices now ruling are exercising some check on new business, as the mills really had hoped they might do. No less than half a dozen new propositions of enlargement of open hearth steel output and mill capacity have been brought forward this week. Most producers are so obligated on deliveries for the next six months, and not a few of them have their capacity oversold, that they are welcoming a breathing spell in order to get their bearings. It seems impossible to discourage many buyers, however, by a matter of price, and new bookings that are being pushed through by sheer force of demand are heavy.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

W. P. Bonbright & Co. have issued a circular containing a forecast of the probable course of the investment market after the war.

In the bank statement printed in these columns last Sunday the gross deposits of the Mechanics' Bank of Brooklyn were given as $17,931,100. These were the net deposits. The gross deposits were $22,828,600.

The Delano Committee for the Missouri Pacific trust 5 per cent. bonds and the first collateral mortgage 5s will receive deposits until Dec. 1.

"MOP" BONDS DEPOSITED.

About 40 Per Cent. of Two Issues Assents to Reorganization Plan.

Announcement was made yesterday that about 40 per cent. of the convertible 5 per cent. bonds and 40 per cent. of the 4 per cent. gold loan bonds of the Missouri Pacific Railway had been deposited with the Reorganization Committee.

Alexander J. Hemphill, Frank N. B. Close, and James N. Wallace, representing, respectively, the protective committees for the first and refunding mortgage bonds, the gold loan bonds, and the stock of the Missouri Pacific, have issued a circular to holders of these securities urging the quick deposit of securities and the consummation of the adjustment plans.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

While the day's price movements on the Consolidated Stock Exchange reflected a degree of irregularity, the net price changes at the close in the majority of cases favored improvement. A few stocks ran up sharply. American Smelting was particularly strong. There was also good buying of the petroleum stocks. In the so-called war group Westinghouse Electric and American Can were prominent.

RUSH TO JOIN GREAT TRADE CORPORATION

GUY E. TRIPP A DIRECTOR

Text of Charter Shows Broad Powers of the Company Seeking Foreign Investment Fields.

Organization work on the American International Corporation, the new $50,000,000 company formed to finance and develop foreign trade, went on yesterday. Temporary offices were opened in the National City Bank Building, and the officers were busily engaged yesterday in perfecting the final details. Another Director, making the twenty-second, was added to the board. He is Guy E. Tripp, Chairman of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, and a former associate of Charles A. Stone in the management of Stone & Webster.

Publication of the plans for the new corporation resulted yesterday in the receipt of so many applications for allotment of stock that the $24,000,000 not reserved for stockholders of the National City Bank has all been asked for. Many of the applicants are business men engaged in export trade, who see in the new company not only an opportunity to make money through their stock interest but a chance to broaden their markets. Individuals and firms doing a foreign business will be favored in the allotment of shares. After the subscriptions from stockholders of the City Bank have been filled and the amount set aside for the Directors taken up, it is expected that only a small part of the capital will be available for sale to outsiders.

Frank A. Vanderlip, who is to be Chairman of the new company, received a large number of congratulatory messages yesterday from business men who have felt the need of an organized effort to get a larger share of world trade for the United States.

Text of the Charter.

The text of the company's charter as filed at Albany is as follows:

> We, the undersigned, desiring to form a corporation under the laws of the State of New York, pursuant to the present business corporation law of the said State, all of us being of full age and citizens of the United States, and at least one of us being a resident of the State of New York, do hereby certify, as follows:
> First—The name of the corporation is the American International Corporation.
> Second—The purposes for which the corporation is to be formed are:
> [Here follow the purposes under eleven subdivisions.]
> In furtherance and not in limitation of the general powers conferred by the laws of the State of New York, it is hereby expressly provided that the corporation shall have also the following powers:
> To purchase or otherwise acquire real and personal property of every kind and description and wheresoever situated, including the stocks, bonds, and other evidences of indebtedness of any corporation, domestic or foreign, and to issue in payment or exchange therefor its stock, debentures, notes, bonds, or other obligations.
> To manage, improve, develop, lease, mortgage, pledge, hypothecate, deal in, sell, and dispose of all or any of the property, real or personal, at any time owned or controlled by the corporation.
> To apply for, obtain, register, purchase, lease or otherwise acquire, hold, own, use, operate, introduce, sell, assign or otherwise dispose of, any and all copyrights, trade marks, and patents, and any and all inventions used in connection with, or secured under, letters patent of the United States of America, or elsewhere, or otherwise, and to use, exercise, develop or grant licenses in respect of, or otherwise turn to account, any such copyright, trade marks, patents, inventions, improvements, apparatus, appliances, processes and the like, or any property or information so acquired.

To Act as Government Agent.

> To make and enter into contracts of all kinds with and to act as agent (other than fiscal) or representative for any individual, firm, association, private, public, quasi-public or municipal corporation, State, Government, or governmental authority; and to aid any lawful enterprise.
> To borrow money for its corporate purposes; to make, accept, indorse, execute, issue, and deliver bonds, debentures, notes, bills of exchange, or other obligations; to mortgage, pledge, and hypothecate any stocks, notes, bonds, or other evidences of indebtedness, and any other property held by it; and to lend money, with or without collateral security.
> To aid by loan, subsidy, guaranty, or in any other manner whatsoever, any corporation whose stocks, bonds, securities, or other obligations are in any manner, either directly or indirectly, held or guaranteed; to do any and all other acts or things toward the preservation, protection, improvement or enhancement in value of any such stocks, bonds, securities or other obligations, and to do all and any such acts or things designed to accomplish any such purpose.
> To carry on any business or operation deemed advantageous, which is incidental or accessory to any of the powers or purposes hereinbefore specified; to acquire, use, undertake, manage and dispose of contracts, properties and rights of all kinds, including the assets, franchises, business, good-will, and liabilities of corporations, associations, firms and individuals, and to give guarantees in respect thereto; and, generally to do anything that a natural person might lawfully do or cause to be done in connection with any of the said things.

Banking Business Barred.

> Nothing herein contained shall be construed as authorizing the business of banking, nor as including or authorizing the exercises of any business or powers of a moneyed corporation, or a corporation provided for by the banking, the insurance, or the railroad laws or of an educational institution or corporation which may be incorporated as provided in the education law, nor as authorizing the exercise within the State of New York or any of the business or powers of a corporation provided for by the transportation corporation law nor as authorizing, or intending to authorize, the performance at any time of any act or acts then unlawful.
> Third.—The amount of capital stock of the corporation is fifty million dollars ($50,000,000,) of which one million dollars ($1,000,000) is preferred stock (to be known as "managers' shares" and forty-nine million dollars ($49,000,000) is common stock.
> The preferred stock shall be entitled to receive out of the surplus profits dividends at the same rate as that paid on the common stock until the dividends aggregating seven per cent. (7%) shall have been paid or declared on both classes of stock during any one year.
> Thereafter, the preferred stock shall be entitled to receive one-fifth (1-5th,) of any further distribution of surplus during that year, and the common stock shall be entitled to receive four-fifths, (4-5ths,) thereof.
> Upon the liquidation of the corporation and the distribution of its assets, the preferred stock shall be entitled to receive an amount equal to the par value thereof, before any distribution shall be made to the common stock, which shall be entitled to receive out of the assets then remaining an amount equal to the par value thereof; after which, the preferred stock shall be entitled to receive one-fifth, (1-5th,) of the assets, if any, then remaining undisturbed, and the common stock shall be entitled to receive four-fifths, (4-5ths,) thereof.

Directors in Four Classes.

> Fourth—The number of shares of which the capital stock shall consist is five hundred thousand, (500,000,) of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100) each. The amount of capital with which the corporation will begin business is three thousand dollars, ($3,000.)
> Fifth—The principal office of the corporation is to be located in the Borough of Manhattan, City, County, and State of New York.
> Sixth—The duration of the corporation is to be perpetual.
> Seventh—The number of Directors of the corporation is to be twenty-four (24.) Directors need not be stockholders. As soon as practicable, the Directors shall divide themselves into four (4) classes, each of which classes shall consist of six (6) Directors. Each of the Directors of the first class shall hold his office for one (1) year, or until the next annual election; each of the Directors of the second class shall hold office for two (2) years, or until the second annual election; each of the Directors of the third class shall hold his office for three (3) years, or until the third annual election; and each of the Directors of the fourth class shall hold his office for four (4) years, or until the fourth annual election. At each annual election the successors to the class of Directors whose terms shall then expire shall be elected to hold office for the term of four (4) years, so that the term of office of one class of directors will expire in each year.

The eighth section contains the names and addresses of the Directors for the first year, which were published in THE TIMES yesterday.

The ninth section contains the names and addresses of the three incorporators, which were given in THE TIMES yesterday.

The tenth section contains "provisions for the regulation of the business, and for the conduct of the affairs of the corporation," which were outlined in THE TIMES yesterday.

BACK KENNECOTT WITH $65,000,000

Morgan-Guggenheim Syndicate to Take the Unabsorbed Securities in Big Merger.

TOTAL INVOLVED $89,000,000

Holders of $24,000,000 of Utah and Braden Mining Shares Have Agreed to an Exchange of Stock.

The syndicate formed by J. P. Morgan & Co. and the Guggenheim interests to underwrite the Kennecott Copper Corporation's plan of extension obligates itself to furnish $65,000,000 if the need should arise. The total of securities involved have a value of approximately $89,000,000 on the basis upon which plans for the exchange for Kennecott shares were figured. They include the Braden Copper Mines stock and bonds to be exchanged for Kennecott shares, the Utah Copper stock to be bought by the Kennecott Corporation from the Guggenheim Exploration Company and the $10,000,000 Kennecott convertible bonds to be bought in or exchanged for Kennecott shares.

The amount to be underwritten is reduced from $89,000,000 to $65,000,000 through the consent already obtained from important holders of Braden and Utah stock to take Kennecott stock instead of cash. Most of this $24,000,000 worth of securities is understood to be held by members of the Guggenheim family.

Under the plan for distributing the Chino, Ray Consolidated, and American Smelting and Refining shares to holders of Guggenheim Exploration stock in the dissolution plans of the last named company, each holder of a Guggenheim share will receive .1172 per cent. of a share of Chino, .1850 per cent. of a share of Ray Consolidated, and .0833 per cent. of a share of American Smelting and Refining.

The complete dissolution of the Guggenheim Company will occur as soon as legal requirements have been filled. There will remain in the treasury after the distribution of assets mentioned in a letter to stockholders Tuesday about $14,000,000 and the bulk of the shares of the Yukon Gold Company.

RALLY IN COTTON ON SHORT COVERING

First Notice Day for December Contracts Causes Active Demand by Bears.

NET GAIN 15 TO 20 POINTS

Southern Advices Report Less Pressure to Sell, and Late Quotations Are Slightly Higher.

Judging from the manner in which cotton prices advanced yesterday, the short interest is not confined entirely to the December position. Yesterday was the first notice day for December contracts, and it was estimated that about 25,000 bales were delivered on contracts. There was good demand for December at a discount of 18 to 20 points below January, and this option shot up sharply, making an advance of about 20 points from the low level of the morning and closing at a net gain of about 20 points. The other months advanced 15 to 17 points.

Liverpool rallied sharply, and British trade interests were said to have been good buyers of cotton over the South. Southern advices reported less pressure of cotton, and telegrams late in the day stated that quotations were fractionally higher.

There is a good deal of cotton bought by American mills on call, the price of which has not been fixed. This necessitates considerable covering of hedge sales. In other words, there is believed to be a pretty large trade short interest in the market.

Both New York and New Orleans will be closed today, but the Liverpool market will be open, as usual. The annual crop estimate of the Memphis Commercial Appeal is expected tomorrow, and the New Orleans Times-Picayune will issue its estimate Dec. 1.

Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged, 6 to 13 points advance. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 15 points advance. Middling, 11.85. Futures closed steady.

TO THE HOLDERS OF THE FOLLOWING SECURITIES OF

THE MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY:

Convertible Five Per Cent. First and Refunding Bonds,
Four Per Cent. Gold Loan Bonds,
Capital Stock, and
Securities of the Other Issues dealt with in the Plan of Readjustment

In order to preserve the Missouri Pacific System from the evils and losses incident to a prolonged receivership the Plan of Readjustment should be promptly consummated. The property does not require the extensive physical rehabilitation or the elimination of burdensome entanglements and contracts which are the usual causes of long railroad receiverships. What is required is (a) the cash (approximately $41,000,000) for immediate needs; (b) such reduction in fixed charges as will bring them within a proper margin of the demonstrated earning capacity of the property; and (c) the creation of a new security to deal with the obligations maturing during the next five years (approximately $79,000,000) in so far as they do not fall within the cash provisions of the Plan, and to provide for future corporate requirements.

Manifestly these results can be accomplished only by an early reorganization, and to this end the prompt co-operation of the holders of the various classes of securities affected by the readjustment is essential. They are accordingly urged for the protection of their own interests and in order to insure the early restoration of the property to the management of a solvent company to deposit their securities under the Plan of Readjustment as promptly as possible, and in any event on or before December 15th, when the time for deposit under the Plan expires, and after which it is intended to proceed actively to carry the Plan into effect.

There can be no doubt that radical changes in the financial structure of the Company as called for in the Plan of Readjustment are essential to secure the needed results. Although the anticipated improvement in business should result in better earnings than those of the last fiscal year, which failed to meet the interest charges by about $1,250,000, the margin between earnings and fixed charges which is absolutely essential for the restoration of the Company's credit cannot be assured without the reduction in interest payments sought to be accomplished by the conversion of the Convertible Five Per Cent. Bonds and the Four Per Cent. Gold Loan Bonds into preferred stock (or income bonds.) Under the Plan the stockholders provide the $41,000,000 of cash for immediate requirements without imposing any burden upon the holders of these bonds; for while the stockholders receive a four per cent. bond equal in face amount (but not in market value) to the Four Per Cent. Gold Loan Bonds in relation to earnings is not disturbed in any material degree because upon the consummation of the Plan the charges ahead of them upon the System taken as a whole are not augmented while the net earning capacity of the property should be substantially increased.

The attention of holders of the Missouri Pacific Four Per Cent. Gold Loan Bonds is called to the fact that default has been made in the payment of the interest on the Iron Mountain Company's First and Refunding Mortgage Six Per Cent. Bonds and that proceedings have been instituted to foreclose the mortgage by which those bonds are secured. Their attention is also called to the importance of preserving the traffic relations between the Iron Mountain and Missouri Pacific Companies.

Copies of the Plan of Readjustment and of an analytical statement relating thereto may be obtained from the Readjustment Managers, any of the Depositaries or Sub-Depositaries or the Secretary of any of the Committees.

The Certificates of Deposit for Convertible Five Per Cent. First and Refunding Bonds, for Four Per Cent. Gold Loan Bonds, for Trust Five Per Cent. Bonds due 1917, for First Collateral Mortgage Five Per Cent. Bonds due 1920, and for stock, have been listed upon the New York Stock Exchange.

About 40% of the Convertible Five Per Cent. Bonds and 40% of the Four Per Cent. Gold Loan Bonds have already been deposited under the Plan.

SEEK AN ACCOUNTING OF CROPSEY ESTATE

Heirs Try to Hold Dead Executor's Property for Alleged Default on His Trust.

SISTERS' LEGACIES NOT PAID

Old Farm on What Was Couwenhoven Lane, Now in Brooklyn, Involved in the Legal Tangle.

Justice Blackmar of the Supreme Court of Brooklyn has just heard argument in the suit of William H. Cropsey against William Wallace Cropsey, his nephew, for an accounting of the estate of the latter's father, Andrew G. Cropsey. Into the argument came interesting bits of the history of the Cropsey family, dating back to Colonial days, and a new legal problem.

This problem is whether property bought in his own name by an executor of an estate after he had taken charge of it and had collected assets, for which he had not accounted up to the time of his death, could be seized as part of that estate.

Louisa M. Cropsey died in 1903, leaving the old family homestead and farm on the old Couwenhoven Lane, now the neighborhood of Fifty-fifth Street and Thirteenth Avenue, Brooklyn, to her seven children with an additional bequest of $1,000 to each of her spinster daughters, Ella M. and Cecelia R. Cropsey. The sole executor of the estate was the decedent's eldest son, Andrew. He was a lawyer with offices at 271 Broadway, Manhattan, and was for many years an interesting figure about the courts. Ex-Judge Michael Gross was frequently associated with him in litigation.

Andrew died on Nov. 20, 1911, without ever having rendered an accounting of his mother's estate. It came out in the argument before Justice Blackmar that in 1907 the city condemned a portion of the Cropsey farm for the opening of Fifty-fifth Street, and made an award of $2,800 for the land taken. This money was paid to Andrew, who had also received money for rents. An accounting of his estate after his death disclosed the fact that he left only a small amount of property.

His son William, the defendant, as the executor of his father's estate, filed an intermediate accounting to this effect in the Surrogate's office of Rockland County. Shortly afterward objections to the accounting were filed by the heirs of Mrs. Louisa M. Cropsey and by the Nassau Bank. A farm in North Carolina owned by Andrew, and which he had bought after he became executor of his mother's estate, and subsequent to the award of $2,800, was sold for $4,800 in 1914. Out of this money the executor paid legal expenses amounting to more than $2,000.

In the argument before the court, William Law Stout, counsel for the plaintiff, said that Andrew G. Cropsey, in addition to having failed to pay his two sisters the cash legacies given them under the will of their mother and to render an accounting, had also failed in several other particulars in the proper performance of his work as executor.

One of the delinquencies charged against him by the plaintiff was his failure to pay off a mortgage on the estate that had been running since 1875. Mr. Stout said that Mrs. Cropsey had put another mortgage on the property and had given the money to Andrew to pay the old mortgage, and to pay also taxes, interest and other charges against the property. This old mortgage, Mr. Stout said, was not paid until 1907.

The defendant contended that the mortgage should be set off against the award of $2,800, but Mr. Stout replied that money to pay the mortgage had already been given to Andrew, and that he had not used it for that purpose. The court reserved decision.

WOOLEN MILLS ARE RUSHED.

Working on Orders Booked for Delivery Several Months Later.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 24.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"Although a smaller volume of sales was recorded this week than last, the wool market remains fully as firm as it has been for several weeks. Much wool has been taken up, and what is left will bring high prices.

"Woolen mills are busy on orders booked several months ahead. A feature of the market is the demand for scoured white wools, which are being used in black and white checks with logwood dye used for the black. Natural dark gray wools are also in demand for the same reason.

"In the woolen goods market there is much anxiety over the acute condition in overcoatings. Manufacturers have expected orders which will require deliveries until Dec. 25.

"The cotton goods market appears satisfactory. Indications are that prices will not decline much from their present levels. A large demand with advancing prices is more likely. Sellers of cotton goods are more optimistic than they have been for a number of years."

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

The volume of business in the wheat market was comparatively small and comprised principally of evening-up contracts for over the holiday. Sentiment was divided and after rather feverish fluctuations both ways the market closed barely steady, with net losses of ⅜c to ½c. In the local cash market No. 1 durum wheat was quoted at $1.11½, free on board, New York; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.08, and No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.09, cost, insurance, and freight, Buffalo.

OATS.

The oats market was inactive and without special feature, although prices were steadier in sympathy with corn, which offset fairly liberal receipts at primary points. The local cash market was steady; No. 3 white quoted at 42¼@42¾c; No. 4 white, 41@41¼c; ordinary to fancy clipped, 41@45¼c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

A firm tone prevailed in the market for hog products, owing to a better outside demand, which was prompted by a more active distribution and evidences of an improved export demand. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 42,000, estimated for Friday, 28,000; Kansas City received 6,500 and Omaha 4,500.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Pronounced strength in the market for crude oil, which was quoted at 52½@53¼c per gallon in the South, had a sustaining influence on the local market for cotton seed oil, and at the close of the day values were 5 to 11 points higher.

COFFEE.

Operations in the coffee market were again largely in connection with the December liquidation, and while sales for the day were 91,250 bags, they were comprised of a very large percentage of switches from December to the later months. A little foreign buying early in the day and a rather steadier tone to the Brazilian markets had a sustaining influence on values, and at the close of the day the market showed net gains of 2 to 5 points. The local spot market was inactive but steady, with Rio 7s quoted at 7¾c. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

Opening unchanged to an advance of 4 points. Futures maintained a rather firm tone during the day, owing to reports of strength in new crop Cubas and anxiety shown over the Cuban freight situation, where rates were high and bottoms scarce. BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 4,931 packages. Further delays in the delivery of stock and the market was very lightly supplied with choice and fancy grades of fresh creamery. The late advance was firmly maintained, but very few receivers felt disposed to force values any higher. The secondary grades are having quiet sale at very irregular prices. More doing in storage creamery, and the fanciest grades of Junes are selling a little higher. Renovated dull. Ladles and packing stock without further change; possibly the tone is a little steadier. EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 5,756 cases. New laid qualities continue extremely scarce and fully sustained in value. Fresh gathered goods showing a good to large proportion of such sell promptly; there are very few of this character. Most of the receipts are of mixed and irregular quality, and range widely in value, with a large part of the sales at from 28@35c. Storage eggs are somewhat irregular in tone; there seems to be enough stock offering at present quotations to supply the demand, but some holders are asking more money. Nearby eggs in light supply, but few are of uniformly new laid quality, and the mixed lots vary widely in value. Fresh gathered, extra fine, per dozen, 44@45c; extra firsts, 41@43c; firsts, 35@40c; seconds, 28@34c; thirds and poorer, 23@27c; dirties, No. 1, 22@23c; No. 2 and poorer, 17@21½c; checks, good to choice, dry, 20½@21c; culls and inferior, 16@20c; Fall, held, 22@39c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, 24@24½c; firsts, 23@23½c; seconds, 22@22¼c; thirds or poorer, 18@21½c; dirties, 18@21c; State, Penn., and nearby hennery whites, fine to fancy, 60@63c; ordinary to good, 40@58c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 38@60c; Western, gathered whites, 38@45c; State, Penn., and nearby hennery browns, 38@46c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 36@45c; nearby refrigerator whites, 25@28c.

NEW CAMBRIA DIRECTORS.

Pennsylvania Railroad and Frick Representatives Retired from Board.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—Changes in the Directorate of the Cambria Steel Company to conform with the recent transfer of the Pennsylvania Company's stockholdings to a syndicate headed by J. Leonard Replogle, were made at a meeting today of Cambria Steel Directors. Mr. Replogle and Arthur E. Newbold, representing the incoming interests, together with Herbert F. Black of Pittsburgh, were elected to the board to take the places of Theodore N. Ely, Samuel T. Modine, and Childs Frick.

Effingham B. Morris, who with Mr. Ely represented the Pennsylvania Railroad, maintained his connection as a Director of the company, although it is understood his tenure of office will be short. Mr. Morris, it was said, consented to stay on the board after considerable pressure had been brought urging him to reconsider his intention of resigning. He has been a Director of the company for the last fifteen years and his presence on the board is considered valuable.

With the elimination of the Pennsylvania Railroad as a directing factor in the Cambria came likewise the stepping down of Henry C. Frick, who was officially represented on the board by his son, Childs Frick. Mr. Frick has long been associated with Cambria, and until several months ago, when he disposed of his holdings, was regarded as the largest individual stockholder outside of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The election of Arthur E. Newbold, member of the firm of Drexel & Co., the Philadelphia branch of the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., is taken as evidence that Drexel & Co.'s participation in the Replogle syndicate is more than that of mere banking agents.

HEED IRON ORE MENACE.

Wilson and Roosevelt Interested in Baltimore Editor's Warning.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 24.—President Wilson and ex-President Roosevelt, in letters to Richard H. Edmonds, editor of The Manufacturers' Record, express deep interest in Mr. Edmonds's contention that national preparedness would face a menace in the existing iron and steel conditions. Mr. Edmonds points out that 86 per cent. of the entire iron output of the nation comes from the Lake Superior district and that the lake region furnishes about 90 per cent. of the pig iron of the country and nearly 95 per cent. of the steel. In the event of war he says about 2,500,000 tons imported annually from foreign countries might be shut off, and if the Soo Canal should be destroyed or captured or the lake district invaded, there would be a collapse in steel and iron. Without steel, he points out, armies and navies would be without value and railroads would be useless. Mr. Edmonds urges that new iron fields be put into operation immediately.

"I appreciate that editorial," says Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. Wilson also expressed approval, but asked that his letter be kept in confidence.

SEEKS AMERICAN BUSINESS.

National Bank of South Africa Establishes a Branch Here.

The increasing prominence of the United States as a centre of world finance has caused the National Bank of South Africa to open a branch in this city, with R. F. Saunders, formerly of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, as resident manager.

The National Bank of South Africa has almost 300 branches in all parts of Africa, also a London office and correspondents in all parts of the world. The institution is a consolidation of the National Bank of South Africa, Ltd., the National Bank of the Orange Free State, Ltd., and the Natal Bank, Ltd., all of which have been merged in the past five years.

Its resources are given as $16,537,000, with deposits exceeding $100,000,000. It is expected that the establishment of a branch in this country will greatly facilitate business with Africa.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Earl H. Browning, who for fifteen years was Vice President and Works Manager of the Browning Engineering Company, Cleveland, has severed this connection to become Vice President of the Machine Products Company of the same city. The Machine Products Company is a new organization formed to fill a large war order and eventually to build machine tools.

Milton Lichtenstein & Co., resident buyers, who are now at 170 Fifth Avenue, have engaged new quarters in the building at 38 West Thirty-third Street. They expect to locate there about Dec. 15.

Big Silk Season.

The brisk character of the business now being done by the silk manufacturers, together with the large volume of orders obtained for Spring delivery, assure the trade of one of the most successful seasons in its history. The manufacturer who is afraid to boost his prices to legitimate levels is only losing profits that he could easily secure. Rising costs is a sound argument in favor of higher prices for the finished product, and the popularity of silk as a fabric should back up the seller when he sees fit to institute advances. Crepe Georgette is having a very good run with every possibility of it continuing well over the Spring. Taffeta, however, still continues to be the fabric upon which most business is booked.

Exploiting Prosperous Centres.

A clothing manufacturer, who has just returned from a visit to various retail centres, states that the trip has been the most profitable he has ever taken from the standpoint of the information he picked up. He was not traveling for the purpose of taking orders, but just to get some pointers on conditions. "If other manufacturers," he said, "were to take similar trips, their eyes would be opened to the extent of our prosperity. We have become somewhat pessimistic in the clothing trade, due to the poor business for several years up to the present season. Now I am going to make things hum. Everything I think will interest the retailers in the cities I visited will be at once communicated to them. Novelties are wanted, new ideas of all kinds, as the retailers are bent on freshening up."

Colored Shoe Sales Growing.

The sale of colored shoes is growing larger every day, according to an authority on shoe matters. Dark tan calf, mocha and olive kid are the shades most in demand. Because of the run on these shoes, the supply of colored kid is said to be growing scarce, and manufacturers are trying to sell colored suede shoes instead. There is plenty of suede stock, from all accounts, and it is said to make up easier than kid. Many samples of high-cut button shoes are being offered to the trade with black bottoms and gray kid tops. The best selling pump for Spring to date is of plain circular cut, with a heart-shaped vamp, in dull and patent leather, black, bronze, mocha and white. White is selling in both calf and buckskin. A large immediate business is reported on overgaiters.

Goods Develop Streakiness.

There are many cases of streaked and shaded goods since the dye scarcity became acute. Most of the coloring stuffs used now are being diluted in order that supplies may be conserved, and the result is imperfect dyeing in many instances. It is a very fortunate circumstance, and dress goods selling agents themselves admit it, that the season has been so busy a one with the coat and suit manufacturers. If the demand made on the garment manufacturers was not so brisk, there would be a much larger number of rejections on the score of imperfect goods. Even when goods are as near perfect as they can be made, it is not hard for the garment manufacturer to find some excuse for returning what he does not want in a dull period. It is well at the present time, however, to overlook everything but the most glaring imperfections, as prices are constantly advanced.

Concerned About Drug Shipments.

Weekly Drug Markets will say today that, while there have been gains in prices of miscellaneous drugs and chemicals during the week, interest has centred in products from the Far East, Near East, Russia, and Italy, shipments of which to this country are apt to be interfered with seriously by various factors arising from the war. Interest in the products of Italy has been stimulated by reports that steamship service between that country and this may be wholly or partially cut off, as Italy may use her merchant vessels for auxiliary cruisers. Russian products have risen in price on greater demand here and abroad in anticipation of the closing of the port of Archangel for the Winter months. Turkey opium and drugs from the Mediterranean have advanced owing to the centring of hostilities around Greece.

They Are Learning a Lesson.

There are quite a few wholesalers in outlying sections of the country, and some nearer by, who will be inclined to believe manufacturers of knit goods now when the latter tell them that goods are scarce and that they ought to buy early and often. Because these jobbers doubted this assertion in the months just passed, the local market is now being treated to the spectacle of their coming to leading jobbers and endeavoring to buy goods. While in some instances they are being accommodated to a certain extent, the quantities of merchandise they are allowed to buy are generally below their requirements. This is especially true of underwear, but it also applies to sweaters and hosiery. One local jobber, for instance, is selling a line of women's silk hose at $1.25 a dozen, while the manufacturer who makes this line is now asking $1.42½ a dozen for the goods.

Silver Laces Are Good.

Metal and tinsel effects continue to be the favorites in the present call for laces, with the indications now pointing to silver ones as the leaders. Venises, filets, Orientals, and Chantillys are also sharing in the demand to more or less extent. Some of the late novelties show attractive uses of fur in the shape of very narrow strips or in a kind of polka dot effect. The narrower flouncings are doing well, it being said that anything in this line under twenty-seven inches is quite readily salable. From the embroidery trade come reports of better business as a result of foreign evidence of a turn of fashion toward embroideries for Spring garments, and as a result of the buying of some of the cutters who are now working on models for the coming season.

Pricemaking Very Uncertain.

Mill owners face a very difficult proposition in making their prices for the coming heavyweight season. It is almost impossible, under the present conditions, to predict just what the general advance will be, except that it will be in the neighborhood of 10 per cent. The puzzling nature of the question arises from two or three conditions. There has been a mad scrambling for raw material supplies of all kinds, and some mills have been fortunate or industrious enough to buy up sufficient to last them for some time into the future. As a result of this, the market may expect to see some startling "world beaters," as the exceptionally low-priced fabrics are called. If no further war business is placed here there will be idle mills, hungry for business, to have a depressing effect on prices. All told, pricemaking will be done on a watchful waiting basis.

The Gray Goods Market.

While there was little snap to trading in the local gray goods market yesterday, a fair quantity of printcloths was moved, some of them for delivery up to April 1. Limited sales of 39-inch 68-72s, for instance, were made for that shipment at 5⅛ cents, but it was not easy to get the goods out. Among the other printcloth business done were sales of 38½-inch 64-60s for November-December delivery at 4 7-16 cents, of 60-48s in that width for December shipment at 4 1-16 cents, and of 27-inch 64-60s for immediate delivery at 3⅛ cents. In sheetings more business was put through on 4-yard, 48 squares, for delivery during the remainder of the year, at 5¼ cents. Good bids were reported in the market for 40-inch, 3.75-yard sheetings at 5¾ cents for January-March delivery, and some for January-June. So far as could be learned the mills were firm in their demands for 6 cents, and little, if any, of this business was put through. Asking prices for printcloths were:

39-inch, 80-80s	6¼c	38-inch, 64-60s	4½c
39-inch, 72-76s	5⅝c	38½-inch, 64-56s	4⅜c
39-inch, 68-72s	5⅛c	38½-inch, 60-52s	4⅛c
39-inch, 56-44s	4c	38½-inch, 60-48s	4⅛c
38½-inch, 64-64s	4⅝c	27-inch, 64-60s	3⅛c

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Invoiced Prices of Lace from Nottingham Are Raised.

The effect of the war on the products of the Nottingham factories in the shape of higher costs for labor and materials was emphasized in reappraisement decisions made yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in several cases. The goods consisted of silk netting and cotton laces, all of which were held by Appraiser of the Port Sague to be undervalued.

They were shipped from England between June 30 and Aug. 25 last, but in most instances when they arrived here the importers added on entry to make what they deemed proper foreign market value since it was feared the invoiced values would not be accepted by the customs men. When the Appraiser's examiners looked the goods over in the Public Stores, they reported that the market prices entered on the fabrics by the handlers here were not high enough. The Appraiser accordingly put the goods on higher price levels in order to agree with official information in his possession. Collector Malone's exaction of higher duties resulted in appeals to the board.

It was decided that white silk Brussels netting, 72-inch goods, manufactured by Smith Bros. & Nelson, Nottingham, must stand duty on the basis of 25 pence per yard, against 21 pence, the entered price. Black Brussels silk netting, of the same dimension as the white goods, was held properly dutiable at 24 pence per yard, compared with 21 pence, the price put on the fabrics by the importers in making entry. Silk netting from Levor & Igstaedter, also of Nottingham, came in for advances. These goods were of the 72-inch white silk variety. Judge Howell held that the nets entered at 19¼ pence actually had a market value of 21¾ pence at the date of shipment, while other consignments of goods of the same class, entered at 20¼ pence, were advanced to 21¾ pence per yard.

Rather unusually stiff advances were imposed by Judge Cooper on white cotton laces from Charles Field of Nottingham. They were of different grades, all of which had been raised above invoiced values by the importers at the time of entry. The local Appraiser held that, notwithstanding the action of the importers to make market value, the goods were nevertheless decidedly undervalued. Just what rate was imposed in the Appraiser's office did not appear in the official papers, but Judge Cooper ruled that the fabrics were undervalued to the extent of 10 per cent. This advance, also automatically under the law, made the goods liable to penalties amounting to 10 per cent. the effect of the General Appraiser's decision being to tax the laces 20 per cent. above the entered prices.

The laces, described as lot 3,080, were entered at 3¾ pence per dozen yards; lot 3,081, at 4¼ pence; lot 3,082, at 3¾ pence; lot 2,835, at 6¼ pence; lot 2,834, at 7⅛ pence; lot 2,838, at 13¼ pence, and lot 2,915, at 19 pence. Various other laces were entered at prices ranging between the above low and high value levels. Appraising officials gave it as their belief that during the continuance of the war the cost of production of Nottingham laces will continue to rise with corresponding friction and difficulty in the appraisement of the fabrics.

Under previous tariffs phthalic acid was admitted free of duty under a specific provision. The present tariff, however, provides for a 15 per cent. duty on "all other acid anhydrides not specially provided for." Heller & Merz imported phthalic acid anhydride, which is used in dye making and is known commercially as phtalic acid. It was assessed for duty at 15 per cent., but the General Appraiser yesterday held it entitled to free duty.

SHORTBREAD AN ISSUE.

Learned Doctrine from the Appraisers on the Subject.

That customs cases may be decided upon bare samples, if classification can be determined by the application of general or common knowledge as distinguished from expert knowledge, was the conclusion reached yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in disposing of a protest by the G. & R. McMillan Company of Detroit. At the same time it was held that the question of the classification of a baked article known as "shortbread" did not present such a case.

The importations in question were invoiced as "Scotch," "petticoat tail," "finger," "tartan," "Ayrshire," and "assorted" shortbread. The Collector decided that the products fell under the general provision in the tariff for "baked articles containing chocolate, nuts, fruit, or confectionery of any kind," and took duty at 25 per cent. ad valorem. The importers' claim was for free entry as "bread not specially provided for." No testimony was taken, the case being submitted on an official sample introduced at the hearing.

Counsel for the Government suggested as an objection that the sample was not sufficient upon which to make a finding by the board. Judge Waite, however, said in reply that no hard and fast rule can be formulated, or has been formulated upon this point. The question to be determined in the case before the board yesterday was whether the articles contained confectionery in any form. Judge Waite asked how the problem was to be determined from the bare sample, but as nobody suggested that a committee of one be appointed to eat the sample the General Appraiser proceeded to discuss the classification in an academic fashion, as follows:

"Doubtless, if chocolate were present in large quantities, it might be detected. If nuts, fruit or confectionery were present in certain forms, that fact might be detected easily by the application of common knowledge. It must be admitted, however, that either one of these commodities might be used in the preparation of the articles before us and not be detected by the ordinary observer; in fact, might not be detected without the application of expert knowledge or scientific investigation. We are, therefore, of the opinion that the evidence in the case is not sufficient to warrant a finding contrary to the classification made by the Collector. The protest is overruled."

THE RUM WAS STOLEN.

But This Did Not Count as Breakage, Leakage, or Damage.

It was decided yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers that allowances cannot be made under the tariff provision for "breakage, leakage, or damage" in cases where packages have been robbed in transit. The C. F. A. Last Company of Los Angeles found after a delivery of rum that one of the casks had been tapped and pretty well emptied of its contents. The Collector, however, made no allowance in the amount of duty exacted, although a report filed by a Government gauger stated that the missing rum had apparently been extracted by a thief who plugged up the cask in a clumsy manner.

The firm then went before the board with the claim under the breakage provision. It appeared that the gauger's report was plain that the rum had been lost through robbery, and this led Judge Waite in his decision to remark that the board did not see how this report could satisfy the Collector that there had been a loss by breakage, leakage, or damage. While the decision conceded that the rum was undoubtedly stolen, it was held that the importer's remedy was not under the paragraph claimed, but as a nonimportation. Notwithstanding the gauger's return, the board held that the Last Company had not made out its case. It was regarded as probable that, should the importers amend their protest and claim nonimportation, the board might order an allowance made for the lost rum.

GET ORDERS FOR FOURSHIPS

Companies Along the Delaware Are Now Building 82 Vessels.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 24.—Contracts for the building of four more steamships valued at $8,000,000 have been placed with Delaware River shipbuilding companies, it was learned today. Two of the ships are for the Mexican Petroleum Company. The others are colliers for the Coastwise Transportation Company and the Pocahontas Navigation Company.

With these awards, contracts are now held by yards on the Delaware River for eighty-two ships, valued at approximately $58,000,000 and aggregating 383,079 tons. More than 20,000 men are engaged in ship-building along the Delaware.

Cotton Didn't Do It.

It is quite a source of satisfaction to sellers of staple gray goods in this market that the recent pretty good buying of this merchandise was not the result of a marked upturn in cotton. If anything, the buying took place while cotton was dropping off more or less slowly, which was taken to indicate that the converters and other buyers are in need of goods, and that any real improvement in the price of cotton will result in active buying and higher goods values. It is largely in this belief that prices on the various constructions are being sustained by the selling houses whose mills are not actually in need of buiness.

FIRE HAZARD COMMITTEE.

Civic Bodies Will Act to Safeguard Industrial Life.

Moved to action by the Williamsburg factory fire, representatives of various civic organizations in the city met at the Women's Trade Union League at 43 East Twenty-second Street yesterday and formed a permanent organization to be known as the Joint Committee on Industrial Fire Hazard, with offices in Masonic Hall at 46 West Twenty-fourth Street. This committee will keep in touch with conditions affecting life and fire hazards in industrial and mercantile establishments, and take action to improve these conditions.

The following organizations were represented: City Club, Citizens' Union, Consumers League of New York, Federation of Women's Clubs, Safety Committee, Fifth Avenue Association, Joint Board of Sanitary Control of the Cloak and Suit and Dress and Waist Industries, New York Child Labor Committee, Public Forum, Church of the Ascension Safety Committee of New York, and Women's Trade Union League.

A statement given out yesterday by the Consumers' League said:

"It is time for the public to resolve that the steady pressure of public opinion shall be sustained, and that when the next session of the Legislature meets, the officials appointed and confirmed as members of our industrial Commission shall be men and women who can and will prevent the recurrence of these hideous tragedies."

WASHINGTON LETTER $120.

He Wrote from Valley Forge About Exchange of Prisoners.

The sale of the eighth part of the late Adrian H. Joline's library at the Anderson Galleries ended yesterday. The total to date is $62,846.65.

George D. Smith paid $120 for a letter of George Washington, dated Valley Forge, May 30, 1778, and addressed to General Smallwood. It relates to the exchange of prisoners, the movements of troops, and the Tory element. It is not in Washington's handwriting, but is signed by him. Mr. Smith gave $154.50 for two other letters signed but not written by Washington. The signature of Oliver Wolcott, signer of the Declaration of Independence, on the fragment of postal address, and another signature on a small piece of paper, were knocked down to Thomas Bell for $101. A scrapbook of Princeton College, containing portraits of Presidents Dickinson, Aaron Burr, and Samuel Finley, and a number of autograph letters, also went to Mr. Bell for $79. He paid $43 for a long and closely written letter of Colonel Alexander Scammell dated Sept. 21, 1777, and addressed to his brother, Dr. Samuel Scammell, giving a very interesting account of the evacuation of Fort Ticonderoga and subsequent events.

George D. Smith paid $80 for a letter of General Zachary Taylor, dated Monterey, Mexico, Nov. 24, 1846, and addressed to Thomas W. Ringgold.

DEFINES POWERS OF RESERVE BOARD

Attorney General Gregory Holds It Has No Authority to Abolish Banks or Districts.

MAY ALTER BOUNDARIES

Congress Only, He Declares, Can Change the Location of Branch Institutions of New System.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The full opinion of Attorney General Gregory, rendered at the request of Secretary McAdoo and Governor Hamlin of the Federal Reserve Board, seconded by President Wilson, in regard to the power vested in the Federal Reserve Board to abolish any of the existing Federal Reserve Districts or Federal Reserve Banks, was made public today. The ground is taken that the board does not possess such power. This is in the face of a clause of the Federal Reserve banking act, which says that the districts created "may be readjusted and new districts created by the Federal Reserve Board not to exceed twelve in all."

The effect of the opinion is that the Federal Reserve Board is held not to have the power to remove the Federal Reserve Bank from the city in which it was originally placed by the Organization Committee of the reserve banking system to another city in the reserve district. The board may have the power, however, to change the boundaries of a district.

The Attorney General holds that Congress did not confer in express terms the power to abolish a reserve bank, and that the record of committee hearings and Congressional debates shows that there was no intent to confer such power. In the view of the Attorney General, not only does nothing in the reserve bank act contain an indication that such power was intended to be conferred, but there is evidence that Congress intended not to confer such power because of the language of Section 4 of the act, which guarantees to the reserve bank for a period of twenty years the right to exist subject only to the consequence of some violation of the law or the enactment by Congress of a law that should deprive it of its existence.

The opinion cites the changes made by the Reserve Board in northern New Jersey, and says they are valid, as the board clearly had the power to make them. The board, however, cannot remove the reserve bank, for instance, in the Fifth Reserve District from Richmond to Baltimore. Congress alone has the power to do that.

TEXT OF THE DECISION.

The text of the Attorney General's opinion is as follows:

Department of Justice,
Washington, Nov. 22, 1915.

Sir: I have your letter transmitting a request from the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board for my opinion as to the power of the board to abolish any of the existing Federal Reserve districts or Federal Reserve Banks. The Secretary of the Treasury, who is ex officio Chairman of the board, united with the Governor in making this request; and you ask that I comply with it.

The act creating the Federal Reserve system (38 Stat. 251, ch. 6) provided for an Organization Committee to be composed of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Controller of the Currency (Sec. 2.)

The act also established a permanent body known as the Federal Reserve Board (Sec. 10.)

A reading of the act shows at once that the Organization Committee was created not merely for the purpose of attending to the formalities of organization or to serve as a stop-gap until the Federal Reserve Board should come into existence, but that it had an independent function to perform, and to that end was invested with wide powers. That is to say, its function was to organize the system as contradistinguished from the function of the Federal Reserve Board, which was primarily to administer the system.

This being the general scheme, the act provided that the Organization Committee, as soon as practicable, * * * shall designate not less than eight nor more than twelve cities to be known as Federal Reserve cities, and shall divide the continental United States, excluding Alaska, into districts, each district to contain only one of such Federal Reserve cities (Sec. 2.)

It provided further that these districts * * * shall be apportioned with due regard to the convenience and customary course of business and shall not necessarily be coterminous with any State or States and shall be known as Federal Reserve districts and may be designated by number (Sec. 2.)

In order that it might have the information and advice essential to the discharge of this duty, the Organization Committee was authorized * * * to employ counsel and expert aid, to take testimony, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and to make such investigation as may be deemed necessary by the said committee in determining the reserve districts and in designating the cities within such districts where such Federal Reserve Banks shall be severally located (Sec. 2.) Upon the establishment of the Federal Reserve Districts by the Organization Committee certificate must be filed with the Controller of the Currency showing the geographical limits of such districts and the Federal Reserve city designated in each of such districts (Sec. 4.)

Having thus authorized the Organization Committee to designate Federal Reserve cities, and to create around each a Federal Reserve district, the act directed that * * * the said committee shall supervise the organization in each of the cities designated of a Federal Reserve Bank. (Sec. 2.)

How the Banks are Constituted.

The act then prescribes how these banks shall be constituted: Every national bank is required to subscribe to the capital stock of the Federal Reserve bank of its district in a sum equal to 6 per cent. of its paid-up capital stock and surplus, one-sixth payable on the call of the Organization Committee, or of the Federal Reserve Board, one-sixth within three months, and one-sixth within six months, the remainder subject to call by the Federal Reserve Board when deemed necessary. (Sec. 2.) State banks, declared eligible by the Organization Committee, while of course not required to subscribe, were authorized to do so. (Secs. 2, 4.)

If the subscriptions by banks to the stock of any Federal Reserve Bank in the judgment of the Organization Committee do not provide an adequate capital, the Organization Committee may offer the stock of such Federal Reserve Bank to public subscription; and if the total subscriptions by banks and the public fall short of supplying an adequate capital, the Organization Committee shall allot to the United States such an amount of the stock of the Federal Reserve Bank in question as the committee shall determine. Stock not held by banks has no voting power. (Sec. 2.)

No Federal Reserve bank is permitted to commence business with a subscribed capital of less than $4,000,000, (Section 2,) nor until authorized so to be by the Controller of the Currency, (Section 4.)

When the minimum amount of capital stock required for the organization of any Federal Reserve bank shall have been subscribed, the Organization Committee is directed to designate any five of the subscribing banks to complete the organization and to execute and file with the Controller of the Currency a certificate of organization, stating the name of such Federal Reserve bank, the city and State in which it is located, the territorial extent of the district in which its operations are to be carried on, the amount of its capital stock and the number of shares into which the same is divided, the name and place of business of each bank executing the certificate of organization and of each subscribing bank, and the number of shares subscribed by each, &c., (Section 4.)

Upon the filing of this certificate such Federal Reserve bank becomes a body corporate, with the powers which are enumerated, amongst them the power * * * to have succession for a period of twenty years from its organization unless it is sooner dissolved by an act of Congress or unless its franchise becomes forfeited for some violation of law, (Section 4.)

Acting under the authority of these provisions, the Organization Committee divided the country into twelve Federal Reserve districts and designated in each a Federal Reserve city. Boston was designated as the Federal Reserve City for District 1, New York for District 2, Philadelphia for District 3, Cleveland for District 4, Richmond for District 5, Atlanta for District 6, Chicago for District 7, St. Louis for District 8, Minneapolis for District 9, Kansas City for District 10, Dallas for District 11, San Francisco for District 12. A certificate to that effect was filed on April 2, 1914, in the office of the Controller of the Currency.

Organization of the Banks.

A Federal Reserve bank was duly organized at each of these cities. On May 18-20, 1914, all filed their certificates of organization and thereby became bodies corporate, with the rights and powers enumerated in Section 4 of the act. Their organization was officially announced by the Secretary of the Treasury, pursuant to the second paragraph of Section 19 of the act, and on Nov. 14, 1914, pursuant to Section 4 of the act, they were authorized by the Controller of the Currency to commence business.

They have been engaged in business for a little over a year. Their statement for the week ending Nov. 12, 1915, shows their capital, deposits, and total resources as follows:

Fed. Reserve Banf of	Capital.	Deposits.	Resources.
Boston	$5,171,000	$22,218,000	$28,615,000
New York	11,059,000	181,710,000	196,544,000

Cleveland	5,945,000	18,556,000	24,501,000
Richmond	3,352,000	*13,160,000	21,669,000
Atlanta	2,417,000	*11,268,000	16,629,000
Chicago	6,635,000	49,993,000	56,628,000
St. Louis	2,778,000	11,204,000	13,982,000
Minneap's	2,495,000	10,425,000	12,920,000
Kan. City	3,027,000	9,826,000	14,080,000
Dallas	2,753,000	*11,992,000	18,671,000
San Fran.	3,941,000	14,032,000	17,973,000
Total	$54,846,000	$374,317,000	$446,192,000

*Includes Government deposit of $5,000,000.

All of them have issued Federal Reserve notes of which at present time $160,000,000 in round figures are outstanding. One has purchased a site for its bank building and the others have leased quarters for long terms.

Discusses Board's Power.

The question is, Has the Federal Reserve Board the power to abolish any of the existing Federal reserve districts established by the Organization Committee as hereinabove described?

As there can be only one Federal reserve bank in a district, a district can not be abolished without abolishing a bank. Therefore, inseparably linked with the question first stated is the further question, Has the Federal Reserve Board the power to abolish a Federal reserve bank?

And since, concededly, the power to abolish a Federal reserve district or a Federal Reserve bank is not granted in express terms, the question finally becomes, Is it to be implied from other provisions of the act that Congress intended to confer that power?

The counsel of the board held not, in an opinion dated March 1, 1915. Subsequently, Mr. Joseph H. Cotton of New York was consulted and he reached the opposite conclusion in an opinion dated Nov. 19, 1915.

The Federal reserve banks are not banks in the ordinary sense. They are banks composed of banks. They touch the business life of the nation in its most sensitive spot. Of all the processes of business, theirs is perhaps the most delicate.

In determining whether Congress intended by implication to confer upon the Federal Reserve Board power to abolish one or more of these institutions, it is proper to consider that if the power exists at all it may be exercised not only now but at any time in the future. Certainly it was the expectation of Congress that the Federal Reserve Banks would extend their roots deep; that upon them, as a foundation, permanent banking arrangements better than any we have ever known would be constructed, and that they would become interwoven with the business fabric of the country.

If these expectations shall be realized, and in this discussion we must assume that they will be, the abolition of one or more of the Federal Reserve Districts, and consequently of one or more of the Federal Reserve Banks, whether for better or for worse, would profoundly affect the currents of trade and alter the whole face of business throughout vast sections of the country, to say nothing of the effect upon the investments of member banks and perhaps of the public, in the capital stocks of reserve banks.

It must be acknowledged that the power to do such a thing is, to borrow a phrase of the Supreme Court, "a power of supreme delicacy and importance," and I am of the opinion that the failure to confer such a power in express terms would be regarded by the courts as virtually conclusive that Congress did not intend it to be exercised except by itself.

Cites Commerce Board Decision.

A leading case in point is Interstate Commerce Commission vs. Railway Company 167 U. S. 479. There the question was whether the Interstate Commerce Commission, when it found a particular rate to be unreasonable, was given the power by the act to regulate commerce as originally enacted, to prescribe what should be a reasonable rate for the future. As in the present instance, the power in question was not expressly given, but the commission claimed that it had the power by necessary implication.

Briefly stated, its contention was that it was expressly charged with the enforcement and execution of the provisions of the act; that among other provisions was Section 1, which required all charges to be reasonable and just and prohibited every unjust and unreasonable charge; that in the nature of things it could not enforce this mandate of the law without a determination of what are reasonable and just charges, and finally, since no other tribunal was created to make that determination, it must be implied that the commission was authorized to do so (167 U. S. 500, 501.)

The court, overruling this contention, held that, as the act did not expressly grant the power, the commission did not possess it. Speaking through Mr. Justice Brewer, the court said:

"The question debated is whether it (Congress) vested in the commission the power and the duty to fix rates; and the fact that this is a debatable question and has been most strenuously and earnestly debated, is very persuasive that it did not. The grant of such a power is never to be implied" (494.)

Again, it refers to "the inference which irresistibly follows from the omission to grant in express terms to the commission this power of fixing rates." (506.) And again, the vice of this argument is that it is building up indirectly and by implication a power which is not in terms granted. (509.) Still again: "And if it (Congress) had intended to grant the power to establish rates it would have said so in unmistakable terms." (509.)

While this seems to me decisive of the matter, I will nevertheless examine the provisions of the act which is put forward as a ground for implying that Congress intended to confer upon the Federal Reserve Board the power in question. That provision, which is found in Section 2 immediately following the grant of power to the Organization Committee to designate Federal Reserve cities and to establish Federal Reserve districts, reads as follows:

"The determination of said Organization Committee shall not be subject to review except by the Federal Reserve Board when organized; provided, that the districts shall be apportioned with due regard to the convenience and customary course of business, and shall not necessarily be coterminous with any State or States. The districts thus created may be readjusted and new districts may from time to time be created by the Federal Reserve Board not to exceed twelve in all."

The merely negative statement that the determination of the Organization Committee "shall not be subject to review except by the Federal Reserve Board when organized," clearly cannot be enlarged into an affirmative grant of power to the board to review and set aside everything done by the Organization Committee.

What Congress Meant.

The reasonable view is that by that language Congress meant that the determination of the Organization Committee should not be subject to review at all, except insofar as the subsequent provisions specifically authorize a review by the Federal Reserve Board. The only subsequent provision authorizing a review of the determination of the Organization Committee of the Federal Reserve Board is contained in the sentence:

"The districts thus created may be readjusted and new districts may from time to time be created by the Federal Reserve Board, not to exceed twelve in all."

But the power to readjust districts does not necessarily carry with it the power to abolish districts and banks. On the contrary, it would be departing from the usual meaning of the language to give it that effect. In the affairs of business especially, the word "readjust" is associated with the idea of preservation rather than of destruction. When it is used in connection with any business or political entity, we instinctively think not of the destruction of that entity, but of its preservation in some other form. When it is used in connection with a geographical area, such as a district, we instinctively think of changes in boundary lines—not of the blotting out of everything. To illustrate, suppose the constitution had provided that Congress should have power to readjust the States taken into the Union Would it be contended that this included power to abolish States? I cannot think so. Likewise here, in my opinion, the power to readjust districts refers to change in boundary lines.

This conception of the power is exemplified in the changes heretofore made by the Federal Reserve Board in the boundaries of the districts as fixed by the Organization Committee. To cite one instance, Northern New Jersey was detached from the district of which Philadelphia is the centre and annexed to the district of which New York is the centre. But if what was meant by readjustment of districts were obscure instead of reasonably clear, there would still be no ground for implying the power to abolish districts, and consequently to abolish banks, from a power to readjust districts and to add new districts.

A power not expressly conferred can arise as an incident to the exercise of some other power only because essential to the exercise of that powr, or because included therein as a lesser power of like nature or effect. (The Floyd acceptance, 7 Wall., 666, 680; Branch v. Jessup, 106 U. S., 468, 478.)

No one would say that the power to abolish is a lesser power than the power to readjust. It only remains, then, to inquire whether the power to abolish districts and banks is essential to the exercise of the power to readjust districts. In other word, would the power to readjust districts, which is expressly conferred upon the board, be nullified or rendered impotent if the power to abolish districts and banks is withheld?

I have not heard that contention made, and do not see how it could be made. Obviously, the power conferred can fall short of the power of abolition and still have a wide and useful field of operation. From time to time much may be done to promote the convenience and efficiency of the system by readjusting the boundaries of districts, adding here and taking away there, without abolishing districts and without abolishing banks.

Finds No Implied Power.

The only grounds upon which a power may be implied are thus lacking here. Rather, the specification of the power to readjust districts and of the power to increase the number of districts carries with it the implication that Congress did not intend to grant the greater power to abolish districts. As the Supreme Court has said in similar circumstances: "If Congress had decided to grant such authority it would have been easy to say so in express terms. (Tillson v. United States, 100 U. S., 43-46.)"

Again, it does not seem reasonable to suppose that Congress would have authorized the Organization Committee to establish these very elaborate banking units if another body to be organized only a few months later was to have the power not only to make readjustments among them, but to abolish altogether a substantial number of them.

Finally, the power of readjusting districts and of creating new districts conferred by this provision upon the Federal Reserve Board is subject to two limitations only: (1) There must be "due regard to the convenience and customary course of business," and (2) the number of districts cannot exceed twelve. (Section 2.)

If, therefore, the power to readjust districts includes the power to abolish districts, I see nothing to prevent the board from abolishing districts and banks until the number is reduced not only to eight, but to six, four, or even one, if the judgment of the board, with due regard to the convenience and "customary course of business," dictates that policy. Assuredly, Congress intended no such result.

But not only does this provision afford no sufficient basis for implying that Congress intended to grant the power in question—there is another provision in the act which shows affirmatively, I think, that it did not intend to grant that power.

Section 4 provides that "upon the filing of such certificate with the Controller of the Currency as aforesaid, the said Federal Reserve Bank shall become a body corporate and as such, and in the name designated in such organization certificate, shall have power * * * to have succession for a period of twenty years from its organization, unless it is sooner dissolved by an act of Congress, or unless its franchise becomes forfeited by some violation of the law."

Here is an assurance by Congress that a Federal Reserve Bank, organized under the provisions of this act, shall have the right to exist for a period of twenty years, except in two specific contingencies, i. e., unless it shall forfeit the right by a violation of law, or unless Congress itself shall shorten the period.

Relied on Nation's Good Faith.

The Federal Reserve Banks were organized, their capital subscribed, and large obligations undertaken by them on the faith of that express assurance and in the expectation of enjoying that right.

Manifestly, to imply a power in the Federal Reserve Board to abolish Federal Reserve Banks at will would directly conflict with the rights and powers expressly conferred upon these banks by this section. A power thus expressly conferred cannot be destroyed or seriously impaired by implying a conflicting power—at least not unless the grounds for the implication are irresistible, which as we have seen, is not the case here. (Texas & Pacific Ry. Co. v. Abilene Cotton Oil Co., 204 U. S. 426, 440, 441, 446; Wilder Mfg. Co. v. Corn Products Co., 236 U. S. 165, 174, 175.)

Finally, it remains to be observed that the reports of the committees which considered this act and the debates attending its passage, while discussing fully many different powers conferred or proposed to be conferred upon the Federal Reserve Board, contain no mention of the power here in question. This is very significant. It shows, I think, an entire absence on the part of Congress of any thought of conferring such a power. For, considering the far-reaching consequence of the power, it is not easy to believe that if the granting of it had been under consideration at all, the fact would not have been mentioned by some one in the course of the thorough and exhaustive discussion which the subject underwent in Congress.

I sum up my conclusion as follows:

First—Concededly the power to abolish Federal Reserve districts and Federal Reserve Banks is not conferred upon the Federal Reserve Board in express terms.

Second—It is a rule of statutory construction that the failure to grant in express terms a power of such great consequence raises a convincing presumption that Congress did not intend to grant it.

Third—Putting out of view that presumption, there is no provision in the act from which an intention to confer this power can fairly be implied, but on the contrary there is a provision which shows affirmatively that Congress did not intend to confer it.

Fourth—The absence of any mention of such a power in the reports of committees and the debates dealing with the legislation shows that the thought of conferring it was not in the mind of Congress. I am of the opinion, therefore, that the board does not possess the power in question. Very respectfully,

T. W. GREGORY,
Attorney General.

The President,
The White House.

TO GET FEDERAL DEPOSITS.

McAdoo Makes Reserve Banks Government's Fiscal Agents.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—With the opening of the second year of the new Reserve banking system a step of great importance in strengthening the Reserve Banks is to be taken by the transfer of Government deposits to these banks. They will all be made Government depositaries and fiscal agents. The proposed change will take place on Jan. 1 next.

As a beginning the Secretary of the Treasury will transfer to the respective Federal Reserve Banks the funds of the Government now on deposit with the national banks in each of the cities where a Reserve Bank is situated. This will mean a transfer of about $7,000,000. The Secretary today sent a letter to the Federal Reserve Board outlining his ideas on the proposed change in which he said:

"In accordance with the provisions of Section 15 of the Federal Reserve act, which provides that:

"'The moneys held in the general fund of the Treasury * * * may, upon the decision of the Secretary of the Treasury, be deposited in Federal Reserve Banks, which banks, when required by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall act as fiscal agents of the United States.' * * * I have determined to appoint the Federal Reserve Banks depositaries and fiscal agents in the manner thus indicated by the act. In order that the Reserve Banks may not be embarrassed by the addition of an unduly large volume of business upon undertaking their functions in this connection I have decided to make a beginning by transferring to each of the Federal Reserve Banks the funds of the Government now on deposit with the national banks in each of the cities in which a bank is located, thus giving to each of the Reserve Banks the funds held by the national banks in its own city. Each Federal Reserve Bank will be required to perform on behalf of the Government the services which are now rendered by the national bank depositaries located in said cities, as well as any other services incident to or growing out of the duties and responsibilities of fiscal agents.

"May I ask you to co-operate in carrying out the provisions of the Federal Reserve act in this regard and to take any and all steps that may be desirable to perfect such arrangements by the Federal Reserve Banks as will enable them to fully and satisfactorily perform these functions from and after Jan. 1, 1916, the date on which it is my purpose to make the proposed arrangements effective?

"I have designated the Hon. William P. Malburn, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in charge of the fiscal bureaus, to act for the Treasury Department in carrying out the details so far as this department is concerned. I have deferred action until this time in order that the organization of the Federal Reserve Banks might be changed and gotten into good order through experience and practice, and with the hope that a satisfactory clearing and collection system would, by this time, have been evolved. I feel convinced, however, that I should not longer delay giving these banks the opportunity of performing these services for the Government and enlarging their field of usefulness."

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Upper Broadway Apartment in $235,000 Investment Deal—Fifth Avenue Purchase Near Ninety-eighth Street—Twenty-ninth Street House in Jersey Farm Trade.

Several scattering sales and good leases in various parts of the city contributed to a fairly active day in the realty world yesterday. Upper Fifth Avenue, near Ninety-eighth Street, furnished an interesting sale, and in the upper Washington Heights section a large apartment house was purchased for investment. This was the six-story building on the northeast corner of Broadway and 162d Street, 99.11 on Broadway by 100 on the street, which was sold by the Halcyon Realty Company. The buyer was S. L. Pakas. The property was held at $235,000. It is assessed at $212,000. The building was completed about three years ago, and was recently taken over by the sellers from the New York Real Estate Security Company. Last week the Halcyon Company bought five apartment houses, formerly owned by the Security Company, on the upper west side.

Upper Fifth Avenue Sale.

An upper Fifth Avenue deal has just been made in the purchase by James Byrne of a plot, 50 by 100, being fifty feet north of the Ninety-eighth Street corner. The property was bought from Arthur M. Mitchell, who has owned it since 1878. Mr. Byrne is of the law firm of Byrne & Cutcheon. His purchase adjoins a plot of five lots at the southeast corner of Ninety-ninth Street, purchased last April by Robert S. Clarkson. On the block to the north, Mount Sinai Hospital is erecting a group of buildings as an addition to the main hospital. Several sales of residence plots in the blocks immediately south have been made lately, and among the new houses are two on the north side of Ninety-fifth Street, nearing completion, one for Mrs. Amory S. Carhart.

Twenty-ninth Street House in Trade.

The old four-story dwelling at 4 West Twenty-ninth Street, on plot 22.6 by 98.9, has been sold by Charles B. Van Valen and James V. Graham for James H. Cruikshank, who took in exchange a plot of forty acres between Ridgewood and Westwood, N. J. The building will be altered for business purposes.

Protection Purchase in 69th Street.

Arthur Curtiss James has taken title to the dwelling at 52 East Sixty-ninth Street, and it was learned that he was the buyer of the adjoining residence at 50, sold recently by the Atlantic National Bank, which bought it in last July at foreclosure sale for $54,700. The sale of both of these to Mr. James was made through the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company. Mr. James has owned the house at 56 for several years. The houses are opposite the large residence being built by Mr. James on the northwest corner of Park Avenue and Sixty-ninth Street, and have evidently been acquired to prevent an undesirable improvement opposite his new home.

Deal on Grand Street.

William Lustgarten & Co., Inc., purchased from Howard Townsend, as executor of the Maria A. Campbell estate, 559, 561, and 563 Grand Street, a five-story tenement on a plot 56 by 67 by irregular. The premises have been in possession of the sellers for about seventy years. W. Cruikshanks Sons are the brokers.

Cash Sale in West Harlem.

Samuel Steinmetz has sold to Frederick Brown for cash 538 and 540 West 124th Street, a six-story apartment house on a plot 50 by 100 feet, located 175 feet east of Broadway. The property is assessed by the city for taxation purposes at $76,000.

Bronx Sales.

E. Lowenthal & Son sold 681 East 170th Street, a two-family house on a lot 30 by irregular, running through to Lafayette Street, for Eugene B. Hammond to Mary McGrath.

P. S. Treacy sold the triangular-shaped plot 93.5 by 72 by 59, on the west side of Crescent Avenue, about fifty feet south of Hughes Avenue, and directly opposite Adams Place, to a builder.

An investor has purchased for cash from the Benenson Realty Company the five-story flat on the west side of Decatur Avenue, 192 feet south of 195th Street. H. H. Cohen negotiated the sale.

$100,000 Bronx Trade.

Richard H. Scobie has resold to a client for cash, 916 Kelly Street, the four-story, eight-family house on plot 87.6 by 120 feet.

This house was given in part payment to Eberhardt & Podgur for the five-story, twenty-five-family house built on plot 50 by 130 feet, known as 2,382 Valentine Avenue, 150 feet south of Fordham Road, and recently completed. The transaction involved $100,000. Richard H. Scobie was the broker in both transactions.

Brooklyn.

Frank A. Seaver & Co. have sold eight lots on the southeast corner of Sixth Avenue and Eightieth Street for the Moore Estate to an investor.

Meiser Builders, Inc., have sold 1,141 Seventy-fifth Street, a two and a half-story, hollow tile and stucco, one-family dwelling, to a client for immediate occupancy.

Walter S. Ross has sold for Minnie C. French to S. J. Polstien eight lots on the north side of Eighty-second Street, 240 feet west of Fourth Avenue.

A. H. Mathews leased 128 Chambers Street to Arthur T. Boddington Company.

The Sinmocros Realty Company has sold for Guy Bartlett three lots on the north side of Sixty-eighth Street, 273 feet east of Fifth Avenue, to a builder, who will improve the plot with small apartments.

Long Island.

The Busch estate, consisting of about eight acres of land and a large brick and stone dwelling, at Elm Point, Great Neck, has been purchased for occupancy by Henri Bendel of Manhattan. It has been held at about $150,000.

G. Taus & Son have sold for the estate of Louis Wolf their Arverne residence at South Wave Crest Avenue, on a plot 75 feet by 82 feet, to Martha Rosenberg for occupancy.

Westchester County.

The River View Building Company has sold the one-family cottage now under course of construction at 36 Gilbert Place, North Yonkers, to Charles E. Williams.

Commercial Leases.

The Cross & Brown Company has rented, to be used as a garage, for the estate of Charles F. Hoffman, Inc., the four upper floors and a portion of the ground floor in the building at the northeast corner of Fifty-second Street and Broadway, including about 60,000 square feet. The tenant is the Mitchell-White Company, Inc., who was represented by Frederick Southack and Alwyn Ball, Jr. The lease is for a long term, from May 1, 1916, when the American Locomotive Company's lease will expire.

The E. Tanenbaum Realty Corporation has leased, in conjunction with Roy Scherick, the store and basement in the Joseph Building, at 3 West Thirtieth Street to J. Morris Rosner and Adolph Stern as a restaurant for a long term of years.

Edward J. Hogan has leased to the Taft Peirce Manufacturing Company the entire forty-fifth floor in the Woolworth Building.

The Globe-Wernicke Company has leased through the Charles F. Noyes Company from Burton Thompson & Co., agents for the Standard Arcade, the southerly portion of the ground floor on New Street. The premises leased include three stores, containing about 4,000 feet of available space. The lease is for a long term of years, at an aggregate rental close to $100,000.

Cozzen & Pierson have leased for Cassidy's Limited, to M. Rowan, the store and basement at 26 West Thirty-third Street, and the store 12 and 14 West Thirty-second Street, for the Story & Clark Piano Company, to Thomas Sullivan & Co., wholesale milliners.

Private Dwellings Leased.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co. have leased 165 East Seventy-first Street, a four-story, high stoop dwelling on a lot 16.8 by 102, for Mrs. Lindsley Tappin to Warren S. Crane, also, 66 East Ninety-first Street, a five-story American basement house on a lot 20 by 100, for William H. Hyde, to Edward H. Delafield.

Pease & Elliman have rented, for Bayard Tuckerman, to Colonel F. N. Lawrence, the four-story house at 118 East Thirty-seventh Street.

Realty Notes.

August Belmont transferred yesterday to the newly organized 44 East Thirty-fourth Street Company, his former residence at that number and the adjoining residence at 46, formerly occupied by August Belmont, Jr. The property runs through to Thirty-third Street, where the Belmont stable is located.

The New York Title Insurance Company has made a loan of $250,000 on the southwest corner of 141st Street and Convent Avenue for a ten-story apartment house.

World—"Probably the most brilliant, original and distinguished group of French modes ever sent to this country."

Herald—"A magnificence seldom seen."

Press—"It is more gorgeous than any of its predecessors."

Evening World—"This Fashion Fete would make the Queen of Sheba gasp."

Sun—"Gorgeous, indeed glittering, are the gowns, hats, furs and jewels."

A charity entertainment, showing one hundred remarkable dresses, coats, furs and negligees, all of them designed and created especially for this occasion—and never before seen in Europe or America—by the following renowned Parisian fashion creators:

CALLOT JENNY POIRET
CHERUIT LANVIN PREMET
DOUCET PAQUIN WORTH

The Master Couturiers of Paris are responsible for sending this collection to America. This is the first time that an exhibition has been arranged by the great Couturiers themselves.

The several Tiaras, Necklaces and Parures which are shown at the Fete have been loaned by the house of Cartier.

All Performances will be held

In the Ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Tickets, $3. For sale at the Ritz-Carlton.
